this life. And whereas the said [two trustees] have both departed this life; and there being no power in the said indenture of settlement, for the appointment of new trustees in their place, a suit hath been instituted by the said [grantor] in the high Court of Chancery, for the purpose of having trustees appointed, of the aforesaid settled property by the said Court, in the room of the said [two trustees]: And the sums of [1,200] pounds, three per centum consolidated bank annuities, and [1,000] pounds, three per centum reduced bank annuities, (being one equal half part of the hereinbefore mentioned sums of [2,400] pounds, three per centum consolidated bank annuities, and [2,000] pounds, three per centum reduced bank annuities) have under the direction of the said Court of Chancery been transferred into the name of the Accountant General of the same Court. And whereas no appointment hath hitherto been made by the said [grantor], of or concerning her aforesaid moiety, of and in the said messuages, tenements, lands, and hereditaments comprized in the said indenture of settlement, and thereby conveyed and settled as aforesaid, or any part thereof; or of or concerning the said stocks, funds, and monies, by the same indenture of settlement assigned and settled as aforesaid, or any part thereof respectively, or of or concerning the dividends, interest, or annual proceeds of the same stocks, funds, and monies, or of any part of such dividends, interest, or annual proceeds. And whereas the said [grantee], hath contracted and agreed with the said [grantor], for the absolute purchase of an annuity or yearly rent charge of pounds, for and during (c) the term of the natural life of her the said [grantor], at or for the price or sum of hundred pounds: And it was upon the treaty for such purchase agreed between the said and grantor's husband.

and that free from incumbrances. Dr. Johnson, in his Dictionary, has extracted a passage from the Whole Duty of Man, in which the word is used in the same sense: "We must direct our prayers to right ends; and that either in respect of the prayer itself, or the things we pray for." It has, however, been thought that the word has crept into the common form of covenants through inadvertence, Sug. Ven. 489, 5th ed. [573, 7th ed.] and is now generally omitted. The ancient, and, as it seems, the correct form of this covenant was, "And that the said messuages, &c. now are, and henceforth for ever hereafter shall remain, continue, and be unto the said A. B. his heirs and assigns, free and clear," &c. See 1 Bridgman's Conveyancer, 236, &c. 5th ed. Conveyancer's Light, 419, &c. 5th ed. And in other instances the form was the same as that now generally used; "And free and clear, &c." See 1 Bridg. 230, 238, 258, &c. The first books of Precedents in which the word that is used in the same manner as in the above precedent, are Horseman's Conveyancing, and Lilly's Conveyancer: see 2 Horsm. 267, &c. ed. 1744. the day of , and the day of in every year, by even and equal portions, the first payment thereof to begin and be made on the day of next ensuing the date hereof: together with a proportional part of the same annuity or yearly sum of pounds, for the time which shall elapse between the day of payment which shall next immediately precede the day of the death of the longest liver of them the said [two nominees], up to and inclusive of the day of his or her decease; such proportional part to be paid immediately after the decease of such longest liver; and the said annuity or yearly sum of pounds to be paid and payable without any deduction or abatement thereout for or on any account whatsoever (c). AND THE SAID [grantor], for himself, his heirs, executors, and administrators, doth hereby covenant and agree with the said [grantee], his executors, administrators, and assigns, that he the said [grantor], his heirs, executors, and administrators, shall and will well and truly pay, or cause to be paid, unto the said [grantee], his executors, administrators, and assigns, for and during the natural lives of the said [nominee] and [other nominee], and during the life of the longest liver of them, the said annuity or yearly sum of pounds, on the Covenant to pay annuity for the lives of two nominees, and the life of the survivor of them.

(c) The above deed was drawn by an eminent conveyancer who died a few years since. It is observable, that there is no habendum of the annuity, although it is usual in most modern grants of annuities or rent charges to insert an habendum; ut ante, Vol. I. 633. 646; and 2 Sand. Uses, 104, 2d ed. 376, 1st ed.; [103, 4th ed.] but it is a formal, and not a necessary part of the deed. See the form of such a grant without an habendum, West's Symboleography, Part I. sect. 320, ed. 1605. 2 Horsman's Conveyancing, 14, ed. 1744. When an habendum was used in ancient deeds, the term for which the annuity was granted was not mentioned in the premises of the grant. Vide West's Symb. Part I. sect. 298, &c. and "A grant of an annuity, penned by Mr. Edmund Plowden," Conveyancer's Light, or Compleat Clerk, page 1, and the other succeeding Forms. 1 Sir Orlando Bridgman's Conveyances, 77. 244, &c. 5th ed. 1 Modern Conveyancer, 4, &c. 3d ed. 2 Scrivener's Guide, 537, &c. 5th ed. 1 Jacob's Accomplished Conveyancer, 264, &c. GRANT AND ASSIGNMENT OF LEASEHOLDS TO TRUSTEES FOR SALE, MORTGAGE, &c.

For an estate or interest once absolutely vested cannot be devested by merely cancelling the deed creating it; Leech v. Leech, 2 Chan. Rep. 100; whether the conveyance took effect by livery of seisin, or by lease and release; Gilb. Evidence, 95, 6th ed. 107, 4th ed. or whether the estate lie in livery, or in grant; Bolton v. The Bishop of Carlisle; 2 Hen. Blacks. 263, 264; or be a settlement of money; Hudson's case, cited Prec. Chan. 235: nor can a lease for years be surrendered by cancelling the indenture; Mugennis v. Macculloch, Gilb. Eq. Cas. 235. Roe dem. Earl of Berkeley v. Abp. of York, 6 East, 100: [See also Vol. IV, 416.] nor consequently can a lease for years assigned be revested in the assignor by cancelling the assignment. For these purposes the freehold estate should be conveyed, the benefit of the settlement should be released, the lease for years should be surrendered, and the leasehold estate should be assigned. [An annuity created by deed cannot be discharged by parol, 1 M'Clel. and Yo. 494].

An estate cannot be devested by cancelling the deed creating it.

Although a bond, Peeres v. Bishop, Dyer, 112. a, or the covenants, &c. in a deed, may become void by an intentional cancellation of the instrument by the person entitled to the benefit of it, yet it is always adviseable for him to give a release, or to sign an indorsement on the bond or deed, either acknowledging satisfaction, or that the bond or deed was cancelled by him.

A bond or deed of covenants may become void by intentional cancellation.

The above observations as to cancellation, must be distinguished from the case of a term for years, created with a proviso, that when the purposes for which it was granted are satisfied, the term shall cease; for in the latter case, on the happening of the event appointed for its determination, the term ceases, and the right of the immediate reversioner

A term for years may cease, under a proviso made at the time of its creation; but an estate of freehold cannot under a common law conveyance.

* As the trustees only become liable to the rent and covenants as assignees, post, 52, and as the grantor, ante, 39, covenants to indemnify them therefrom, it need not be mentioned here, that the re-assignment shall contain such a provision.

AND it is hereby declared, that in case the said [trustees], or either of them, or any trustee or trustees to be appointed by virtue of this provision, should die, or decline to act in the trusts hereby created, then a new trustee or trustees may be appointed by the trustee or trustees so declining to act, or by the executors or administrators of the trustee so dying; and in every such case the said messuages or tenements and premises, or such of them as may not be sold by virtue of these presents, shall be assigned and conveyed, so as to be vested in such new and such surviving or continuing trustees, or in such new trustees only, as the case may happen, upon the same trusts and with the same powers as are hereinbefore mentioned and declared concerning the same. AND it is further declared, that the said [trustees], and the trustees or trustee for the time being of the said trust premises, shall not be answerable one for another, and by no means for any involuntary loss; and that they shall be allowed, and may retain to, and reimburse themselves, out of the money to arise from any such sale or mortgage to be made by virtue of these presents, all their costs, charges, damages, and expenses, occasioned by the due execution of the trusts hereby in them reposed. LASTLY, THE SAID [mortgagee], for himself, his heirs, executors, and administrators, doth covenant and declare with and to the said [trustees], their executors, administrators, and assigns, by these presents, that he the said [mortgagee] hath not at any time heretofore, made, done, or committed, or knowingly or willingly permitted or suffered to be done, or been party or privy to the doing of any act, deed, matter, or thing whatsoever, whereby or by reason or means whereof the said messuages or tenements and premises hereby assigned, or intended so to be, or any of them, or any part or parts thereof, or the said term of years therein, are, is, can, shall, or may be assigned, surrendered, forfeited, charged, affected, or incumbered in title, estate, or otherwise howsoever. Parties.

Recital of lease for years.

(a) Sometimes an error in the recital of the date of the deed is material, and may affect the validity of the title; for instance, a lease bearing date the 1st of March, is recited as bearing date the 2d of

Effect of mistake in recital of date of lease assigned.

GRANT OF TWO ANNUITIES TO DIFFERENT PERSONS; ASSIGNMENT OF LEASEHOLDS TO TRUSTEE FOR SALE, MORTGAGE, &c.

March, and then there is an assignment of all the lands which were demised by the hereinbefore in part recited indenture of lease. Now as there is not any such indenture of lease, there is, in point of law, no valid assignment; for, as the date in the recital is the essential part of the descriptive terms used in the assignment, the assignment itself fails of effect.

Mode of avoiding consequences of mistake in recital of dates.

To avoid such and the like mistakes, the modern and correct practice of preparing the recital of deeds, as bearing date on or about, &c. should be more generally observed, so that the date may not be conclusively material; and as a consequence, the error may not vitiate the assignment. [To many recitals of deeds, however, which are not thus referred to in the subsequent part of the deed, this objection cannot apply; and in these the words "on or about" are unnecessary. Ed.]

The liberality of the courts of law would probably reject erroneous date, and support assignment.

The books seem agreed, that an assignment made with reference to an erroneous and positive recital would be void; yet, it is likely that judges of modern times would, from the other certainties, if any, of the lease, to be collected from the names of the parties, the parcels, &c. reject the erroneous date, and support the assignment. It would not, however, be safe to rely on the liberality of the courts to interpose against rules of law established by decided cases, and founded on those principles which require that every contract should be proved by the contents of the deed which contains the evidence of the transaction; and an assignment of a lease, assumed to be dated the 1st day of April, cannot be predicated of, or pleaded or given in evidence as an assignment of a lease, dated the 2d April. Equity may on those occasions of sale for a valuable consideration, &c. which gives jurisdiction to that court, correct the mistake; while a court of law must take it for granted, that there is another lease of the date which is recited.

Courts of equity would, when there is a valuable consideration, correct mistake.

When the recital is correct, a subsequent error in referring to the date will not vitiate the deed.

Various distinctions occur on points of this sort. When the recital is correct, or an inaccuracy in the date, &c. is rendered immaterial, then a subsequent error in referring to the date will not vitiate the deeds; for instance, if the lease be recited as bearing date on or about the 2d day of March, and then the assignment is made by words to this effect: "All those messuages, &c. which were assigned by the said indenture, bearing date on or about the 4th day of March;"—this error would be immaterial. In the first place, the courts may reject, as surplusage, the words 'on or about the 4th day of March;' retaining the words, 'the said indenture;' and even though the 2d day of March were not the true date, yet the words, on or about, in the recital, would relieve the case from the difficulty with which it would otherwise be attended, by the admission of the actual lease in evidence; for the actual lease will not be at variance with the recital of the date, since the recital has guarded against the error, or materiality of the recital of the date. 1 Pres. Assignment from grantor to trustee.

Underlease generally preferable to assignment, because assignee becomes liable to rent and covenants, although he never takes possession.

(a) If it were not desirable that the trustee for sale, &c. should have the whole term, in order to create a privity of estate with the lessor, whereby the trustee would be enabled to convey to a purchaser the benefit of renewal,—an underlease, leaving a reversion of a day or so in the grantor, would be preferable: for, by accepting an assignment of the whole term, the trustee, so long as the property is vested in him, 1 Selw. N. P. 486, 5th ed. becomes liable to the payment of the rent reserved in the lease, and to the performance of the covenants, which are not confined to be performed by the covenantor himself, but which run with the land, quia transit terra cum onere, 3 Wooddeson's Vinerian Lectures, 87, 464, 472; Williams's n. 1 Saund. 241, (6), although he never takes possession of the premises, or exercises any act of ownership: Walker v. Reeves, 2 Dougl. 462. in note, 3d ed. Sparkes v. Smith, 2 Vern. 275. Pilkington v. Shallow, 2 Vern. 374: because the assignee, Cook v. Harris, 1 Ld. The reservation of rent to the assignor, with a power of re-entry on non-payment, or different covenants in the assignment from those in the original lease, will not discharge the liability of the assignee where the whole estate is assigned. Palmer v. Edwards, 1 Dougl. 187, in note, 3d ed. Poultney v. Holmes, 1 Str. 405, seems contrâ, but it only determined at Nisi Prius, that an agreement by parol by A, owner of a term whereof one year and three-quarters was to come, that B should have it for the remainder of the term, paying to A the same rent as was reserved in the original lease, being void by the statute of frauds as an assignment, shall be good as an underlease against A, the party granting it. Sed quære de hoc. [See also Parmenter v. Webber, 8 Taunt. 593, and 2 J. GRANT OF TWO ANNUITIES TO DIFFERENT PERSONS; ASSIGNMENT OF LEASEHOLDS TO TRUSTEE FOR SALE, MORTGAGE, &c.

It was formerly held, that if a term be assigned by way of mortgage, with a clause of redemption, the lessor could not sue the mortgagee as assignee of all the estate, right, title, interest, &c. of the mortgagor, even after the mortgage had been forfeited, unless the mortgagee had taken actual possession. Eaton v. Jaques, 2 Dougl. 455.

Formerly held, that assignee of lease was not liable to covenants until he had taken possession;

However, actual possession is not requisite to make an assignee liable to the rent and covenants; for where the plaintiff was the original lessee of a term, which he assigned to Kay, who assigned it by way of mortgage to the defendant as a security for the repayment of a sum of money, the action was brought to recover the amount of ground-rent, paid by the plaintiff during the interest of the defendant as mortgagee. The plaintiff adduced evidence to prove the defendant in possession at the time, of the rents and profits. Gibbs, counsel for defendant, said he could bring evidence to disprove the possession of the defendant; but he declined to produce it, Lord Kenyon observing, that it was of no consequence. The defendant, his lordship said, was liable, not on the score of possession, but as assignee: his liability was not limited by his possession; but as long as he had the legal estate, so long he continued liable to perform the covenants in the lease. If he wished to avoid that liability, he should have taken an under-lease. Gibbs citing the case of Eaton and Jaques, his lordship said, he would overrule it without the least reluctance: he had not the smallest doubt upon the subject. Accordingly, a verdict was given for the plaintiff. Stone v. Evans, Woodfall's Landlord and Tenant, 103, 3d ed. chap. 3. sect. 15. And see Westerdell v. Dale, 7 Durnf. & East. 312.

but Lord Kenyon held, that assignee of lease, by way of mortgage, was liable, before entry, to covenants, so long as he has the legal estate.

A trustee, to whom two leases were assigned in trust for securing an annuity, having said to the occupier of one of the demised houses, "You must pay the rent to me. I am become landlord for my client, who has the annuity, and you must pay the ground rents for me:" Held, that the trustee was liable in covenant to the lessor, as assignee of both leases, for non-payment of rent and not repairing.

So in Gretton v. Diggles, 4 Taunt. 766, which was an action of covenant for nonpayment of rent, and not keeping buildings in repair, brought against the defendant, as assignee of two leases granted by the plaintiff, the one to Headon, the other to Macdonald. The defendant had pleaded, first, non sunt facta, 2. and 3. that Headon's and Macdonald's estates respectively, did not vest by assignment in the defendant; 4. that the defendant did not become possessed of the premises in manner and form. Upon the trial of the cause at the sittings after Hilary term, 1813, before Gibbs, J. the evidence was, that the leases were assigned to the defendant as trustee for Fidell, to whom an annuity had been granted by Headon, with the usual powers of entry and distress, in trust to permit Headon the grantor to take the rents until default in payment, and thereafter to raise and pay the annuity to Fidell; and as to the surplus of the rents, which might remain after discharging the annuity, in trust for Headon. A tenant who occupied one of the houses proved that Headon having become a bankrupt, the witness applied to the defendant to inquire to whom he, the witness, ought thenceforward to pay his rent. The defendant said, you must pay the rent to me; I am become landlord for my client, who has the annuity, and you must pay the ground-rents for me. The jury, upon this evidence, found a verdict for the plaintiff. —Shepherd, Serjt. in Easter Term, moved for a rule nisi to set aside the verdict, and have a new trial. He urged that the defendant having no beneficial interest, nor having had any actual possession of the premises, which were in the occupation of the tenants of Headon and Macdonald, he was not liable for ground-rents and repairs. The defendant stands in the condition of a mortgagee out of possession, who according to the case of Eaton v. Jaques, Doug. 455, is not liable in covenant as an assignee. If the mortgagee of a leasehold requires, and receives the rents from the occupier, not as from his own tenant, but demanding them as the agent of the mortgagor, he might, according to the doctrine now contended for, subject himself to all the lessee's covenants in the lease; it is therefore necessary to adhere to the known line, that unless the mortgagee has recovered the actual possession he cannot be charged. The defendant could not have recovered the actual possession, because the premises were demised to other occupiers; he could only obtain the rents. At all events, the evidence applied only to Headon's house, and did not affect the defendant with the possession of Macdonald's.—Heath, J., the evidence shews an assent of the defendant to the whole conveyance.—Chambre, J. The defendant assumes the right conveyed to him in the deed.—Gibbs, J. There is evidence of an admission by the defendant, that he was assignee. The defendant does that which approaches as nearly to an entry on the land assigned as was possible under the circumstances. He could not take the actual possession of the land, because it was let, but he tells the tenant that he is the landlord. This admission must be connected with the assignment and grant to the defendant, and then he stands as landlord of both houses. There was no distinction made at the trial between the cases of the one house and of the other: the only question made, was, whether the species of possession was sufficient to charge the defendant. The defendant is entitled to the receipt of the rents; this is the legal operation of the deed: all the residue is the circumstance of his trust. The conversation which passed between the occupier and the defendant amounted, on one side, to an agreement to pay rent, and on the other to a claim of title.—Rule refused.

Covenant for non-payment of rent lies against an assignee by way of mortgage, or for securing

Supposing the authority of Eaton v. Jaques, was recognised in the above case of Gretton v. Diggles, and consequently the determination grounded on the circumstance that the defendant had done an act which approached as nearly to an entry on the land assigned as was possible under the circumstances, and not that the mere execution of the assignment made him liable, yet in the case of Williams v. Bosanquet, 3 Moore, 500, 1 Brod. & Bing. 238. S. C. it was held, after a special verdict argued before ten of the judges, that, covenant for non-payment of rent lies against an assignee of a lease, to whom an assignment is made by way of mortgage security, although he has never entered or taken actual possession: and Lord Chief Justice Dallas, in delivering the judgment of all the judges, said, that in the opinion of a great majority of them, Eaton v. Jaques, is not to be considered as having been rightly decided. 3 Moore, 536. 1 Brod. & Bing. 264. This rational decision is much more applicable to an absolute assignment of a leasehold estate to a grantee or a trustee for securing an annuity (a).

an annuity, although he has not taken possession.

To avoid the liability to the rents and covenants, there should be only an underlease, leaving a reversion of a few days in the original lessee; for, as Lord Mansfield observed, then the landlord would have no pretext to call upon the under lessee. Eaton v. Jaques, 2 Dougl. 459; and see to the same effect, Pilkington v. Shaller, 2 Vern. 374. Sparkes v. Smith, 2 Vern. 276. [Stone v. Evans, 53, ante.] An original lessor cannot maintain, against an undertenant, an action of debt, Patterson v. Scott, 2 Str. 776, Wms. n. 2 Saund. 302 (5), or an action of covenant, Wms. n. 1 Saund. 241, b, for rent, for want of privity of estate, 1 Selw. N. P. 486, 5th ed. although the undertenant was in possession when the rent became due; Holford v. Hatch, 1 Dougl. 183; and consequently it follows, that an original landlord cannot maintain an action on any other covenant in the lease, against an under lessee, 2 Wooddeson's Vinerian Lectures, 285, 3 Ibid. 87, although he be in possession; but the goods and chattels on the premises are liable to be distrained for rent, unless privileged on account of trade, &c. vide Vol. I. 610.

To avoid liability to rents and covenants in a lease intended as a security for an annuity or for mortgage-money, there should be an underlease instead of an assignment.

In a court of equity, an equitable mortgagee of a lease, who has taken possession of the premises, will be compelled to take an assignment, to enable the lessor to sue him at law on a covenant to rebuild, which attached during the time that the equitable mortgagee was in possession, and remained unperformed. 1 Meriv. 264. Thus in the case of Lucas v. Commerford, 3 Bro. C. C. 166; 1 Ves. jun. 235, S. C. the circumstances were, that in September 1773, Francis Atkinson demised to Richard Stapleton certain premises, containing four messuages, &c. for the term of seventy-one years; under the reserved rent of 14*l.* 14*s.* for the first ten years, of a pepper-corn for the eleventh year of the term, and of 12*l.* 12*s.* for the remaining sixty years of the term; and there was a covenant in the lease, that Stapleton, his executors, administrators, or assigns, should, in the eleventh year of the Depositary of a lease to secure a debt decreed to take an assignment, at his own costs, to enable the lessor to sue him at law on a covenant to rebuild, which attached while he was in possession; and he cannot abandon, for being entitled to a legal conveyance, equity will consider him as having it.

(a) [Where an assignee covenanted not to open a public-house on the premises, and there was a clause of re-entry on breach of the covenant, the assignor may enter upon an actual breach of the covenant, although he has no reversion. Doe v. Bateman, 2 B. & A. 168. Ed.]

lease, pull down and substantially rebuild the four houses situate on the premises. The defendant, Commerford, having afterwards, 28th March, 1776, lent to Stapleton the sum of 100*l.*, the latter gave him his bond for 200*l.*, with a condition for payment of the money, and a covenant, that the premises comprised in the lease should be subject to the payment of such sums. The lease was accordingly deposited with the defendant, but no assignment of it was ever executed. And, in 1782, Atkinson conveyed the premises, subject to the lease, to the plaintiff: and Stapleton was since dead insolvent. The defendant took, and continued in possession. About the 4th of July, 1785 (the year when, according to the covenant, the lessee was to rebuild), the plaintiff's agent accepted from the defendant Commerford 14*l.* 14*s.* as the rent due for that year; but, upon settling his accounts with the plaintiff, the mistake was discovered, and application was made to the defendant to rebuild, which he refused; on which a bill was filed for a specific performance of the covenant contained in the lease. The defendant, by his answer, stated the fact of the deposit by way of mortgage, as above, and admitted he was bound to perform the other covenants in the lease, but insisted, that having no title but as mortgagee, he was not bound to rebuild. The other defendants, who were the representatives of Stapleton, stated his insolvency and death. Mr. Mitford, for the plaintiff, contended, that in this case a specific performance ought to be decreed, and for this purpose cited The City of London v. Nash, 1 Ves. 12, more fully reported 3 Atk. 512, where Lord Hardwicke laid it down that, upon a covenant to rebuild, the landlord may come here for a specific performance, as the not building takes away his security. Mr. Mansfield, for the defendant Commerford, said, that the defendant having come into possession of this lease merely as a deposit, it would be very hard he should be obliged to increase his loan by rebuilding, especially as the representatives of Stapleton might pay him off, and retake possession. —Lord Thurlow, Lord High Chancellor. It is no matter whether the defendant took it as a pledge or as a purchase; he cannot take the estate, and refuse the burthen; it is nothing to the lessor. I am not inclined to follow that precedent, of building a house under the direction of the court, any more than of repairing one *. Defendant must

A bill for specific performance of a covenant to build, has been held not to be maintainable in a court of equity.

* So in Errington v. Aynesly, 2 Bro. C. C. 343, Lord Kenyon seemed to be of opinion, that a bill for a specific performance in building a bridge could not be maintained; and appeared to be of Lord Thurlow's opinion, above stated. And see the argument in Flint v. Brandon, 8 Ves. 161.

In Allen v. Harding, 7 Anne, 2 Eq. Ca. Abr. 17. pl. 6, a specific performance was decreed of a covenant by a curate of a church, with take an assignment, in order to enable the plaintiff to bring an action. I rather think, upon reading the answer, that they would recover even without the assignment: but it is very just that they should assign absolutely, and the defendant should take it; and this will come under the general prayer for relief. If he does not do that, he must at least account. I doubt whether defendant could abandon; put the case, that he had a good legal assignment instead of a deposit, could he, as against the lessor, abandon? I think he cannot; because, as he

B, to build a house upon the glebe land; but the judgment of the Chancellor was grounded on the particular circumstance, that damages if recovered would go to B, while the covenant was designed for the benefit of the church. However in the above cited case of The City of London v. Nash, Lord Hardwicke held, that, upon a covenant to build, the plaintiffs are clearly entitled to go into a court of equity for a specific performance, but not on a covenant to repair; for to build, he said, is one entire single thing, and if not done prevents that security which the lessor has for the rent, by virtue of the lease. So in Mosely v. Virgen, 3 Ves. 183, where the parties had covenanted to lay out a certain sum in a building of a certain value, without specifying what sort of building was to be erected, Lord Rosslyn observed, it is commonly said, no such decree can be made upon a covenant to repair; and Lord Thurlow appears to have added, that he did not see how it could be made upon a covenant to build, being equally uncertain. That certainly admits this qualification: if the transaction and agreement is in its nature defined, perhaps there would not be much difficulty to decree a specific performance: but if it is loose and undefined, and it is not expressed distinctly what the building is, so that the court could describe it as a subject for the report of the Master, the jurisdiction could not apply.

Specific performance in building decreed, under particular circumstances.

Therefore it seems, upon a view of all the cases, that specific performance of a covenant to erect any building, clearly and distinctly defined, would be now decreed by a court of equity, in cases in which the courts of common law cannot give the plaintiff adequate satisfaction in damages: but not of a covenant by a lessor, Whistler v. Mainwaring, 3 Wooddeson's Vinerian Lectures, 464 (z), or by a lessee, Hill v. Barclay, 16 Ves. 405, to keep the demised premises in repair; or to fill up excavations made by digging gravel pits; Flint v. Brandon, 8 Ves. 159; or of covenants, contained in a lease which had expired, to repair hedges and a mansion house; Rayner v. Stone, 2 Eden, 128; in which case a demurrer was allowed to a bill by the landlord for an account of loppings cut, and dung removed, by the tenant; common covenants in husbandry not being the subject of equitable jurisdiction.

And it seems by the better opinion, that specific performance of an agreement to build may be decreed, if sufficiently certain, but not on a covenant to repair.

has a title in equity to have a legal conveyance, I must consider him as having it; and then it is not in his election, but in the plaintiff's, to make him keep it, and perform the covenants. The defendant being at present only an assignee in equity, no action can be brought; and the only relief I can give the plaintiff, as I cannot give him damages, is to put him in a situation to recover them. He therefore decreed that the defendant should take an assignment of the lease, and execute a counterpart, and that he must pay the costs; 3 Bro. C. C. 167; i. e. it seems, both of the assignment and counterpart: 1 Ves. 236, thus states the decree, Let there be an assignment, and let the defendant take it, and pay the costs of it.

Equitable mortgagee of lease decreed to pay costs of assignment.

Equitable mortgagee of a lease, who has not taken possession of the premises, it seems, is liable to the rent and covenants attaching while he holds the lease as a security.

According to the principle of the cases Williams v. Bosanquet, 3 Moore, 500, 1 Brod. and Bing. 238, S. C. and Lucas v. Commerford, 3 Bro. C. C. 166, 1 Ves. jun. 235, S. C. it seems, that a mere depositary of a lease as a security for money, although he has not taken possession of the premises, will be liable to the rent and covenants attaching during the time he holds the lease as a security. For, in the first case, a court of law determined, that an assignee of a lease by way of mortgage, is liable to a covenant for non-payment of rent, although he has not taken possession, and consequently to any other covenant binding an assignee, ante, 52. And in the other case, a court of equity compelled a depositary of a lease as a security for money, to take an assignment, to enable the lessor to sue him at law on a covenant to rebuild, which attached while he was in possession: on the principle, that having a title in equity to a legal conveyance, he must be there considered as having it: and that, if the legal estate had been in him, he might have been sued at law on the covenants in the lease, whether he had entered into any personal covenant or not. 1 Meriv. 264.

An underlease avoids this liability.

To avoid this liability, when a lease is deposited by way of mortgage security, there should be an agreement in writing for an underlease.

[As to a breach of a covenant by an under-lessee, see Neale v. Wyllie, 3 B. & C. 535.]

(f) The above deed was perused, settled, and approved by one of the most eminent conveyancers now living, "as calculated to make the best security, which the nature of the property admits for the proposed annuity."

However, the third testatum cannot be followed as a precedent: for it is determined in equity, that where a woman stipulates, in the event of

GRANT BY ASSIGNMENT OF ANNUITIES BY HUSBAND AND WIFE.

In equity, personal property limited to a married woman, in the event of her surviving her husband, cannot be disposed of during the marriage.

surviving her husband, that her personal property shall become her own, reserving no power of disposition over it during the marriage; neither her husband can dispose of it by sale or otherwise, nor can she do so during his life, either by deed, will, consent, or charge. And the principle is the same when personal property is so given or left to her. 1 Rop. Husband and Wife, 247.

Thus in the two cases of Richards v. Chambers, and Seaman v. Duill, 10 Ves. 580, by the first of which property was settled in trust for the sole and separate use of the wife for life, and if she survived her husband, then to be absolutely hers; but if she died in his life, then as she by deed or will should appoint; and in default of appointment, to her executors and administrators. There was a part of the property in Court in trust in this cause: the husband and wife applied by petition to have it transferred to them; she had executed an appointment in his favour, and having been examined de bene esse, had expressed her consent and desire that the prayer of the petition should be complied with. In the second case, the property was settled to the husband for life; and if he survived his wife, to him absolutely; but if she survived, then to her absolutely: they filed a bill, desiring that the whole should be paid to the husband. Sir William Grant, Master of the Rolls, said--In these two causes I am called upon to determine the important and much agitated question, whether it is competent to a married woman, by examination in this court, to relinquish the provision secured by her marriage settlement, and to transfer to her husband that property to which he cannot make any claim, and over which she has not reserved any power of disposition. In the first case, the wife having a separate estate for life, might, according to the doctrine of many cases, part with that life interest. Chesslyn v. Smith, 8 Ves. 183. (a) She might also execute an appointment in favour of her husband, or of any person, which appointment in the event of her death in his life, would be a valid and effectual disposition of the property. But the question in both cases is, whether the contingent interest, which the wife while sui juris has secured to herself, in the event of her surviving her husband, can, through the interposition of this Court, be given up by her, while in a state of coverture. And, after a clear and elaborate review of the conflicting authorities, he says, it cannot be improper to inquire, whether upon principle, the jurisdiction that has been assumed in some of them, can be supported. See how it stands. The wife, while sui juris, means to make a provision for herself, in the event of her surviving her husband: that is the case before the Court. Such are the terms upon which alone

she chooses to contract, while in a condition to exercise her free and unbiassed judgment. She wishes to put that out of her reach, and secure it from the effect of the influence and solicitation to which she may be afterwards exposed. She will be told, there is no way in which that can be better accomplished, than that which has been adopted in these two cases—that the absence of power, the legal incapacity to act, is the best security. Why should a court of equity, professing to watch over the interests of married women, say, a woman about to marry, shall not be allowed to secure to herself this kind of protection? She has it, if the Court will not interfere: she is deprived of it, if the Court, upon her consent, while coverte, annuls the contract, made for her benefit while sui juris. I do not know why this object should be aimed at, or upon what judicial principle the means by which it is carried into effect rest. The husband can have no claim of right to her interests, with his concurrence created for the benefit of the wife. In the particular cases before the Court, the interests are of such a nature, that if created by a third person, he would have no power over them; for he cannot affect her interest, which cannot take effect in possession during his life. This case is not like those in which the husband has a right to the trust property of his wife, subject only to an obligation to make some provision for her, before he reduces it into possession. When the wife, upon examination, consents to relinquish that equity, it is not by virtue of a disposing power in her, or by the intervention of the Court, that the property passes to the husband. His marital right is allowed to operate, unobstructed by the equity, which the wife does not oppose to it. The equity being out of the way, the right stands unqualified; and upon that the Court decrees. But here there is no pretence of right upon the part of the husband. As to the contingent interest, there is no power of disposition in the wife; on the contrary, the non-existence of such power is the ground for calling upon the Court. Then, without a right in the husband to call for a transfer, or a power in the wife to make it, what is the ground of the decree? Ordinarily, a decree, or judgment of a Court, does not pass the property, but merely declares the right, existing by antecedent title and disposition.

The only ground upon which it has ever been attempted to justify this jurisdiction, is analogy to a fine at law. But in what does that analogy consist? Fines and recoveries had their origin from real suits for the recovery of land. Though they are now merely modes of conveyance; the forms are still preserved, and the legal principles are kept entire: a title is asserted paramount to that of the married woman. Upon a fine, the existence of that title is recognized by an agreement after suit, and upon a recovery, by judgment of the Court upon default of the party. An agreement upon suit, had, like the transactio of the civil law, peculiar efficacy ascribed to it; and was not open to objections that would have been fatal to other agreements. Fines were always binding upon married women, though it was thought proper to make them liable to examination by the statute De modo Levandi Fines * ; but it was not merely by the examination that the fine had its efficacy†. The Court of Common Pleas could not, by the consent of a married woman upon examination, give effect to her conveyance by lease and release. It is upon certain technical principles, and under the cover of certain forms, that she is permitted to part with her estate, without a direct violation of the rule of law, denying her any disposing power. But the proceeding of this Court is not referable to any of those forms in annulling a settlement made before marriage. The Court exercises an arbitrary authority, giving to the acts of a married woman an effect that does not legally belong to them.

As my opinion therefore is, that there is no right in the husband to call for, or power in the wife to make a transfer, I cannot comply with either of these applications. Therefore the petition in the first cause, and the bill in the second, must be dismissed. See also Anderson v. Dawson, 15 Ves. 538. [Jernegan v. Baxter, 6 Mad. 32. Ritchie v. Broadbent, 2 J. & W. 450, and the cases there cited.]

In equity the husband's assignments of his wife's reversionary equitable interests in the nature of choses en action, which by possibility may become payable during the marriage, will be binding against every person but his wife surviving him: but neither the assignment of the husband and wife, nor his bankruptcy or insolvency, can affect the wife's right by survivorship.

At law, the wife's choses en action, not reduced into possession by the husband, survive to her; so do her equitable interests of the same nature survive to her in equity. 9 Ves. 98. But in a court of equity, the husband's assignments of his wife's reversionary equitable interests in the nature of choses en action, expectant on the decease of another person, will be binding against every person but his wife surviving him. See Dictum of Sir Wm. Grant, 1 Ves. and Bea. 405.

Thus where the wife was entitled to certain trust stock upon the death of her mother, and she and her husband assigned it as a collateral security for the due payment of an annuity granted by him. In January 1814, the husband took the benefit of the insolvent debtors' acts, under which he made a general assignment of his property. In February 1814, the mother died, and a few days afterwards the husband died, without having instituted any proceedings, or done any act to reduce the trust fund into possession, during the short interval between the mother's death and his own. The wife, by joining in the assignment to the annuitant, could not affect her claim; for being a married woman, the deed was inoperative as to her; and the question was between the wife, claiming by survivorship; and the grantee of the annuity, and the assignee under the insolvent debtors' acts, claiming under the husband. Sir Thomas Plumer, then Vice Chancellor, said, independently of authority, let us consider upon principle, whether the husband's assignment of his wife's contingent interest is good? The husband has a right to his wife's choses en action, provided he reduce them into possession*. Is a deed assigning a reversionary interest, a reduction into possession? It is impossible actually to reduce a reversionary interest into possession. Is it then a constructive reduction into possession? The assignment puts the assignee of the husband in the same situation as the husband; and if the husband survive the wife, the assignee is entitled to the property: but here, the husband died before the wife, and the assignee therefore is not entitled to the property. This is the manner in which this case strikes me, upon principle. According to Mitford v. Mitford, 9 Ves. 87, it is clear, that the general assignment in bankruptcy does not pass a reversionary interest in the wife, she surviving her husband. [See also, Johnson v. Johnson, 1 J. & W. 472]. It must be the same as to the assignment under the insolvent debtors act; nor do I see what answer can be given to the observation, that a particular assignee cannot be in a better situation than an assignee under the general assignment in bankruptcy. The case cited, of Woollands v. Crowcher, 12 Ves. 174, is strong to show the insufficiency of the assignment to bar the wife's claim in case she survive her husband. On principle and authority, the wife is entitled to this money. Hornsby v. Lee, 2 Madd. Rep. 16. [See also, Richards v. Chambers, 10 Ves. 580, and Lee v. Muggeridge, 1 Ves. & B. 118].

GRANT BY ASSIGNMENT OF ANNUITIES BY HUSBAND AND WIFE.

A court of equity will not permit the wife in these cases, by her consent, to pass her reversionary interest. Thus, where a testator gave personal estate to trustees in trust, to pay the interest to his wife for life, and after her death, to make equal division of the fund among his children, who should attain the ages of twenty-one years. He at his death left three children and his wife surviving him. The widow made a gift of her life interest to the husband of one of the children; and the widow, the husband, and his wife, petitioned that the reversionary interest of the wife, who had attained twenty-one, should be paid to the

A court of equity will not permit a married woman, by her consent by way of confirmation, and to waive a settlement, to pass to her husband her reversionary interest in personal property, which by possibility may become payable during their marriage.

* [A voluntary settlement by the husband of a fund in court, the property of the wife, is not such a reduction of it into possession, as to bar her right of survivorship, Johnson v. Johnson, 1 J. & W. 476. And see Nash v. Nash, 2 Madd. 133. Ed.]

husband, the wife and the widow consenting thereto. Sir John Leach, Vice-Chancellor, refused to make the order, and said, my opinion is, that a wife, by her consent in a court of equity, can only part with that interest which is the creature of a court of equity; the right which she has in a court of equity to claim a provision, by way of settlement on herself and children, out of that property which the husband would take in possession in her right. Her equity arises upon his legal right to present possession. This principle has no application to a remainder or reversion: when the remainder or reversion falls into possession, then the equity arises. If the wife, by her consent, could pass a remainder or reversion in personal property to the husband, she would not only part with a future possible equity, but with her chance of possessing the whole property by surviving her husband; and to give this effect to her consent, would make it analogous to a fine at law, with respect to real estate—a principle always disclaimed in a court of equity. A court of equity interferes to protect the property of the wife against the legal rights of the husband, and will never lend itself as an instrument to enable the husband to acquire a right in the wife's personal property, which he can by no means acquire at law. Pickard v. Roberts, 3 Madd. Rep. 384. [Consent, under circumstances nearly similar to these, was also refused in the case of Wade v. Saunders, Turner, 306.]

A court of equity will only take the wife's consent de bene esse, to pass her reversionary interest in personal property, which by possibility may become payable during their marriage, to her husband's assignee for a valuable consideration, so as not to preclude her title by survivorship.

Where the wife was entitled to interest upon a share of money in the funds for her life, expectant upon the death of another person, the husband and wife agreed to sell this reversionary interest to the defendant, who objected to complete the purchase without the consent of the wife, expressed in Court; upon which the husband and wife filed a bill for a specific performance. Sir William Grant, Master of the Rolls, expressed a doubt, whether this was a proper case for taking the consent. He said, the ordinary occasion for that is, where the husband applies to have paid to him money, that belongs presently and immediately to his wife. Her equity is, not to prevent his receipt of it (for it belongs to him), but to have a settlement; and the Court requires her consent to the payment to him without a settlement. But in this instance, the object is not to bar her equity to have a settlement, but to bar her right to survivorship; for upon his death it belongs to her entirely. She is giving up not her equity only, but her entire right by survivorship. That is not the case in which the court takes her consent. If the husband has a right to convey, let him exercise his right: but why this Court should join, and aid him for that purpose, I do not know. And upon consideration, he would only take the wife's consent de bene esse, so as not to preclude the question as to her title by survivorship, if it should arise on that event happening. Woollands v. Crowcher, 12 Ves.

174. [The same principles were also acted upon in Stamper v. Barker, 5 Madd. 157. where the assignment of a reversionary interest in stock by a feme covert, was held inoperative. The last reported decision on this subject, is the case of Purdew v. Jackson, 1 Russell, 1. in which the wife joined the husband in assigning her reversionary share of a fund in Court for a valuable consideration; but it was held by Sir T. Plumer, M. R., that the wife was entitled by survivorship as against the assignee, and that it was not possible for the husband to reduce the share into possession: all the cases are collected in the notes of the reporter: and this case has since been followed by the present Chancellor, Lord Lyndhurst, in the unreported case of Honor v. Morton, 15th April, 1828, in Lincoln's Inn Hall; so that the point may be now considered as settled. Ed.]

At law the husband may release his wife's personal property which may accrue during the marriage; but he can neither release nor assign her personal property, which cannot accrue during the marriage.

The rule of law as to the wife's personal property appears to be, that where the wife has any right or duty, which by possibility may happen to accrue during the coverture, the husband may by release discharge it; but where the wife has a right or duty, which by no possibility can accrue to her during the coverture, the husband cannot release it. Gage v. Acton, 1 Salk. 326—7. ---

A grant alone is sufficient to convey reversions or remainders; yet they may be conveyed by bargain and sale, and release.

(a) A bargain and sale for a year in the above instance is not strictly necessary, for the proper mode of conveying a reversion or a remainder, either expectant upon an estate for years, Litt. s. 567, or for life, Litt. 568, is by grant alone. 2 Bla. Com. 317. 2 Wooddes. Lect. 303. Watk. Princ. Conv. 60, 97. 2d ed. 109, 168, Pres. ed. 4 Cru. Dig. 63, Com. Dig. Grant, (C.) [And see Vol. IV, 232.] However, reversions or remainders may be effectually conveyed by a bargain and sale for a year, and a release in enlargement, Shortridge v. Lamplugh, 2 Ld. Raym. 798, even though there should be an omission of the word grant in the release, which is often very unskilfully struck out of conveyances. Mr. Booth's opinion, 2 Cases and Opinions, 144, 148; ante, Vol. I. 426. For a bargain and sale for years, by its own operation, and without enrolment, transfers an estate in reversion or remainder, Gilb. Uses, 104, 299, as well as an estate in possession, n. 9th ed. Noy's Maxims, 290, to the bargainee under the statute of uses, and therefore attornment in this case by the particular tenant in possession of the lands, was not requisite before the statute 4 Ann. c. 16, which made attornment unnecessary. Reversions or remainders may also be effectually conveyed by a grant for lives or years at common law, independently of the statute of uses, and a release in enlargement to the grantee, Gilb. Uses, 104, 299, without attornment by the particular tenant to the grant.

or by grant for lives or years, and release.

A bargain and sale, and a release, is the modern and prudent method of conveying reversions or remainders.

A bargain and sale for a year, and a release in enlargement, is a common modern way of conveying reversions and remainders: Sug. n. Gilb. Uses, 232; for, as the validity of a grant would depend on evidence, that the grantor had merely a reversion or remainder, and consequently as it would be incumbent on the person claiming under the grant, to shew that there was a previous existing estate,—the bargain and sale for a year is taken as a precaution, to preclude that enquiry by creating a particular estate, capable of enlargement. 2 Pres. Conv. 235. Besides, if by means of the determination of the prior particular estate, or of any defect in the creation of it, so that in fact there is not any estate in reversion or remainder in the person conveying, but merely an estate in possession, the bargain and sale, and release, provide for the event. Pres. Watk. Princ. Conv. 110, 168, 206.

The reference in a release to a bargain and sale for a year of a reversion

It has been said, that it is an inaccuracy, in referring in a release to a bargain and sale for a year of a reversion or remainder, to say, that the releasee is in the "actual possession" of the hereditaments; the right expression, it is said, is, that they are "actually vested" in him by virtue of the bargain and sale, and the statute of uses, Butl. n. Co. Litt. 270. a. (3); which mode of referring to the bargain and sale for a year, of a reversion or remainder, is, as in the above form, occasionally adopted in modern practice. It is quite immaterial which expression is used, for the word possession is as applicable, and as correct, as vested. The word "vested" having allusion to the symbolical inchoate form of delivering seisin of estates in possession, by the improper investiture of antiquity; by investing the tenant, or clothing him with a robe or vest*; Sullivan's Lectures, 59, 2d ed.; Kaims's Historical Law Tracts, 106, 3d ed. vol. I. 151, ed. 1758; and it is so used in relation to a remainder or reversion, from the analogy a fixture of such property in the reversioner or remainder-man bears to that of the person so invested with an estate in possession, and not from any absolute propriety of expression. Watk. Des. 43, 3d ed. So, when Mr. Fearne speaks of vested remainders, Fearne's Rem. 1. he only means that the property is fixed, or executed in the remainder-man, and not contingent. Robinson's Gavelkind, 172, 2d ed. The word possession was probably adopted by the old conveyancers in this instance, because it is applied in the statute of uses, 27 Hen. VIII. c. 10, s. 1, as well to reversions and remainders, as to lands in possession. Indeed, the word possession seems to be peculiarly appropriate; because in the language of the law, it is generally applied to an estate for years, or other chattel interest, in contradistinction to an estate of freehold; for if a man have a greater estate in lands than for years, the proper phrase is, that he is thereof seised, 2 Bla. Com. 105; Noy's Max. 20; but if he have an estate for years only, then he is said to be possessed, Litt. s. 324; Co. Litt. 200. b, not properly of the land, but of the term for years; 2 Bla. Com. 144; Co. Lit. 46. b; Watk. Desc. 109; but nevertheless, the word possession is proper in relation to the freehold estate, as well as to the estate for years. Noy's Max. 120; Noy's Ten. 70. Supposing that neither of the above expressions, "vested" and "possession," are strictly correct, as applied in the above instance, yet the word possession being equally effectual, is preferable to vested; because the bargain and sale is only taken ex abundanti cautela, to convey the reversion or remainder in the same manner as if it were an estate in possesor remainder should state, it has been said, that the hereditaments are vested in the releasee; but the old way seems the best way.

* Vestimento is seisin, investiture; (from whence the Saxon term vest;) a metaphor the feudists took from clothing; by which they meant to intimate, "that the naked possession was clothed with the solemnities of feudal tenure." 1 Burr. 109. Vested.

sion, and not as a remainder or reversion; for as a remainder or reversion, a grant alone would be sufficient: and because it prevents a multiplicity of forms, and is the old way of referring to the bargain and sale for a year, in a release of a remainder or reversion, 3 Horsm. Conv. 277, as well as of an estate in possession: although even in the latter instance, the expression, that the grantee is in the actual possession, is not strictly correct, for the bargain and sale only gives the bargainee a right to the possession. The general practice now is, to grant a rent pur autre vie, out of a freehold estate.

(b) The question stated ante, Vol. I. 587—596, whether a rent pur autre vie out of a freehold estate, can be effectually limited to the grantee, his executors, administrators, and assigns, so as to continue after the grantee's death, in case he should make no previous assignment thereof, ut ante, Vol. I. 588, is now generally avoided, by limiting the annuity or rent charge thus:

This precaution, founded on the common law doctrine of non-occupancy of estates lying in grant, is equally necessary in the above instance, because the English common law is the law of Antigua, so far as it stands unaltered by any of the laws of the island: Act of General Assembly of the Leeward Caribbee Islands, 4 Anne, No. 31, sec. 2: and the 12th sect. of the English statute, 29 Car. Attornies in some of the colonies are called esquires, because they are both counsel and attornies.

(f) As barristers in England are called esquires*, the attornies in all the colonies excepting Jamaica and Barbadoes, are also called esquires, because the departments of counsel and attorney are there united. In Jamaica and Barbadoes, where the departments of counsel and attorney are distinct, the attornies are described, as in England, gentlemen, in all legal proceedings.

The union of these two branches of counsel and attorney has been productive of much inconvenience; for the practical part has so much employed the attention of the colonial advocates, that few of them have leisure to acquire any considerable degree of knowledge †.

Inconvenience of the union of both branches.

The law practitioners in all the colonies, excepting Jamaica and Barbadoes, are of three sorts; first, gentlemen who have been called to the bar at the Inns of Court in London, or at the King's Inns in Dublin, and who are of course admitted to practise, on producing certificates of their having been called: secondly, those who have served clerkships in Great Britain, Ireland, or the colonies: and thirdly, those who through interest are admitted to the bar without any such previous qualification, and who (according to the phrase of the country) are said to turn lawyers ‡. In Jamaica and Barbadoes, the advocates must have been called to the bar in England or Ireland: but even in these two islands, it is a usual practice for counsel to communicate immediately with clients, without the intervention of an attorney, and generally to act much in the same manner as some provincial counsel do in England, and as most of the advocates do in Scotland. Although the Act 7 and 8 W. III. c. 24, requiring practitioners of the law to take the oaths of allegiance and supremacy, and to subscribe the declaration against popery, and the act 31 Geo. III. c. 32, providing another declaration and oath for Roman Catholics, do not either of them extend to the colonies, yet persons who would not subscribe the declaration against popery, have been refused permission to practise the law there. Sed vide, as to Catholicism, Butl. n. Co. Litt. 391. a. IV. 5. (ultimo.)

Colonial barristers rarely practise in England afterwards.

Of all the barristers who have practised in the colonies and afterwards returned to England, few have attempted to practise in the courts here. For most of the questions that arise in the colonies are founded in litigation, and not in intricacy; and, as the gentlemen of the bar in general go there at an early period in life, before they have attained any considerable share of knowledge, and as order and decorum are not properly attended to in the courts there, it is not in their power to gain much beneficial experience, or to add to their stock of legal learning. Many of the judges in the colonies not having enjoyed the benefits of a liberal education, and not having been regularly bred to the profession of the law, the advocates are generally their superiors in literary acquirements; and he who has the greatest fluency may sometimes be considered as the ablest lawyer. In England, Scotland, and Ireland, the pleader has, in respect to the persons addressed, the simplest and the easiest task of all orators; the judges to whom he addresses his oration, being commonly men of the same rank, of similar education, and not differing greatly in respect of studies or attainments. Campbell's Philosophy of Rhetorick, Book I. Ch. X. sect. II. Vol. I. p. 222, ed. 1816. [This note is taken from Stokes, 269, which book was published in 1783. Since this time, it is only justice to say, that the West Indian Bar has much improved. The greater number of advocates are men who have been regularly educated in England, and there is now no want either of talent or respectability. Ed.]

[See also Howard's Laws of the British Colonies, where all the material laws of the different colonies affecting property may be found.] Formerly there was only one; but since 1816 there have been two executive governments in the Leeward Caribbee Islands, namely a Captain General and Governor in Chief of the Islands of Antigua, Montserrat, and Barbuda; and another for Saint Christophers, (which includes Anguilla,) Nevis, and the Virgin Islands. But there are still distinct legislative assemblies for each state, which is governed by its own peculiar laws. The assembly for the Virgin Islands meets at Tortola; each of the other assemblies meets on the Island from which the respective laws take their names.

No. 39.

PREAMBLE. Difficulty of tracing the title to lands claimed under patent, and expediency of preventing litigation.

By an act of assembly of Antigua, entituled, "An Act for the establishing and confirming of Inhabitants of this Island in their title to their Lands." FORASMUCH as the estates of all persons do most and chiefly consist of lands granted to them, or which they may have purchased from such as may have held their lands only by force and virtue of such grants, or that it hath so happened that lands so granted have legally descended to them: yet, inasmuch as all such pretences give them but a weak and insufficient title to the same, in regard many of the inhabitants have no patents under any public seal appointed by his Majesty, neither is it known when any such seal will come, notwithstanding our present captain general, William Stapleton, hath taken all possible care to procure one for that purpose, so that it is thought to be matter of very great concern, as well for the quieting the minds of all his Majesty's good subjects, that now are in the management and possession of any lands upon the island, as for the future preventing litigious suits and controversies, touching lands, their grants, alienations, or descents, to all such as are planters, or may for the future come to be freeholders upon this island, that an act pass for giving a firm and unquestionable right and title to the same.

ACT. Proprietors and possessors of

II. Be it therefore ordained and enacted, and it is hereby enacted and ordained by the governor, council, and representatives of this island, that if any person or persons, proprietor or possessor of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments within this island, have, and shall for the future quietly, without lawful interruption, enjoy the same severally or successively by the space of five years; that such person or persons so possessing, shall have good right and title to the same against all men whatsoever, and during the estate whereof he or they are possessed, EXCEPTING such as shall prosecute their titles to the same within two years after the date of this act; and such married women, and persons under the age of twenty and one years, and of unsound memory, prosecuting their respective titles, within one year after their being unmarried, becoming of age, and sound memory, excepting also all such persons as are in his Majesty's service, or in durance in foreign parts, or by any usurped authority.

lands enjoying them five years quietly, to be deemed to have a good title, except against persons prosecuting their title within two years after the act; married women, minors, &c. one year after removal of disability; persons absent in the king's service, durance abroad, &c.

V. And forasmuch as by an act of this island, bearing date the thirteenth day of April, one thousand six hundred and sixty-eight, intituled, An Act for the establishing a Register's Office in this Island, it is provided and enacted, that all deeds and conveyances of, and relating to any lands in this island, shall be duly entered and inrolled in the said office, and that all conveyances and other acts in law relating to land, and not registered therein as aforesaid, shall be void, and not pleadable in any of the courts of this island; but yet no time is limited in the said act for effecting the same, so that many disputes may arise thereupon, to the great disquiet and prejudice of the inhabitants of this island; for prevention whereof:

RECITAL of old register act, No. 5.

VI. It is ordered and enacted by the authority aforesaid, that the said act, and every clause therein, shall be duly followed and pursued; and that all persons who shall for the future set, or by any other act by law transfer their right of any lands, tenements or hereditaments within this island, shall cause the deeds and other acts aforesaid to be inrolled, registered, and recorded in the said register's office, within twenty days after passing the same, and that all such deeds so passed, and not recorded in the time aforesaid, shall be utterly void to all intents, constructions, and purposes, and not pleadable in any of the courts of this island; any law, custom, or usage to the contrary in any wise notwithstanding. This limitation to extend only to such as are resident in this island at the time of conveyance, and no other.

Deeds executed in ANTIGUA, not recorded in 20 days, void. The enlarged period for registering, by No. 106, sec. 15, is merely a provisional opening for the remedy of omissions at that time, and not a supercedure of this clause, which is confirmed by No. 198, s. 3.

VII. And that all conveyances, contracts, bargains, and agreements, relating to any lands or tenements in this island, which shall happen to be passed, conveyed, and confirmed by any act in law in Europe, shall be inrolled, registered, and recorded in the said office, within one year after passing the same, or else shall be void and not pleadable as aforesaid. Provided the conveyance in Europe be not lost at sea, or otherwise intercepted within the said time, which interception or loss to be made out by sufficient authority, certificates, or evidences.

Deeds executed in EUROPE, not recorded in a year, void, except in case of accident in transmitting them.

By No. 270, s. 2, the time allowed for registering deeds executed out of ANTIGUA, is two years.

XI. And for the avoiding of further disputes about the titles of land, it is hereby further declared and enacted by the authority aforesaid, that in actions concerning the titles of lands, it shall be a good plea in bar to such action, for the defendant to alledge that he and they, whose estate he hath, have been in quiet and peaceable possession of the said land in question for and during the space of five years, and this plea duly entered, shall bar the plaintiff or demandant, UNLESS he can disprove the same, or make it appear that the said five years' quiet possession incurred during the time that the said plaintiff or demandant was under the age of twenty-one years, a woman under coverture, or of unsound memory, or that the defendant or tenant held the same as his attorney, tenant, servant, or overseer, by virtue of some particular estate for years, life, or in tail, which, at or before the time of the action brought, was expired.

Five years' possession a good bar: except against infants, &c.

The necessity of fixing one legal mode of making claims.

XII. And forasmuch as all persons are by this act limited and appointed certain times, wherein they are to make their claims to lands and tenements in this island, but that it is not therein ascertained and appointed in what manner, and how such claims are to be made to lands and tenements, in case the judges of the several courts of law should differ or vary in judgment and opinion in manner of claim, or allow of any other claim than is hereafter mentioned and declared: And to the intent that the same may be ascertained, and the possessors of the lands and tenements assured, how and in what manner persons having or laying claim to any lands or tenements in their possession, and also all persons having right or title to lands or tenements, may for the future know how to demand and claim their right in such cases, and that the judges of the respective courts of Common Pleas for the future may not vary therein; the deputy governor, council, and assembly have thought fit to declare, and they do hereby shew and declare, that all manner of persons whatsoever, that are concerned to make claims to any lands or tenements within this island, so as to make their claims effectual, are to make claim by their action at law, duly entered in the offices of the courts of that Precinct where the lands and tenements are, according to the former practice and rules of the said courts of the Precincts; to which action the tenants or persons in possession are to receive summons from the said courts; and that all judges and courts of Common Pleas do allow of no other claim to any land or tenement for any person plaintiff in any suit or suits before them, than what was to be made by their action on record, and summons given in manner aforesaid and not otherwise; any law, custom, usage, or practice to the contrary notwithstanding.

ACT. Claims to be made by action at law, and not otherwise.

XIII. And whereas many persons having or pretending right or title to lands or tenements in the possession of others, having once made their claim within the time limited and appointed in this act, may for ever hereafter keep their pretence of right or title to the lands, by bringing their action or actions by way of claim at law once in five years, and so again in five years, and so sue and trouble the persons in possession for ever: The authority aforesaid, for prevention and removal of so great an inconveniency, do therefore declare and enact, and it is hereby declared and enacted, that all persons whatsoever, that shall hereafter make their claim to any lands or tenements within the time limited within this act, do, by the said action, or some other action, if brought in the five years then next after, bring the same to trial, and the same trial to be conclusive and definitive on the plaintiff's part for ever, and never to bring any action thenafter for the same, but to be for ever barred; any law, usage, custom, or practice to the contrary notwithstanding.—Dated 9th January, 1676, 27 Car. II.

RECITAL. Practice of reviving suits every five years, vexatious.

ACT. Action to be tried in five years after claim; and, if lost, to be decisive for ever.

No. 83.

By an act of assembly of Antigua, entituled, "An Act for quieting the Inhabitants of this Island in their present Possessions, and preventing litigious law suits," it was enacted by sect. VII, that it shall and may be lawful for the future, where the husband stands possessed of his wife's inheritance, together with his wife, under their hands and seals, to pass away the said wife's inheritance by any manner of deed whatsoever; and the person or persons to whom the same is past, shall have, hold, and enjoy the same, according to the limitations specified in any deed aforesaid, the same being hereby declared to be good and effectual in law, when recorded in the Register's office, according to the act for the same, in as good and ample manner as though the same were past by way of fine and recovery before any of the judge or judges in Westminster Hall *, or otherwise; any law, usage, or custom to the contrary notwithstanding.

Wife's inheritance may be conveyed by husband and wife's deed; [Extended to "any other estate of freehold," No. 32, post, 227; No. 270, post, 231.]

Such deed, when registered, to be as effectual as fine and recovery.

* Although the courts in England have no jurisdiction over lands in our West Indian colonies, yet a fine or recovery of lands there, levied in the court of Common Pleas at Westminster, is deemed by the colonial courts to have the same effect as if the lands had been within the proper jurisdiction of the court. But as to Antigua, and the islands adjacent and thereto belonging, the deeds declaring the uses, making the tenant to the præcipe, &c. if executed out of Antigua, must be registered there within two years after the execution. Act of Assembly of Antigua, No. 270, s. 2. When fines were formerly levied or recoveries suffered here of lands in the colonies, it was effected by stating the lands to have been situate within the jurisdiction of the court here; thus, "in the island of Antigua, that is to say, in the parish of Saint Mary Islington, in the county of Middlesex." Forster v. Pollington, Barnes's notes, 216, 3d ed. Wilson on Fines, 57, 4th ed. Stokes on the Colonies, 426. In some modern law books, a fine is said to be "sometimes levied," and a recovery "occasionally suffered" here of lands in the West Indies. However, there has not been an instance of such a fine or recovery for a considerable number of years. For more than a century past it has been perfectly unnecessary, and whenever it has been done, as to any of the Leeward Caribbee Islands, a useless expense has been incurred; as a deed duly acknowledged and registered, and when made in England or Ireland, inrolled in the court of Chancery of that kingdom where made, according to the provisions of the acts above stated, has the same effect as such a fine and recovery, and declaration of the uses. See Act of General Assembly of the Leeward Caribbee Islands, No. 32. s. 3. & 5. post, 227, 228, and Act of Assembly of Antigua, No. 270. s. 1. post, 231. But notwithstanding enrollment in England or Ireland, the deed with the acknowledgement, examination, and certificate thereon, must be recorded at length in the Register's office of Antigua, within two years after the execution. No modern instance of such a fine or recovery.

A deed having the same effect as to the Leeward Caribbee Islands, a fine or recovery would be a useless expense.

Advantages of this mode of destroying entails, &c.

One of the advantages attending this judicious alteration of the law is, it enables a tenant in tail at any time to bar his issue in tail, and the remainders over, without the concurrence of the tenant of the immediate freehold, thereby facilitating the sale of estates, which in all commercial countries is an object of primary importance. There will be a future opportunity of resuming this subject, as to our other colonies. In this place it is impossible wholly to restrain the feelings of melancholy mixed with pleasure, raised on seeing the colonies of a great and enlightened nation precede their parent country in the path of rational legislation, by rendering unnecessary the fictitious proceedings in a common recovery, and which the suggestion of the incomparable author of the Commentaries on the Laws of England, the ridicule of the learned observer on the more ancient statutes, the recommendation of the industrious author of the Touchstone of Common Assurances, have not yet induced the legislature of England to follow, by enacting similarly wise laws, and thereby imitating the philosophical example of her children. Lease for a year of colonial estates, unnecessary.

* The operative words generally introduced in conveyances of freehold colonial property are, "hath granted, bargained, sold, enfeoffed, and conveyed." The lease for a year is sometimes omitted; indeed it is always unnecessary, and is a useless expense, because the estate may pass by the deed as a feoffment without livery of seisin, or as a grant without attornment, whether the deed be executed in, or out of the Island. Supra, s. 20 & 21, & vide post, 231, No. 270, s. 1. In the conveyance of large estates the lease for a year is often used. Mr. Shephard says, the lease and release prevails, as evidence of the law would be necessary to establish the validity of the conveyance out of the Island. Practice of Saint Vincent, 118. This reason is very unsatisfactory, as the question of title cannot arise in any court out of the Island, excepting on appeal to the king in council, Attorney General v. Stewart, 2 Meriv. 156, where the local laws of the colony are admitted as a matter of course; and it is admitted by our courts of law, (who have no immediate jurisdiction but only incidentally, as in cases of breach of covenant for further assurance, &c.,) that lands passed by grant alone in the West Indian Colonies. Goffe v. Elkin, 2 Mod. 240. So it is admitted here, on the same principle, that under the Irish statute, 9 Geo. II. c. 5. s. 6, ante, Vol. I. 397, a recital of a lease for a year in a release of lands in Ireland is sufficient, although in fact no lease be prepared. Daly v. Kelly, 4 Dow. Par. Cas. 435. LAWS OF LEEWARD CARIBBEE ISLANDS RELATING TO CONVEYANCES.

General assembly to make general laws.

The acts of this assembly more immediately relating to the subject of this work, are the following:

No. 31.

An Act for preventing tedious and chargeable law suits, and for declaring the rights of particular tenants.

Preamble.

WHEREAS law suits and controversies frequently arise between the inhabitants of these islands, principally occasioned by the different nature and circumstances of our estates from those in England, whereby it sometimes hath happened, through the partiality of some, and ignorance of others, that contradictory judgments have been given in cases founded on the same rules and principles of law and reason; for the redressing of which mischiefs, and establishing a constant and certain uniformity in the proceedings of the courts of the several islands under this government, and for declaring the rights of particular tenants in these islands:

II. We your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects the commander in chief of your Majesty's Leeward Caribbee Islands, the General Council and General Assembly of the said Islands, now met at Nevis, do humbly pray your Majesty that it may be declared, and it is hereby declared by the authority aforesaid, that the common law of England, as far as it stands unaltered by any written laws of these islands, or some of them, confirmed by your Majesty, or some of your royal predecessors in council, or by some act or acts of parliament of the kingdom of England, extending to these islands, is in force in each of these your Majesty's Leeward Caribbee Islands, and is the certain rule whereby the rights and properties of your Majesty's good subjects inhabiting these islands, are and ought to be determined; and that all customs or pretended customs or usages contradictory thereunto, are illegal, null, and void *.

The common law of England to be in force, except where altered by laws of the islands.

Pretended customs to the contrary, void.

III. And be it and it is hereby declared, that all negroes and other slaves, coppers, stills, and all cattle, horses, asses, commonly used and exercised upon and about any plantation or plantations, and all other plantation utensils, are inheritance, and affixed to the freehold, and are,

Negroes, &c. used with plantations, made freehold. Vide ante, 219, sec. 10.

* It has been determined by the King in Council, that the statute of charitable uses does not extend to the Island of Nevis; Howell's State Trials, xx, 289; and by the Court of Chancery in England, that the statute does not extend to the island of Grenada, or to any other colony, it being a law of local policy, adapted solely to the country in which it was made. Attorney General v. Stewart, 2 Meriv. 160, 163. Nor do any other laws bind the colonies excepting such as are applicable to their situation and condition, unless expressly enacted, xx Howell, 289. Vide 7 and 8 W. III. c. 22. 6 Geo. III. c. 12. Therefore the bankrupt laws, founded on the peculiar jurisdiction vested in the Lord Chancellor of England (and not transmissible otherwise than by some special provision) the law of tithes, the jurisdiction of spiritual courts, the poor laws, the rule prohibiting two persons being in partnership from underwriting the same policy of insurance, and a multitude of other provisions, are neither necessary nor convenient for them, and therefore are not in force. 2 Meriv. 150, 152. 1 Bla. Com. 107. See the Antigua act for the prevention of frauds and perjuries, No. 438, post, 235. In Antigua an act has lately passed for the relief of Insolvent Debtors, which is now before the king in council, but it has not yet been approved. [It has since passed. 1 How. Col. 441. Ed.]

[The distinction between colonies first inhabited by British subjects, and conquered colonies, has not been sufficiently attended to in this note. The common law of England, all the statutes in force at the time of the settlement, and all those passed afterwards, which relate to the general welfare of the realm and its subjects, although the colonies are not named in them, extend to the former. Antigua is one of these. But in conquered colonies, such as Granada, the original laws of the Island prevail, until altered by the conqueror; and no statute subsequently passed affects them, unless they are named therein. The laws of England were extended to Granada by royal proclamation, in October, 1783. See on this subject Blankard v. Galdy, Salk. 411. 2 P. Wms. 75. LAWS OF ANTIGUA RELATING TO CONVEYANCES.

Preamble.

WHEREAS by the general laws of the Leeward Caribbee islands in America, or the particular laws of Antigua, provision is made only concerning deeds, conveyances, and assurances executed upon the island of Antigua, or in England or Ireland, for conveying lands, tenements, slaves, and other freeholds and inheritances lying and being in Antigua, and the islands thereto adjacent and belonging; and also disputes have arisen concerning the acknowledging, proving, and authenticating deeds executed beyond the seas, for and touching estates and interests in lands, tenements, and slaves in Antigua, and the islands thereto adjacent and belonging. For prevention therefore of doubts, and settling the law in these points in future, we, your Majesty's most dutiful, loyal, and obedient subjects, the governor of your Majesty's Leeward Caribbee islands in America, and the council and assembly of this your Majesty's island Antigua, do humbly pray your most excellent Majesty, that it may be enacted and ordained, and be it, and it is hereby enacted and ordained by the authority aforesaid, that all

No. 438.

An act of Assembly of Antigua, intituled, "An Act for the prevention of fraud and perjury."

PREAMBLE.

WHEREAS great abuses have prevailed, for want of some act of this island for the further prevention of many fraudulent practices which are commonly endeavoured to be upheld by perjury and the subornation of perjury; we, therefore, your Majesty's most dutiful, loyal, and obedient subjects, the governor in chief of your Majesty's Leeward Caribbee islands in America, and the council and assembly of this your Majesty's island, Antigua, humbly pray your most excellent Majesty, that it may be enacted and ordained; and be it, and it is hereby enacted and ordained by the authority aforesaid, that, from and after three calendar months after publication hereof, no action shall be brought, whereby to charge any executor or administrator, upon any special promise, to answer damages out of his own estate, or whereby to charge the defendant, upon any special promise, to answer for the debt, default, or miscarriages of another person, or to charge any person, upon any agreement made upon consideration of marriage, or upon any contract or sale of lands, slaves, tenements, or hereditaments, or any interest in or concerning them, or upon any agreement that is not to be performed within the space of one year from the making thereof; unless the agreement, upon which such actions shall be brought, or some memorandum or note thereof, shall signed by the party, or some authorized person.

II. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that from and after the expiration of the said three calendar months, no contract for the sale of any goods, wares, and merchandizes for the price of twenty pounds, current gold and silver money of this island, or upwards, shall be allowed to be good; except the buyer shall accept part of the goods so sold, and actually receive the same, or give something in earnest, to bind the bargain, or in part of payment, or that some note or memorandum in writing of the said bargain, be made and signed by the parties to be charged by such contract, or their agents thereunto lawfully authorized.

No contract for sale of goods, &c. to the value of 20*l.* or upwards, good; unless buyer receive part, or give earnest, or memorandum be signed.

III. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that, from and after the expiration of the said three calendar months, all devises and bequests of any lands, slaves, or tenements, shall be in writing, and signed by the devisor, or by some other person in his presence, and by his express directions, as his last will and testament, in the presence of one credible white witness, who shall attest and subscribe the same, in the presence of the said devisor; or shall be wholly written, dated, and subscribed by the proper hand of the said devisor; or else shall be utterly void, and of none effect.

Devises of lands, slaves, &c. to be in writing, and signed by devisor, or by another person in devisor's presence, by his direction, and attested by one white witness, or to be wholly written by devisor.

IV. Provided always, that the wills and testaments of free negroes, mulattoes, or mustees, or other persons of colour, may be attested by any free persons of colour; any thing hereinbefore contained to the contrary notwithstanding.

Wills of free persons of colour may be attested by persons of colour.

V. And moreover no devise in writing of lands, slaves, tenements, or hereditaments, nor any clause thereof, shall at any time (after the expiration of the said three calendar months) after publication thereof, be revocable otherwise than by some other will or codicil in writing, or other writing declaring the same, or by burning, cancelling, tearing, or obliterating the same by the testator himself, or in his presence, and by his directions and consent: but all devises and bequests of lands, slaves, tenements, and hereditaments, shall remain and continue in force until the same be burnt, cancelled, torn, or obliterated by the testator, or his directions in manner aforesaid; or unless the same be altered by some other will or codicil in writing, or other writing of the devisor, signed in the presence of one witness, who shall attest and subscribe the same in the presence of the said devisor, as his last will and testament; or unless the same be altered by some other will or codicil in the handwriting of the divisor, dated and subscribed

No devise of lands, &c. revocable, unless testator, or some person, by his direction, burn it, &c.; or testator sign revocation or alteration in the presence of one witness; or sign alteration written wholly by himself.

If person attest will, &c. to whom any beneficial devise, &c. be therein made, will void as to him, &c.

VI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that if any person shall attest the execution of any will or codicil which shall be made after the expiration of three calendar months after the publication hereof, to whom any beneficial devise, legacy, estate, interest, gift, or appointment of or affecting any real or personal estate (other than and except charges on lands, slaves, tenements, or hereditaments for payment of any debt or debts), shall be thereby given or made, such devise, legacy, estate, interest, gift, or appointment shall, so far only as concerns such person attesting the execution of such will or codicil, or any person claiming under him, be utterly null and void: and such person shall be admitted as a witness to the execution of such will or codicil, within the intent of this act, notwithstanding such devise, legacy, estate, interest, gift, or appointment mentioned in such will or codicil.

If will charge land, &c. with debts, creditor having a debt charged may witness it.

VII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that in case, by any will or codicil, any lands, slaves, tenements, or hereditaments, are or shall be charged with any debt or debts, and any creditor, whose debt is so charged, hath attested, or shall attest the execution of such will or codicil, every such creditor, notwithstanding such charges, shall be admitted as a witness to the execution of such will or codicil, within the intent of this act.

Interested witness to will, having, before he gives testimony, accepted or released, or after tender refused legacy, a competent witness.

VIII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that if any person shall attest the execution of any will or codicil, which shall be made after the expiration of three calendar months after the publication hereof, to whom any legacy or bequest shall be thereby given, whether charged upon lands, slaves, tenements, or hereditaments, or not, and such person, before he shall give his testimony concerning the execution of any such will or codicil, shall have been paid, or have accepted, or released, or shall have refused to accept such legacy or bequest upon tender made thereof, such person shall be admitted as a witness to the execution of such will or codicil, within the intent of this act, notwithstanding such legacy or bequest: Provided, that in case of such tender and refusal, as aforesaid, such person shall in no wise be entitled to such legacy or bequest; but shall be for ever afterwards barred therefrom; and in case of such acceptance as aforesaid, such person shall retain to his own use the legacy or bequest which shall have been so paid, satisfied, or accepted: notwithstanding such will or codicil shall afterwards be adjudged or determined to be void for want of due execution, or for any other cause or defect whatsoever.

Interested witness dying in lifetime of testator, or before he shall have accepted or refused legacy, a legal witness; subject to the consideration of the court.

IX. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that in case any such legatee as aforesaid, who shall attest the execution of any will or codicil, which shall be made after the expiration of three calendar months after the publication hereof, shall die in the lifetime of the testator, or before he shall have received or released the legacy or bequest so given to him as aforesaid, and before he shall have refused to receive such legacy or bequest on tender made thereof, such legatee shall be deemed a legal witness to the execution of such will or codicil, within the intent of this act, notwithstanding such legacy or bequest. Provided always, that the credit of every such witness, so attesting the execution of any such will or codicil, in any of the cases in this act beforementioned, and all circumstances relating thereto, shall be subject to the consideration and determination of the court and jury before whom any such witness shall be examined, or his testimony or attestation made use of, or of the court of equity in which the testimony or attestation of any such witness shall be made use of, in like manner to all intents and purposes, as the credit of witnesses in all other cases ought to be considered of and determined.

No person, after refusing legacy, &c. by act declared void; or after being examined as a witness, to receive bequest, &c. or any composition for bequest, &c. under will.

X. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that no person to whom any beneficial estate, interest, gift, or appointment, shall be given or made, which is hereby enacted to be null and void, as aforesaid, or who shall have refused to receive any legacy or bequest on tender made as aforesaid, or who shall have been examined as a witness concerning the execution of such will or codicil, shall, after he shall have been so examined, demand or take possession of, or receive any profit or benefit of or from such estate, interest, gift, or appointment so given or made to him, in or by any such will or codicil, or demand, receive, or accept any such legacy or bequest, or any satisfaction or composition for the same, in any manner, or under any pretence or colour whatsoever.

No nuncupative will good, when bequest exceeds 60*l.* unless proved by at least one person bidden to bear witness to it by testator; nor unless made in last sickness, &c.

XI. And, for prevention of fraudulent practices in setting up nuncupative wills, which have been the occasion of much perjury, be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, that from and after the expiration of the said three calendar months, no nuncupative will shall be good, where the estate thereby bequeathed shall exceed the value of sixty pounds, current gold and silver money of this island, that is not proved by the oath of one witness at the least that was present at the making thereof; nor unless it be proved that the testator, at the time of pronouncing the same, did bid the person present bear witness that such was his will, or to that effect: nor unless such nuncupative will were made in the time of the last sickness of the deceased, and in the house of his or her habitation or dwelling, or where he or she hath been resident for the space of ten days, or more, next before the making of such will, except where such person was surprised or taken sick, being from his or her own home, and died before he or she returned to the place of his or her dwelling.

Six months after nuncupative will, no testimony good that was not committed to writing in six days after will pronounced.

XII. And be it further enacted, that after six months next after the speaking of the pretended testamentary words, no testimony shall be received to prove any nuncupative will, except the said testimony, or the substance thereof, were committed to writing within six days after the making of the said will.

No probate to be granted till fourteen days after decease of testator, that the widow or kindred may, if they think proper, enter caveat.

XIII. And be it further enacted, that no letters testamentary, or probate of any nuncupative will, shall be proved before the governor in chief, or such other person having power to take the probate of wills, till fourteen days, at the least, after the decease of the testator be fully expired; nor shall any nuncupative will be, at any time, received to be proved, unless process hath first issued to call in the widow, or next of kindred to the deceased, to the end that they may combat the same if they please.

No will in writing concerning personal estate, repealable by oral will; except proof be made by one witness at least, that in testator's lifetime, same was committed to writing, read to and allowed by him.

XIV. And be it further enacted, that no will in writing, concerning any goods, or chattels, or personal estate, shall be repealed, nor shall any clause, devise, or bequest therein, be altered or changed, by any words, or will by word of mouth only; except the same be, in the lifetime of the testator, committed to writing, and, after writing thereof, read to the testator, and allowed by him, and proved to be so done by one witness at the least.—Dated at Antigua, 22d September, 1786. 26 Geo. No. 475.

Deeds and powers of attorney proved by deposition before officer prescribed to have been executed in Great Britain or Ireland, or any British colony, [*and by No.*509. s. 5. in states of America] to be received. See No. 198. s. 5. No. 270. s. 3.

By a temporary act of Assembly of Antigua, from time to time continued, and by virtue of an act of assembly, dated the 6th day of February 1818, now in force, intituled "An Act for establishing Courts of Common Pleas, Error, King's Bench, and Grand Session; and for the better regulating and settling due Methods for the administration of Justice," it is enacted by sect. LVIII. "That conveyances and deeds, and also letters of attorney, procurations, and other powers in writing, made in places out of this island, which shall at any time after the publication of this act, be produced in any court of justice within this island, with a deposition proving the same, sworn before the lord mayors of London, York, or Dublin, or any other mayor or chief officer of any city or town corporate within the kingdoms of Great Britain or Ireland, and attested under the public seal of such city or town corporate, or under the hand and public seal of any chief governor, or president of the council of any colony in his Majesty's dominions, and annexed to every such instrument of writing, shall be deemed, adjudged, and taken as sufficient evidence in law and equity, as if the witnesses therein named, and having subscribed the same, were personally present, and made such proof, viva voce: provided such deeds, if concerning lands and tenements, or slaves, be in all respects duly acknowledged and recorded in the register's office of Antigua, as the laws of Antigua heretofore made direct and require.

If relating to lands, tenements, or slaves, to be acknowledged and recorded in register's office.

LIX. And be it also enacted by the authority aforesaid, that proof in the common form, of wills, under the seal of the prerogative court of Canterbury, or under the seals of any other courts, of probate of wills in his Majesty's dominions hereinbefore mentioned, shall be allowed and taken, prima facie, as good proof of such wills, both in law and equity, to prove real and personal devises and bequests within this island; such wills and probates being first recorded in the secretary's office of this island; and in case of devises of such realities, to be first recorded in both the register's and secretary's office of this island, with the probates; saving always the right of all and every person, to invalidate, disprove, or set aside, the same wills, by lawful or equitable causes, as though this act had not been made.

Probates of wills under the seal of prerogative court of Canterbury, or other competent courts, evidence; when recorded in Antigua; for personal estate, with secretary; for real, with secretary and register.

LXXXII. That from and after the date of this act, where any judgment shall be entered upon confession, Nihil dicit, or non sum informatus, the counsel who confesses such judgment shall leave his warrant of attorney in the secretary's office of this island, in order to have the same recorded, at the time he confesses such judgment: or, in default thereof: or, in case it shall appear from such warrant of attorney, that such judgment was irregularly confessed; such judgment, and the execution, if any issued thereupon, shall be of no force, virtue, or effect whatever; any law, usage, or custom to the contrary notwithstanding. And the said secretary, or his deputy, is hereby required to give to the counsel, who shall leave such warrant of attorney with him for the purpose aforesaid, an acknowledgment in writing, signed with his hand, of the receipt of such warrant of attorney, mentioning particularly, as near as may be, the day, hour, and minute he received the same.

Warrant of attorney for confession of judgment, to be left in secretary's office, at time of confession, to be recorded: In default; or, if confession appear from warrant irregular, judgment and execution to be void. Secretary to give counsel receipt for warrant of attorney.

LXXXIV. That no execution shall issue upon any judgment which has lain dormant for the space of one year and a day, unless a scire facias shall issue thereon; EXCEPT where the plaintiff has been held under injunction in Chancery, or order of the Court of Chancery, or by writ of error, and it shall appear, by affidavit in writing, filed in the secretary's office, in case of such injunction, that the plaintiff was so held under injunction.

Conveyances void as to creditors, unless made for valuable consideration.

C. And all deeds, conveyances, and assurances, in writing, or otherwise, of slaves, lands, tenements, goods, and chattels whatsoever, are hereby declared to be null and void, as to creditors; unless the party or parties to whom the same is made, make it appear by legal proof, that he is actually and bonâ fide a purchaser for valuable consideration, really paid or secured, without any covin; or for other valuable considerations in law, according to the laws and statutes provided and made, before the settlement of this island, in such cases.

English statute of 3 W. & M. cap. 14. for relief of creditors against fraudulent devises, in force in Antigua:

CI. And to prevent the defrauding of creditors, by fraudulent devises of lands, tenements, and hereditaments, be it, and it is hereby enacted by the authority aforesaid, that the statute made in England, the third year of our late sovereign lord and lady King William and Queen Mary, chapter the fourteenth, intituled, An Act for the Relief of Creditors against fraudulent Devises, as extant in the same book [the Statutes at large], printed by the printers of the crown, shall be of force for the future in this island, as to the devise of any person or persons dying after the date of this act; and such statute book shall be equal evidence as the record or enrolment could be, in all cases whatsoever within this island.

The benefit of trusts in lands, &c. liable to judgments and executions, as such property is liable in England under 29 Car. II. cap. 3. s. 10, 11. with the difference that the trusts be sold as lands in execution, under s. 103. 104. 123. 124. 126. of this act, and be liable in case of action, as lands under s. 101.

CII. And for the better support of credit, be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, that from and after the date hereof, the benefit of Trusts of lands, tenements, hereditaments, and slaves within this island, whether such trusts be now created or in being, or shall hereafter be created and in being, shall be liable to judgments and executions, and be assets in all respects, and the heir and other persons be chargeable therefore, in the same manner as such lands, tenements, hereditaments, and heirs, and persons are liable in England, by the statute made in the twenty-ninth year of the reign of our late sovereign lord Charles the second, chapter the third, entituled, An Act for prevention of Frauds and Perjuries, as the same is extant in the statutes at large printed by the printers to the crown; with the following alterations, that is to say, THAT the whole trusts in all the lands and tenements, hereditaments, and slaves, shall be sold, and execution be thereon done, as hereinafter directed, in case of lands, tenements, hereditaments, and slaves, respectively; and that such trusts shall be liable, against any purchasers thereof in all respects, on the entry of an action, or suit in equity, as lands, tenements, hereditaments, and slaves, are before or after hereby made liable. And all estates, for the term of any other person's life or lives, of lands, tenements, here-

CXXVII. And that conveyances of lands, tenements, hereditaments, and slaves, sold in execution, shall be made by the provost marshal, or his lawful deputy of this island, at the costs of the purchasers thereof; and shall be good for such estate, trust, equity of redemption, and interest therein, to such purchaser or purchasers, their heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, as the party from whom they were taken by executions could have made or granted, or was entitled to, and no longer or otherwise; so always as the conveyances passing any such lands, tenements, slaves, or hereditaments, be acknowledged before the register of this island or his deputy for the time being, and duly recorded in the register's office as usual, and the laws of this island require. And the marshal and his deputy shall, and are hereby required and empowered, to put all purchasers of lands and slaves in quiet possession, if required. And the marshal's or his deputy's sales or certificates, only, not sealed, shall be good for other goods and chattels, to the purchasers, as far as the person or persons from whom they were taken had title.

Conveyances by marshal, of lands, tenements, and slaves, sold in execution, to be at expense of purchaser, and to be as effectual as if by defendant, if duly recorded in register's office.

Marshal, if required, to give purchaser possession.

Marshal's sale or certificate, not sealed, sufficient for goods and chattels.

CXXVIII. And whereas deeds with acknowledgments to bar entails, reversions, and remainders, are become the common assurance to purchasers, mortgagees, and creditors, when executed pursuant to a certain general act of the Leeward Caribbee islands in America, passed in the reign of her late Majesty Queen Anne, intituled, An Act for supplying the want of Fines and Recoveries in these Islands, and for making any Deed or Deeds, duly executed and acknowledged before any of her Majesty's justices of her Court of Common Pleas, in the kingdom of England or Ireland, or any of these islands, equivalent to a Fine and Recovery, or Fines and Recoveries, duly and regularly levied and suffered in any of her Majesty's courts of record at Westminster, dated at Nevis, the twenty-first day of June, one thousand seven hundred and five. Be it therefore enacted by the authority aforesaid, that all deeds of sale which shall be executed by the marshal, or his deputy, by virtue of this act, if executed and acknowledged before the register of deeds of this island, shall be, to all intents and purposes, as effectual to bar entails, reversions, and remainders,

No. 537.

An act of assembly of Antigua, intituled, An Act to extend the Provisions of an Act, made in general council and assembly of the Leeward Caribbee islands, and passed in the reign of Queen Anne, entitled, An act for supplying the want of fines and recoveries in these islands; and for making any deed or deeds, duly executed and acknowledged before any of her Majesty's justices of the court of Common Pleas in the kingdom of England or Ireland, or of any of these islands, equivalent to a fine and recovery, or fines and recoveries, duly and regularly levied and suffered in any of her Majesty's courts of record at Westminster, by declaring the same powers and authorities in ALL of the justices of her Majesty's Courts of King's Bench, and of the barons of the Exchequer in ENGLAND or IRELAND, for receiving the acknowledgment of any Deed or Deeds executed before them as are by the said recited act vested in the justices of the said courts of Common Pleas, in the said two kingdoms.

PREAMBLE.

WHEREAS notwithstanding great conveniency and other advantages have very often resulted to the proprietors of lands, tenements, slaves, and other hereditaments, situated in this island, by means of the act for supplying the want of fines and recoveries: yet such conveniency and advantages have been sometimes found not so easy, direct, and ample, to persons become parties to deeds necessary to be executed and acknowledged before some justice of the court of Common Pleas pursuant to the said act, when such parties happened to reside, either in England or Ireland, in parts distant from the metropolis of each kingdom, and, by means of which, have been compelled to travel, at some considerable share of expense and labour, to attend one of the justices of the court of Common Pleas, who generally reside in the metropolis of each respective kingdom to which their respective courts are affixed: and whereas such expense and labour might be often diminished hereafter, and the general intent of the said act would be rendered more effectual, if all the judges of his Majesty's three principal courts of common law in each kingdom, were vested with the full and equal power for taking the acknowledgment of deeds, in lieu of levying fines, and of suffering common recoveries, as is exclusively given to the judges of the Common Pleas in the said kingdoms, by reason that two judges in each kingdom will, twice in a year at least, by travelling the circuits, be placed in situations, at known periods, at some near and more convenient distance to the habitations of all such parties, who might happen to dwell at a great distance from the metropolis as aforesaid; we, therefore, your Majesty's most dutiful, loyal, and obedient subjects, the commander in chief in and over all your Majesty's Leeward Caribbee islands in America, and the council and assembly of this your Majesty's island Antigua, most humbly pray your most excellent Majesty, that it may be enacted and ordained; and be it, and it is hereby enacted and ordained by the authority aforesaid, that, immediately from and after the passing and publication of this act, any deed or deeds, made and entered into by husband and wife, or by tenant in tail general or special, or by any other party or parties by whom any interest is intended to pass, by force and operation of the act, entitled, An Act for supplying the want of Fines and Recoveries in these islands; and for making any Deed or Deeds executed and acknowledged before any of her Majesty's justices of England or Ireland, or any of these islands, equivalent to a Fine and Recovery duly and regularly levied and suffered in any of her Majesty's courts of record at Westminster; dated at Nevis, the twenty-first day of June, one thousand seven hundred and five, in the fourth year of the reign of her Majesty Queen Anne; such deed or deeds may be executed and acknowledged, before any one of the judges or justices of his Majesty's courts of KING'S BENCH, or before any one of the judges or barons of his Majesty's COURT OF EXCHEQUER, either in the kingdom of England or Ireland: and that every examination or examinations, acknowledgment or acknowledgments, of the party or parties, subscribed by such judge, justice, or baron, before whom he, she, or they, did appear, shall be, to all intents and purposes whatsoever, as valid and effectual in law to pass all and every estate, right, title, and interest, and claim of the party or parties, and of each of them, to such deed or deeds, as if the same was or were executed and acknowledged before any of the justices of the court of Common Pleas, in either of the said kingdoms, as directed by the herein recited act: any thing to the contrary thereof in any wise notwithstanding.—Dated at St. Christopher's, 4th September, 1799, 39 Geo. prise all the laws of Antigua relating to conveyances up to September 1822. The laws of Antigua, like all other laws, have gradually attained their present improved state, according to the wants and necessities of the subject; and as each subsequent law depends, to a certain extent, on the preceding laws, the extracts occupy a much greater number of pages, than was expected at the commencement of the undertaking. The colonial laws being in the possession of only a few individuals, they are stated by way of extract in preference to giving the result, as it enables the reader to peruse the very law itself. The index to the notes, in this as well as in every other instance, will give a short analysis of the subject, and state any alteration which may have taken place, either by means of new acts, or decisions, between the above period and the time when the index is made.

Power of attorney to acknowledge a colonial deed, may be in the body, or indorsed, or annexed.

Proof of the execution must be made by one of the witnesses.

(p) The power of attorney from a person absent from the Islands to acknowledge a deed, is usually inserted in the deed itself; but it may be made by an indorsement under hand and seal, or by an annexed deed. If it be inserted in the deed, the execution of the deed by the absent person, must be proved on oath by one of the subscribing witnesses, agreeably to No. 475. s. 58, ante, 238. But if the power of attorney be by a distinct indorsed or annexed deed, the execution of the deed and the power of attorney also must be proved in the same manner. So also when a power of attorney authorises the execution of colonial deeds, or otherwise concerns lands, tenements, or slaves, there should be a power inserted to acknowledge the power;

Unless an affidavit by one of the subscribing witnesses, of the execution of a deed made out of any of the islands, and the attestation or certificate of the mayor, &c. be annexed to the deed, the registrar will not register it, and it will be returned in order that it may be done. In the certificate by a mayor, &c. of the affidavit of the execution of colonial deeds, it has been usual in practice ever since the following English statute, to refer to it, as the authority by which the certificate is made; yet it does not appear that the letter of the act is any authority for it. If no reference were made to any statute, the certificate would be equally effectual. But as Lord Coke says, "it is a safe thing to follow approved precedents, for nihil simul inventum est et perfectum." Co. Litt. 230. a.

SLAVE REGISTRY ACT.

Directions as to the schedule of registered slaves.

For, by the English statute 59 Geo. III. c. 120, entituled "An Act for establishing a Registry of Colonial Slaves in Great Britain, and for making further provision with respect to the removal of Slaves from the British Colonies," it is requisite that the names and descriptions of the slaves, according to the latest registration in Great Britain, should be set forth either in the body of the deed, or in a schedule, as above mentioned. A certificate of the names and descriptions of the slaves should be procured from the office established by virtue of the act, at No. 13, James Street, Buckingham Gate, London. The hours of attendance at the office are from ten to four every day, except Sundays, and such holydays as are kept at the Bank of England.

Where there is no lease for a year, which appears, ante, 222, to be unnecessary, some gentlemen annex the registrar's certificate to the conveyance, either having it stamped with a progressive deed stamp duty, or having sufficient stamps on the skins to cover the number of words in the certificate. But the slaves are more commonly enumerated in a new schedule copied from the registrar's; for the certificate being on paper, it is more liable to damage and decay than parchment.

Under the third section of the act, the commissioners of his Majesty's treasury, have appointed the following,

SLAVE REGISTRY ACT.

By 59 Geo. III, c. 120, after Jan. 1, 1820, no purchase to be made, or money lent in Great Britain or Ireland, on security of slaves, unless the slaves be registered.

Sale, mortgage, or charge, otherwise made, to be void, &c.

What taken to be duly registering.

By sec. viii, it is enacted, "That from and after the first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and twenty, it shall not be lawful for any of his Majesty's subjects in this united kingdom to purchase, or to lend or advance any money, goods, or effects upon the security of any slave or slaves in any of his Majesty's colonies or foreign possessions, unless such slave or slaves shall appear by the return received therein, to have been first duly registered in the said office of the registrar of colonial slaves; and that every sale, mortgage and conveyance, or assurance of, and every charge or other security upon any slave or slaves not so appearing to be registered, which at any time or times after the said first day of January one thousand eight hundred and twenty, shall be made or executed within this united kingdom, to or in trust for any of his Majesty's subjects, shall be absolutely null and void in respect of any such unregistered slave or slaves; and that for this purpose no slave or slaves shall be deemed and taken to be duly registered, unless it shall appear that a return of such slave or slaves, duly made by the owner or owners or other persons in his or their behalf, in manner and form required by law, in the colony in which such slave or slaves may reside, or a copy or abstract of such return, shall have been received in the office of the said registrar, from the colony in which such slave or slaves shall reside, within the four years next preceding the date of such sale, mortgage, conveyance, or assurance, charge or security as aforesaid."

No deed executed for the conveyance of slaves valid, unless registered name, &c. of slave set forth.

IX. And "that from and after the said first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and twenty, no deed or instrument made or executed within this united kingdom, whereby any slave or slaves in any of the said colonies shall be intended to be mortgaged, sold, charged, or in any manner transferred or conveyed, or any estate or interest therein created or raised, shall be good or valid in law, to pass or convey, charge or affect any such slave or slaves, unless the registered name and description, or names and descriptions of such slave or slaves, shall be duly set forth in such deed or instrument, or in some schedule thereupon indorsed or thereto annexed, according to the then latest registration or corrected registration of such slave or slaves in the said office of the registrar of slaves: Provided always, that no deed or instrument shall be avoided or impeached, by reason of a clerical error in setting forth the names and descriptions of any slave or slaves therein, or in any schedule thereto contained, not shall the same be avoided or impeached by reason of any disagreement between the names and descriptions, and the entries thereof in the books of registry, or duplicate registry, which shall have arisen from any error or Misnomers not to invalidate deed.

Examination of the question, whether a charge or mortgage on a benefice be an ineligible security, in consequence of the stat. 13 Eliz. c. 20, or as being contrary to the principles of public policy.

(a) Doubts having been entertained, in consequence of the revival of part of the 13th Eliz. c. 20, and on principles of public policy, whether a clergyman can charge or demise his living by way of mortgage, &c. so as to bind himself; and whether a sequestration can issue on a judgment, under a preconcerted arrangement that the living shall be sequestered, it seems requisite to endeavour to ascertain, whether those doubts are well founded.

Leases of benefices with cure, to be void on the parson's non-residence.

The first section of the temporary act, 13th Eliz. c. 20, entituled, "An Act touching leases of benefices, and other ecclesiastical livings with cure," is in the following words:—"That the livings appointed for ecclesiastical ministers, may not, by corrupt and indirect dealings, be transferred to other uses; be it enacted, by the authority of this present parliament, that no lease, after the fifteenth day of May next following the beginning of this parliament, to be made of any benefice or ecclesiastical promotion with cure, or any part thereof, and not being impropriated, shall endure any longer than while the lessor shall be ordinarily resident, and serving the cure of such benefice, without absence above fourscore days in any one year; but that every such

By the 14th Eliz. c. 11. s. 14, that part of the above clause in crotchets was repealed. And by the same act, s. 15, reciting, that "sundry evil disposed persons have defrauded the true meaning of the said statute, 13 Eliz. c. 20, by bonds and covenants, of suffering other persons to enjoy ecclesiastical livings, and the fruits thereof, for that such bonds and covenants are not in law taken to be leases, although, indeed, they amount to as much," it was "therefore enacted, that all bonds, contracts, promises, and covenants hereafter to be made for suffering or permitting any person to enjoy any benefice or ecclesiastical promotion with cure, or to take profits or fruits thereof, shall be to all intents and purposes revived so much of the 13th Eliz. c. 20, as was not repealed by the 57th Geo. III. c. 99. s. 1. For when a repealing act is repealed, the first act repealed is revived: Spencer's case, cited 12 Co. 7. 2 Inst. 686. 4 Inst. 325. Readings upon the Statutes, Parl. 1 Bla. Com. 90: and all acts explaining and amending the act so revived, are revived also. Williams v. Rougheedge, 2 Burr. 747. Therefore, if that part of the statute, 13th Eliz. c. 20. relating to chargings of benefices, be a distinct clause, it was revived, and has been in force from the 10th July, 1817, the date of the 57th Geo. III. c. 99. However, chargings made on ecclesiastical benefices, between the 7th July, 1803, the date of the 43d Geo. III. c. 84, and the 10th July, 1817, are free from any objection, on account of the 13th Eliz. c. 20. For, where one statute is repealed by another, the acts done in the mean time are valid. Jenk. The part of 13 Eliz. c. 20, relating to chargings, revived.

Chargings made during the repeal, unobjectional on account of the 13 Eliz. c. 20.

The purpose for which the 13th Eliz. c. 20, was made, is thus stated by Burn:—This statute was intended to prevent corrupt bargains between patron and clerk; it being at that time a practice for patrons to get some unworthy clergyman to take institution to their vacant benefices, upon condition of having leases of those benefices made to themselves at very low rates; by which means these patrons secured the main of the benefices to themselves, and got them served at any rate by stipendiary curates, while the incumbents were non resident, and making their fortunes elsewhere: so that the statute was not primarily designed against non-residence, but against such non-residents as, by

As a lease for years, or a grant of a rent charge by a parson, either to commence in his life-time, or after his death, and confirmed by the patron and ordinary, bound the successor, before the 13th Eliz. c. 20; the latter part of the act was intended for the successor's benefit.

The latter part of the act relating to chargings appears to have been intended for the benefit of the successor; for, as the 13th Eliz. c. 10, did not extend to charges, before the act, 13th Eliz. c. 20, a parson, with the confirmation of the patron and ordinary, might have granted a rent charge to bind his successor. 4 Bac. Dyer, 69 a. pl. 30, is the following case:—"A parson makes a lease of his glebe for a term of years, the term to commence after his death; or makes a grant of a rent charge, in like manner, and the patron and ordinary confirm it; it was moved in the Bench, whether the successor should be bound by this charge? And it was thought, that he should be bound, because it is a grant and charge immediately, although it did not take effect in the life of the grantor: but

Leases made by archbishops and bishops, contrary to their disabling statute, bind the lessor for his time.

As it has been contended, that the words of the act declaring all chargings to be void, disables the incumbent in possession from charging for his own time, so as to bind himself, it will be requisite to see how these words have been construed in other similar cases. Thus the 1 Eliz. c. 19. s. 5, declares, "that all leases, grants, &c. made by any archbishop or bishop, of any hereditaments, being parcel of the possessions of his archbishoprick or bishoprick, other than for the term of twenty-one years, or three lives, whereupon the accustomed yearly rent or more shall be reserved, and payable during the said term of twenty-one years, or three lives, shall be utterly void, and of no effect, to all intents, constructions, and purposes; any law, custom, or usage to the contrary in any wise notwithstanding;" yet, in the construction of that statute, it has been held, that grants or leases, &c. not warranted by it, are not void, but are good against the lessor, during his

There is just as much reason for saying, that the 13th Eliz. c. 20, was made for the benefit of the successor, and that charges shall bind the person charging for his time, because in neither of these statutes is the successor in any manner alluded to. That appears to have been the opinion formerly entertained; for Sheppard, after citing the 13th Eliz. c. 20, says, "Bishops, deans, parsons, and such like spiritual persons, cannot grant the next advowsons of churches, neither can they grant rents out of their spiritual livings, but the same charges will be void after their death. And if a bishop suffer an annuity to be recovered against him by a pretence of title of prescription, on a judgment after a verdict or confession; or a parson in such a case pray in aid of the patron, and so suffer an annuity to be recovered; this will not bind the successor." dealings by a clergyman to be void;

such bargain and contract shall be utterly void, and of none effect. Lord Hardwicke, when this statute was pressed on the Court, to prevent a commission of bankrupt being supported against a clergyman, said, "if it could be shewn, that the petitioner had committed a plain act of bankruptcy, and had traded, he would not supersede the commission, because a man has the hardiness, in a court of justice, to say, I have been guilty of a breach of one law, and therefore release me from the breach of another. The statute, 21 Hen. VIII. is rather in the nature of a prohibition, and a prohibition will not exempt him from being a bankrupt; for if a man, with his eyes open, will break the law, that does not make void the contract. It is undoubtedly very improper for a person to say, I have broke the law, and therefore I am exempt from any remedy a creditor may have against me; and the petitioner cannot take advantage of the breach of one law, in order to avoid his being subject to another. I am inclined to be of opinion on this part of the act, that the contract shall be void, as to the parson himself only; for it would be a most extraordinary construction of the statute, that the bargain shall be void for his own benefit; and it would be very mischievous to construe the act in such a manner." Ex parte Maymot, 1 Atk. 198. [See also as to the construction put on the word "void," in the 53 Geo. III. c. 141, Vol. I. 330. Ed. n.]

Supposing a grant of a rent-charge by a clergyman out of his benefice, is void by 13 Eliz. c. 20, yet if in the deed of grant he covenant to pay the rent-charge, and give a warrant of attorney to confess judgment as a collateral security, the court will not order the deeds to be de-

There is a case in which such a grant of an annuity has been questioned on the ground of the statute, 13 Eliz. c. 20; however, on that point the court gave no positive opinion, but held the covenant for payment, and the warrant of attorney, to be valid. Thus, in 1799, in Mouys v. Leake and another, 8 Durnf. and East, 411; a rule was obtained, calling on the plaintiff to shew cause why the defendant should not be discharged out of execution, and why a deed made for securing an annuity, and charging the payment thereof upon benefices with cure of souls, and demising the benefices to a trustee, upon the usual trusts, with covenants by the defendant and his surety to pay the annuity, and the warrant of attorney, and the judgment entered thereon, should not be vacated, and why the fieri facias de bonis ecclesiasticis et capias ad satisfaciendum, should not be set aside. It was argued for the

AND the said [grantor] doth also grant unto the said [grantee], his executors, administrators, and assigns, that from time to time, when, and as often as it shall happen, that the said annuity or clear yearly sum of pounds, or any part thereof, shall be in arrear and unpaid, by the space of twenty-eight days, next over or after any one of the said days whereon the same is hereinbefore appointed to be paid as aforesaid;

grantee, that even admitting that the grant of the annuity out of the profits of the livings is void by the statute, 13 Eliz. c. 20, still the covenants of the defendants, which are personal covenants to pay the annuity, are good. And, at all events, the warrant of attorney is not affected by the invalidity of the deed, the consideration of which, as appears by the warrant of attorney, was 700*l.* borrowed.—For the grantor it was argued, that the grant of the rent charge out of the livings is void by the common, the canon, and the statute law. It is void by the common law; this comes within the principle of those cases in which it has been holden, that the assignment of the half-pay of an officer of the army is void; the profits of livings being given for the dignity of the church, and for the decent support of the incumbents. In Linw. 149, it appears, that sales and mortgages of benefices were prohibited by the canon law. And in Vaugh. 327, it is said, that "a lawful canon is the law of the kingdom." But however the grant of this rent charge may be affected either by the common or canon law, it is clearly void by the stat. 13 Eliz. which it was said, was scarcely denied by the plaintiff's counsel. That statute extends to sales, mortgages, and charges of every kind upon livings; therefore, the profits of benefices cannot be charged or taken for the payment of debts. Then, if the grant of the rent charge be "utterly void," according to the words of the statute, the warrant of attorney which was given, not for any other consideration, but as it is expressly stated in the memorial, "as a collateral security for payment of the said annuity," is also void; and the court will permit the defendants to take advantage of this objection on a summary application, because this is the only opportunity they have to avoid the effect of the warrant of attorney. Then it is said, that the defendant's covenants in the deed may be enforced, because they are personal covenants: but, in the first place, the same observation that applied to the warrant of attorney, is also applicable to these; they are covenants to pay the same annuity, or rent charge; and if the grant of the rent charge be itself void, the covenants to pay it must also be void *. Lord Kenyon, Ch. J. said, "Many cases have been cited, and the

* Mr. Francis Plowden, who may be considered as the founder of the modern objections on the subject of the above note, was the most urgent advocate for invalidating the above grant: his arguments are stated in detail in Plowden on Usury, 296, 306, being the first law book, in which doctrines, according to Lord Kenyon's expression, "contrary to common honesty," (7 Durnf. & East, 554, ante, Vol. I. 523.) were publicly broached. The data of his reasoning, however far fetched, might have had a plausible appearance, if the catholic religion had continued the established religion of this country, and the clergy had been obliged to maintain their ancient hospitality, and had not been, as under the protestant religion, permitted to amalgamate with the laity. Indeed, it is extremely singular that Mr. Plowden, who was himself a catholic, should have been so furiously zealous in supporting, according to his notions, the dignity of a protestant church, by enabling her clergy to evade their contracts. The canon referred to by Mr. Plowden in Lyndwood's Provinciale, was made by Stephen Langton, Archbishop of Canterbury, at a Provincial Council held at Oxford in 1222; it only extended to the clergy of that archbishopric, and even as common, the canon, and the statute law has been resorted to by the counsel for the defendants. But I think that none of the cases cited are applicable to the present. The ground of decision in those cases, in which it was holden, that the half-pay of officers in the army could not be assigned, was, that the officers have no fixed durable interest in it, as the clergy have in their benefices, but that it depends on the bounty of the crown, that allows them certain benefits to enable them to attend whenever their services may be required. The canon law has been referred to, as if all the canons were part of the law of the land. But those canons only that have already been incorporated into our law, are considered as part of the law of England. Some of the canons indeed mentioned in Linwood have been so incorporated: but whether or not the canon, that has been cited from that book, has been received into our law, may be known by referring to our statutes. If the canon relied on were part of our law, all the disabling and restraining statutes were nugatory. That before the passing of those statutes, there existed a power in ecclesiastical bodies to alienate the possessions of the church, and that there still exists a power in them, modified in the manner prescribed by those statutes, cannot be doubted; the prohibition on alienations by the clergy is therefore to be learnt from those to them it only prohibited such alienations, as were made without observing the form of the canon. Causa 12, ques. 2, referred to in the Commentary, is full of canons to this purpose; but it seems, the 56th canon, which obliges him who alienates from the church to give as much of his own as he takes away, is the canon particularly meant.

statutes. I am not prepared to say, that the statute, 13 Eliz. c. 20, may not extend to this case: but I deny that the consequences contended for follows, that therefore the present rule must be made absolute. Even admitting, that every thing that was done by the defendant, Leake, to charge or to affect the livings directly, is absolutely void; still the defendant's argument on this point is not true in its extent: it was said, that in no case can the profits of a benefice be applicable to the payment of debts: but if that were so, what is to become of all the process de bonis ecclesiasticis? Now in this case, one of the defendants executed a deed, by which he granted an annuity or rent charge out of certain benefices: this is not malum in se; there is nothing wrong in such a transaction, except as far as it is prohibited by the statute; if, indeed, there had been any moral turpitude mixed in it, I would have followed it in all its consequences. But a deed that was intended to operate one way, may operate another way, ut res magis valeat quam pereat, if honesty requires it. Then why may not this deed, which was intended to operate as a rent charge upon the living, have effect as a personal security against the grantor, containing, as it does, a covenant to pay the annuity? A deed of feoffment may, if there be no livery, operate as a covenant to stand seised to uses; and so in many other instances. I will not, however, give any judicial opinion, whether or not this deed be void by the statute of Elizabeth, which certainly contains some very strong expressions: the reason of making that act was, because, in former times, the patron sometimes presented a needy incumbent, who, being content to take the living on any terms, agreed to grant leases in favour of the patron himself. And I should object to any thing being done obliquely, that

There was another point in the case, stated ante, Vol. I. 460, in which the defendants also failed. His lordship concluded his decree in these words: "I am glad to find, that the judgment I am bound to give, coincides with my wishes on this occasion, and that the law and justice of the case meet in the same point."

Held, that as a parson cannot convey his benefice, it does not pass to his assignees under an insolvent debtors' act.

However, in February 1803, in Arbuckle v. Cowton, 3 Bos. & Pull. 321, where it was held, that the profits of an ecclesiastical benefice do not pass to the assignees under an insolvent debtors' act, though included in the insolvent's schedule, Lord Alvanley, in delivering the judgment of the court, said, p. 328, "at common law, a parson could make no lease to bind his successor, unless confirmed by the patron and ordinary. In the reigns of Hen. VIII. and Eliz., several statutes were passed, introducing further restrictions with respect to the power of ecclesiastics over their benefices. Until the 13 Eliz. c. 20, they all appear to have been made for the benefit of the successor; so great was the anxiety of the legislature, however, to prevent ecclesiastics from divesting their own rights, that the statute 13 Eliz. c. 20, explained by 18 Eliz. c. 11, empowers them to take advantage of their own non-residence to defeat leases made by themselves. Such has been determined to be the effect of that statute in the late case of Frogmorton dem. Fleming v. Scott, 2 East, 467." That case was decided before the part of the 13 Eliz. c. 20, relating to non-residency, was repealed, and the rector was permitted to take advantage of his own wrong, by annulling a lease made by himself, on the ground, that the lease was avoided in consequence of his own non-residence. Similar decisions had previously been made in Cox's case, 3 Leon. 102. Jennings v. Haithwaite, Yelv. 106. and see Doe dem. Crisp v. Barber, 2 Durnf. & East, 749. Degge's Parson's Counsellor, 125, 6th ed. The chief, if not the only intention of that part of the act, was to prevent non-residence; and it was by those decisions accomplished. So far certainly that part of the statute may be said to be made for the benefit of the incumbent for the time being, if a man can acquire any real benefit from such a dishonourable proceeding. In a moral point of view, it is highly to be regretted, that any man, but more especially a clergyman, should have been permitted to avoid his own contract deliberately made, by taking advantage of his own miscon-

But these decisions were on another branch of the statute, and do not affect the question of charging. Lord Alvanley added, "it is now clearly established, that the half-pay of an officer is not assignable; and unquestionably any salary paid for the performance of a public duty, ought not to be perverted to other uses than those for which it is intended. Notwithstanding the case of Stewart v. Tucker, 2 Wm. Bla. 1137, in which it was held, that the half-pay of an officer was assignable in equity, it was expressly decided in Flarty v. Odlum, 3 Durnf. & East, 681, that it was not assignable at all, which decision met with general approbation*. This doctrine is very analogous to that which has been adopted with respect to ecclesiastics; the same policy is applicable to both cases. Whatever advantage might be derived through the intervention of the ordinary, I am of opinion that by no conveyance of the party himself could he divest himself of his benefice." p. 330. The principle on which this case is founded, appears to be very questionable. For, the supposed analogy of the decisions in relation to the pay of officers, and those which have enabled ecclesiastics to defeat their own leases in consequence of their own non-residence, did not exist. The former decisions were founded purely on principles of public policy; whereas the latter were founded entirely on a clause of a positive act of parliament; and since the repeal of that clause, such a decision cannot be made. Therefore, the fallacy of the principle of public policy, by analogy to the case of a public grant, to continue during the pleasure of the crown, is a strong objection to the principle of the case. That application of the principle, is opposed by other authorities of equal, if not of greater weight. In Stone v. Lidderdale, 2 Anstr. 542, Lord Chief Baron Macdonald, in delivering the judgment of the Court in relation to the half pay of an officer, said, "the Courts of justice are not indeed to enter into any general abstract notions of public policy in their decisions, in opposition to the express intention of the parties; but in deciding upon the nature of a public grant, the great object of public policy in making that grant, is to be attended to." And Lord Kenyon had previously held, that as clergymen have a fixed durable interest in their benefices, there was no analogy between charges on the profits of their benefices, and assignments of officers' pay, ante, 262. Principles of public policy, should, at the present day, be cautiously applied to the revenues of the clergy; for supposing that tythes were not originally granted by individuals for expiating crimes, and for saying masses for the repose of the dead; but that they were a public grant to ecclesiastics, the minds of men are thereby forced to the consideration of the several purposes for which they were granted. See 1 Bla. Com. 385. Burn's Justice, tit. Poor, § 1. However, if a principle of public policy must be resorted to, it would rather require, that, after allowing a sufficient sum for performing the services of the church, and for maintaining the incumbent and his family, as in the case of a sequestration—the profits of a clergyman's benefice should be appropriated to payment of his debts, than that he should have been permitted to retain the whole profits of his benefice, and be discharged from paying his debts by a statute, the very principle of which was, that the property of the insolvent should be given up for the benefit of his creditors. Besides, it was useless for his lordship to refer to any advantage to be derived through the intervention of the ordinary, after the Insolvent Debtors' Act had freed the clergyman from payment of his debts; as the foundation of a sequestration must have been an action at law, where a discharge under that statute might have been pleaded in bar. The injustice of the consequences of this decision is now remedied by the Insolvent Debtors' Act, 1 Geo. IV. cap. 119, s. 38, by which the assignee or assignees of the estate and effects of a beneficed clergyman discharged under the act, are empowered "to apply for and obtain a sequestration of the profits of any such benefice, for the payment of the debts of any such clergyman, and the order for such discharge shall be a sufficient warrant for granting of such sequestration, without any writ or other proceedings to authorize the same; and such sequestration shall accordingly be issued, as the same might have been issued upon any writ of levari facias, founded upon any judgment against such clergyman." (a). Under which act, an annuity creditor of an insolvent debtor may receive dividends in the same manner as if the insolvent had been a bankrupt. Vide ante, Vol. I. 472, 478. The legislature have, so far, destroyed the application of his lordship's principles of public policy. Indeed, they are dangerous doctrines; they leave too much discretionary power in the breast of the judge; and whenever they are attempted to be extended, in order to invalidate bonâ fide contracts, they should be regarded with a very jealous eye. Lord Camden has justly said, "The discretion of a judge is the law of tyrants; it is always unknown; it is different in different men; it is casual, and depends upon constitution, temper, and passion. In the best, it is oftentimes caprice; in the worst, it is every vice, folly, and passion, to which human nature is liable." Doe v. Kersey, Fearne, 429, 3d ed. 535, Butl. ed. See also, 3 Bla. Com. 396, and Beccaria on Crimes, ch. iv. But independently of these objections, the latter part of Lord Alvanley's judgment, is in direct opposition to Magdalen College case, and to the other authorities, cited ante, 256, 258, if his lordship meant that a clergyman cannot charge or convey the profits of his benefice, so as to bind himself. That a parson cannot at this day make another person the clergyman, by granting over his incumbency, and so divest himself of his benefice, is clear from the resolution of the Court in Grendon v. The Bishop of Lincoln, 2 Plowd. Com. 496—7; but even there it was held, that he might make a valid lease of the glebe and tythes.

Precedents sub silentio, on the rule communis error facit jus.

It will be requisite in the next place, to advert to the precedents sub silentio, which, when there are no judicial precedents to the contrary, are admitted in our Courts as authority, 1 P. Wms. 223, on the rule communis error facit jus. 4 Inst. 240. Co. Litt. 186. a. and Hargr. n. (3), Wingate's Max. 752. Noy's Max. 37, 9th ed. 16 Vin. Abr. 500. For there have been many cases in which annuities charged on church livings have been endeavoured to be set aside; but in none of them, excepting Mouys v. Leake, has that part of the statute, 13 Eliz. c. 20, relating to chargings, been urged as an objection to the validity of the grant. Thus in 1741, Errington v. Howard and others, Ambl. 485, a rector intitled to an annual stipend of 125*l.* in lieu of tithes, in consideration of 640*l.*, assigned it to the plaintiff for ninety-nine years, if the rector should so long live, upon trust to retain an annuity of 80*l.* and pay the residue to the rector: afterwards the rector gave a bond and

And in 1774, Doe dem. Rogers v. Mears, Cowp. 129, in ejectment brought against a creditor of the rector, to recover two rectories in his possession, under a sequestration, upon a case reserved for the opinion of the court, the facts were as follows. "That upon the 9th of May, 1766, the rector, in pursuance of an agreement, and in consideration of 360*l.*, demised the rectories in question to the lessor of the plaintiff for ninety-nine years, if the rector should so long live, for the purpose of securing to the lessor of the plaintiff an annuity of 60*l.* per annum, with a power of entry, and likewise a power of distress and sequestration, if the annuity were in arrear. That the annuity was in arrear; that the rector absconded in December 1770, and had not been resident since." No witness was called on the part of the defendant, but it was admitted, that he was in possession under a sequestration. A verdict was found for the plaintiff, subject to the opinion of the court upon the following question; "Whether the deed and the lease under which the plaintiff made his title, was void by the statute 13 Eliz. c. 20?" Lord Mansfield said, "This is a very clear case. A sequestration under a fieri facias, is no impediment or prevention to the serving a cure; and therefore the non-residence is a clear avoidance of the lease." But the latter branch of the statute was not even mentioned. See also Murray v. Harding, in 1773, 2 Wm. Bla. 859. 3 Wils. 390, S. C. A sequestration upon a fi. fa. of a benefice with cure, was held to be no excuse for the non-residence of the incumbent: and a lease thereof made by him for securing an annuity, was, on account of such absence, held to be void, before that part of 13 Eliz. c. 20, relating to non-residence, was repealed.

grantor's bond and warrant of attorney, and deed of covenant; and as he had no church preferment at the time, he covenanted to charge any future church preferment, and to permit the grantee to sequester it: at the time application was made to have the securities delivered up, on the ground stated ante, Vol. I. 522, he had church preferment; but the court refused the application. See also Greathead v. Bromley, 7 Durnf. & East, 445, in 1798, in which two annuities were secured by a demise of two rectories, and two different applications were made to the court of King's Bench, to set the securities aside, for non-compliance with the annuity act, but which were refused; and the case was afterwards before Lord Alvanley at the Rolls, Bromley v. Holland, 5 Ves. 610, June 1800, and on appeal in March 1802, before Lord Eldon in Chancery, 7 Ves. 3; but in neither instance was there any objection raised on the ground of the 13 Eliz. The annuity charged on a benefice in Browne v. Rose, 6 Taunt. 124, was granted in 1813, whilst the 13 Eliz. was repealed; and although there was a demise of the benefice to a trustee, upon trusts to secure the annuity out of it, and a warrant of attorney to confess judgment, yet no objection was made on the ground of the other modern objection, that the grant was contrary to the principles of public policy.

church preferment, not objected to when an annuity was attempted to be set aside.

Mortgages of church livings, and conveyances of them in trust for creditors, have been frequently made, and their validity has not been questioned. The writer of these observations has now before him a copy of a demise of a church living, by a vicar, for the benefit of his creditors, drawn in 1769, by the celebrated Mr. Ralph Bradley, the author of the MS. Practical Points in Conveyancing; and he has several demises of benefices in trust for creditors, and grants of annuities charged on them, settled and approved by deceased and living conveyancers of the greatest eminence. Indeed it is a notorious fact, that the practice of granting annuities on ecclesiastical benefices, collaterally secured by a covenant and warrant of attorney to confess judgment, and generally with a bond also, has been common for many years past. Beneficial consequences have resulted from this practice, as it has enabled clergymen to raise sums to apprentice their children, and make other certain provisions for their families, which they could not have done out of their annual income. See 3 Bos. & Pull. 324 *.

Assuming a direct charge on a benefice to be void, it has been a general opinion that the grantee might sequestrate, under a warrant of attorney purposely given.

Assuming a direct charge on an ecclesiastical benefice to be void by the statute 13 Eliz. c. 20, (in order to examine this subject in every point of view) yet it has been a general opinion, that, under the warrant of attorney, the grantee might indirectly secure the annuity out of the profits of the living by means of a sequestration. Vide post, 285, (k). But there are exceptions to this general opinion. Therefore the various opinions of several eminent conveyancers on this important and interesting point, are presented to the reader, in order to put him in possession of the most forcible objections that have been made. Thus the late Mr. Walker, although he thought a charge would be void by the 13 Eliz. c. 20, gave an opinion in 1801, that a person who intended advancing his money in purchasing an annuity to be charged upon church preferment, might, he thought, safely advance it upon a bond and judgment; and that if the grantor of the annuity made default in payment, the annuitant might sequester the living. However Mr. Atherley adds, in a note to this opinion, "quære, if it could be proved, that the judgment was entered up with a view to enable the annuitant to come upon the living, the statute of Elizabeth being very strong." Atherley's MSS. Vol. I. p. 106. So in one of Mr. Atherley's subsequent opinions, where an annuity was intended to be charged on an ecclesiastical benefice, the income of which arose chiefly from two farms belonging to the living; he said "Upon these farms there is no doubt but a distress may be made, even in the hands of tenants whose leases were granted prior to the annuity, after giving them notice of the annuity. Moss v. Gallimore, Dougl. 279. When I say there is no doubt but a distress may be made, I take it for granted that Mr. Butler is right in his opinion, that a clergyman may charge ecclesiastical property with annuities, or other incumbrances, during his own incumbency. Though (as I said in my former opinion) I think he may, yet I think Mr. Butler has not sufficiently adverted to the distinction between a grant or lease reserving rent, and from which the incumbent is receiving an annual income, (and they are such grants and leases as these which have been held to be good as against the grantor) and a grant or charge which diminishes, or totally deprives him of his income; and which, consequently, deprives him of that decent support which his ecclesiastical character properly requires. There is no decided case, I believe, which has held such a grant or charge as this to be good; and my difficulty before was, whether the act of the 13th Eliz. c. 20, was not sufficiently strong to justify a Court (in case the question came before it) in holding that such a grant was not good; for if such a question should arise, and the Court should think that a clergyman ought not on the ground of public policy, to be at liberty to deprive himself of his income, by means of annuities or incumbrances; in that case, they might be induced to put the most extensive construction upon the act, which its literal import would bear; and, consequently, might hold that such a grant or charge was void. But though I think the ground of Mr. Butler's opinion is not very sound; yet, as I think that the act of the 13 Eliz. c. 20, was made solely for the benefit of the successor, so I still think that the intended grantee may venture to advance his money." look on the statute rather as a new act, without considering the purpose for which it was made, and the evil it was intended to remedy, than as an act on which there have been uniform decisions for upwards of two centuries) have, upon the same principle as Mr. Atherley, expressed similar doubts. But the opinion which demands the most attentive consideration, is the following given by Mr. Preston, 21st May, 1821; in which he says: "The proposed security is to be given by way of charge, on an ecclesiastical preferment. The statute of 13 Eliz. c. 20, was at one period repealed: the repealing statute is now repealed: so that the 13 Eliz. is in operation. For, although a sequestration may, notwithstanding the statute, be issued on a judgment obtained in an action of debt, &c. yet judgment confessed with a preconcerted arrangement, that a sequestration should be issued so as to charge the living, would, in my opinion, be deemed a charge within the meaning of the 13 Eliz. in like manner as a judgment confessed for the purpose of having execution sued; and a term of years taken in execution, would be deemed an assignment in contravention of a condition in restraint of assignment. So, leases at annual rents less than the value, and given for the purpose of securing an annuity, would be deemed a charge within the meaning of the statute. Under this impression, I do not think the proposed security would be eligible to the intended purchaser of an annuity. In point of law, each sequestration takes priority according to the priority of the delivery to the sheriff of the execution, which is the foundation for the sequestration. These sequestrations are the mode of giving effect to executions against chattels. They are not executions against a freehold estate, so as to operate by way of priority, according to the date of the judgment." No decision was cited to support this opinion; but the case alluded to is Doe dem. Mitchinson v. Carter, 8 Durnf. & East, 57; where it was held, that an assignment to a person purchasing a term for years from the sheriff under a bonâ fide execution, would not amount to a forfeiture of a lease under a condition giving to the lessor a power of re-entry, in case the lessee, his executors, administrators, or assigns, should let, set, assign, transfer, or make over the lease, or the premises thereby demised, or any part thereof, without the consent of the lessor, his heirs or assigns. But that where, in such a case, the lessee gives a warrant of attorney to confess judgment to a creditor, for the express purpose of enabling such creditor to take the lease in execution under the judgment, it is in fraud of the condition, and the lessor under the clause of re-entry for breach of the condition, may recover the premises in ejectment from a purchaser under the sheriff's sale. Ibid, 300. If it had been held, that in the latter case the lessee could take advantage of his own wrong, and compel the lessor to re-enter, or that a lessee giving such a warrant of attorney in fraud of a condition making the lease void on alienation without consent, might, by taking advantage of his own wrongful act, declare the lease absolutely void, and thereby discharge himself from performance of the covenants of the lease,—then such a decision might, by analogy, have been with propriety extended to the case with which it is above compared. But it has been shewn, ante, 258—9, that neither the lessee nor his surety can take advantage of the breach of the condition; the lessor alone, against whom the fraud is committed, and who is the only person injured by it, being intitled to avoid the lease. Besides, a parson by giving a warrant of attorney to confess a judgment, although it be done under a preconcerted arrangement, that an execution shall be issued to secure the arrears of the annuity when due, does not commit a fraud against any person. Until it be decided, that the parson or some other person can take advantage of it as a charge within the meaning of the 13 Eliz. c. 20, how can the above decision on a principle of analogy, be urged as a valid objection? Where a fieri facias de bonis ecclesiasticis, had been actually obtained under a warrant of attorney to confess judgment, and it was endeavoured to be set aside as an indirect charge, and therefore within the meaning of the statute, Lord Kenyon expressly declared, that he could not say, that the warrant of attorney was void. Mouys v. Leake, 8 Durnf. and East, 415, ante, 264. What adds considerably to the force of this opinion of his lordship, as opposed to the principle of analogy, drawn from the case of Doe dem. Mitchinson v. Carter, is, it was the opinion of the same Chief Justice who delivered the opinion of the Court in that case, and was pronounced by him in the same Court, only five months after his former judgment. According to his lordship's opinion, there is no difference between a judgment obtained in consequence of an action resisted, and a judgment signed under a warrant of attorney, since the latter is merely to shorten the process, and to lessen the expense of the proceedings. 8 Durnf. & East, 61. If the warrant of attorney itself were a specific lien on the benefice, that perhaps would have come within the words of the act, supposing it makes a charge void as against the parson himself: but the warrant of attorney only gives the grantee power to enter up judgment against the parson, and to sue out execution at a future uncertain period, in case the annuity should be unpaid for a certain number of days, after it from time to time becomes due; and non constat, that the judgment will be followed up by the living being sequestered under that judgment; for if another person's execution be previously delivered to the sheriff, as that execution (according to the above opinion) would have a priority, the grantee may be prevented from ever recovering his annuity by means of a sequestration under his judgment. Besides, if the modern objection be valid, both the bench and the bar have been in error for the past two hundred years! And if the new doctrine be followed to the extent the principle of it warrants, then, for no debt whatever, contracted by a clergyman, whether by bond, covenant, or otherwise, can his living be sequestered: as every person who becomes a creditor of an ecclesiastic, expects in that case, the remedies provided by the law for recovering his debt, as well as in the case of a layman; and so far, therefore, on the above principle, every creditor who sequesters, may be said to do it under a preconcerted arrangement. Such subtle notions never can be established, until by indirect means, it be endeavoured to make the clergy a separate order of men, and to exempt them from the common obligations, which have hitherto been equally binding on all the subjects of the realm. If the above extensive consequences should not necessarily follow, yet nevertheless endless litigation must ensue, on account of the difficulty of determining what shall, and what shall not be a preconcerted arrangement. It may be said, such difficulties have not occurred since the determination as to a preconcerted alienation of a lease, by means of a warrant of attorney; and, therefore, those consequences are not to be expected. But we have seen, ante, Vol. I. 24, 39, that such a covenant is not usual, and that a lessor is not entitled to it, unless it be expressly mentioned in the agreement for the lease. Such a provision is very rarely inserted; and when it is, in most cases the lessor consents to assignment, as under the covenants the lessee's liability continues notwithstanding assignment. Vide Vol. I. 166, 282.

Next, as to the other point of the above objections.—Leases of benefices at annual rents less than the value, whether given for securing the payment of an annuity, or for any other purpose, have never been questioned in any reported judgment, as being void against the lessor, on account of the inadequacy of the rent. There is no case in which it has been decided, that the reservation of rent in a clergyman's lease is essential to make it binding on the lessor. But there certainly is a solitary dictum of Mr. Justice Popham, in the forty-third year of the reign of Queen Elizabeth, Revel v. Hart, Goldsb. 138, pl. 44, that "if rent be reserved, it is good against the parson himself, otherwise not." However, Justices Clinch and Gawdy immediately dissented from Popham, and said, "it is good against the parson himself;" and Lord Chief Baron Gilbert, who was more eminently learned in the law relating to leases, than any other judge who ever graced the bench, emphatically adds, in relation to Mr. Justice Popham's unsupported dictum, "but quære?" 4 Gwill. Bac. Abr. 119. Leases (H.) 1. To the opinion that leases at annual rents, less than the value, whether given for securing an annuity, or (as there is no peculiar principle on this point, exclusively applicable to annuities) for any other purpose, would be deemed a charge within the meaning of the statute, may be opposed the following case of Heister v. Evans, Dyer, 372, b. which is thus stated. One parson Evans, for one hundred pounds beforehand paid, in the sixteenth year of Queen Elizabeth, covenanted and granted by indenture to Heister, to suffer him and his assigns to enjoy a benefice for twelve years, and the lessor to serve the cure himself. In which indenture there was also a covenant, that the lessor should do no act whereby the benefice should become void during the said twelve years. And for performance of all covenants comprised in the indenture on the part of Evans to be performed, he was bound to Heister in a bond. In an action of debt upon the bond, the parson having pleaded his non-residence above eighty-days in the twentieth year of Queen Elizabeth, as avoiding the lease, upon that plea the plaintiff demurred. The question was, whether the bond and the indenture, and all the covenants, were merely void by the statute 14 Eliz. c. 11, ab initio, or only after the absence for eighty days and more. No decision was given. There was no rent reserved by this lease, and the case was argued only ten years after the 13 Eliz. c. 20; and although that statute was directly under the consideration of the court, yet the modern objection, that such a lease was a charge within that statute, was not then thought of. The ingenious Sir Simon Degge, in relation to this case, says, "There is a quære in Dyer, whether such leases shall be void upon eighty days absence ab initio, or but from the time of absence by eighty days; but it seems to me, with some clearness, that it shall only be void from eighty days absence, and not ab initio. For first, the words of the statute are, That such lease shall endure no longer than the lessor shall be ordinarily resident, &c. So that till then it is to endure; and the statute closes, That upon such absence the term shall cease, which it could not do, if it had not a being before; for a thing cannot cease to be, that has not been." And he expresses himself clearly, that such a lease was good against the lessor himself until his absence. Degge's Parson's Counsellor, 124, 125, 6th ed. That part of the 13 Eliz. c. 20, relating to non-residence, being now repealed, how can the parson himself, or any other person, avoid such a lease? It is clear from the 14 Eliz. c. 11. s. 14, that the intention of the legislature was not to frustrate a lease by a clergyman as against himself, because an inadequate rent, or no rent whatever, was reserved by the lease, as that, act the very next year, repealed a part of the 13 Eliz. c. 20, which might have borne such a construction. Vide the part in crotchets, ante, 251.

stand as a security for an annuity charged on a benefice;—yet as the bond and covenant have been held to be valid, in the numerous cases before cited, until the practice sanctioned by those cases be overruled, and it be decided that no process de bonis ecclesiasticis shall in future be issued;—in an adverse proceeding in an action of debt on the bond or covenant, the grantee may get an execution for the debt and damages, or in an action on the covenant he may get an execution for his damages and costs. In both of which cases, a fieri, levari, or sequestrari facias de bonis ecclesiasticis, may be issued to make or levy the sum recovered of the ecclesiastical goods and chattels of the defendant. Tidd's Prac. 4. 1008. 1039, 7th ed. Et vide post, 285, (k). Some of the inconveniences of an adverse proceeding are, the expenses will be encreased, and it will be longer before the grantee can obtain a sequestration, than it would be under a warrant of attorney to confess judgment.

The conflicting authorities on the question, whether all the instruments given to secure an annuity, must be set aside merely because one only is not properly memorialised, does not affect this point, because that question arose entirely under the annuity act. In Harte v. Lovelace, 6 Durnf. & East, 476, Lord Kenyon said, "the strong inclination of my opinion is, that any defect in the memorial of one of the deeds will vitiate the whole assurance." His Lordship's mind seems to have been influenced by Hopkins v. Waller, 4 Durnf. & East, 464. Hood v. Burlton, 2 Ves. jun. 34; but the Court of King's Bench had, previously to the case of Hart v. Lovelace, decided that a defect in the memorial vitiated only the particular instrument. Ex parte Chester, 4 Durnf. & East, 694. The point, however, seems to have been settled, even before the 3 Geo. IV, c. 92, entirely set it at rest; for in Browne v. Rose, 6 Taunt. 139, which was a grant of an annuity on a benefice, Chief Justice Gibbs, in delivering the opinion of the court, said, "though it was held in the case of the Duke of Bolton v. Williams, 4 Bro. C. C. 310, that a defect in one of the instruments affected all, we cannot think that such was the intent of the legislature. We think it was only meant, that the want of the prescribed observances should vitiate the particular security; for on looking into the act, it appears there may be different memorials of the different deeds, and that the deeds may be executed at different times; and therefore we think the intent is, that only the particular assurance shall be void, with respect to which the requisites of the statute are not complied with."

Before concluding, it seems requisite to observe, that the partial revival of the statute has not been generally known; most probably, it was not anticipated by the legislature; and it would be unjust to suppose, that it was a contrivance of the persons who were anxious to introduce the 57 Geo. III. c. 99. But if at the time the latter statute was made, the partial revival of the 13 Eliz. c. 20, was contemplated, in order to invalidate future charges, &c. the authors of the revival must and will be disappointed in their expectations, unless the whole current of authorities be hereafter entirely overruled. For, it appears, according to the old text writers, and the decisions of the judges who lived in the reign when the statute was made, and who, consequently, must have well understood its intent and meaning;—the uniform practice of the old conveyancers;—and the precedents established sub silentio, by the determinations of the greatest modern judges, without any judicial precedents to the contrary; that, as the part of the 13 Eliz. c. 20, relating to chargings, was intended for the benefit of the successor only, a clergyman may, as against himself, directly charge his living; or demise it by way of mortgage, or upon trusts for his creditors, or for securing an annuity without reserving any rent.—Opposed to this conclusion, is an unsupported dictum of Mr. Justice Popham, that a reservation of rent is essential to the validity of a demise; some loose notions of Lord Alvanley, about principles of public policy, subsequently negatived by the legislature; and the doubts of some counsel of the present day, apparently founded on probable decisions to be expected hereafter, on doubtful principles of analogy. Under the statute, it does seem to be impossible that an attempt should be made to evade charges and demises of benefices, as "corrupt AND indirect dealings," within its intent and meaning. [The last case on this subject is Doe dem. Cates v. Somerville, 6 Barn. & Cres. 127, in which a rector demised his rectory and glebe lands to a trustee for one hundred years, if he the rector should so long live, for securing the payment of an annuity. The deed was executed on the 13th of April, 1816, and consequently after the passing of the 43 Geo. III. c. 34, and before the passing of the 57 Geo. III. c. 99, and was held to be a valid grant, "as there existed at the time of the date of the indenture no statute against its validity, and the grant was consequently good during the incumbency of the grantor." It will be observed, that the question discussed in the above ingenious note, was not fairly before the Court, and not decided by them; but it seems to have been assumed, both in the argument and in the judgment, that had the charge been made after the 57 Geo. III. c. 99, it would have been void. Ed.]

2 H. Bla. 582. Yet, if it be actually returned, the authority of the bishop is at an end: Therefore, where such a writ remained in the hands of the bishop long after it was returnable, who sequestered the profits of the vicarage, accruing as well before the return day as after, and being ruled to return the writ, returned only the amount of the sum levied up to the return day, the Court of Common Pleas would not order the writ and return to be taken off the file, but would only permit the return to be amended, by inserting the sum levied up to the time when the writ was actually returned. Marsh v. Fawcett, 2 H. Bla. 582. The Court said the proper way would have been, to have ruled the bishop from time to time, to know what he had levied. Id. 583.

The profits are applied according to the discretion of the ordinary, who allows for the trouble in gathering the tithes, for the supply of the cure, and for the maintenance of the parson and his family.

After the sequestrators have performed the duty required, the sequestration is taken off, and application of the profits is made according to the direction of the ordinary. He allows to the sequestrators a reasonable sum out of the profits, according to the trouble they have had in gathering the tithes. And he also allows for the supply of the cure, what is convenient, relation being had to the charge, and to the profits; and likewise for the maintenance of the incumbent and of his family, if he has not otherwise sufficient to maintain them. 3 Burn's Eccles. GRANT, AND DEMISE OF BENEFICE.

When a warrant of attorney is given to secure an annuity from a clergyman, the defeazance should authorize the levying of the whole sum for which the judgment is confessed, and after payment of the arrears to invest the residue in the stocks, in trust to secure the future payments; subject nevertheless to the grantor's right of repurchasing the annuity, and consequently in that event, of a transfer of the stocks to him. For it does not appear to be settled, whether the plaintiff can, after the sum indorsed on the writ is levied, preserve his priority with regard to the future arrears of an annuity, over another judgment creditor, who has delivered another writ to the bishop, in the interval after the sum indorsed on the former writ was levied, and before the time of the next periodical payment arrives. The equitable interposition of the court seems hitherto to have extended no farther, in cases of judgments entered on bonds to secure annuities, than to permit the judgment to stand as a security for the future payments, and fresh executions to be taken out as those payments became due. Howell v. Hanforth, 2 Wm. Bla. 843, 1016. Murray v. Harding, Ibid, 866. Ogilvie v. Foley, Ibid, 1111. Scott v. Whalley, 1 Hen. Bla. 297. Ibid, n. 583. [Rex v. Bishop of London, 1 Dow. & Ry. 486. A judgment creditor who has obtained sequestration of a living is entitled to an account of the surplus in the hands of a prior sequestrator, after satisfaction of the arrears and growing payments due to the prior sequestrator. Cuddington v. Withy, 2 Swans. 174. And see White v. Bishop of Peterborough, 3 Swans. 109, and the references in the notes to these two last cases, in which the law on this subject is collected. Ed.]

Defeasance to warrant of attorney for securing an annuity from a clergyman, should authorize execution for the whole penalty.

Qu. whether the plaintiff, after the sum indorsed is levied, shall have priority as to accruing payments against subsequent judgment creditors.

Judgments stand as a security for future payments, but fresh executions must be taken out.

Although the above cited cases are to the contrary, yet it is now settled that the plaintiff cannot take out execution on a bond for securing an annuity, without assigning breaches on the record, under the stat. 8 & 9 W. III. c. 11. s. 3. Collins v. Collins, 2 Burr. 820. Roles v. Rosewell, 5 Durnf. & East, 538. Hardy v. Bern, Ibid, 540, 636. Walcot v. Goulding, 8 Durnf. & East, 126. But where judgment is entered on a warrant of attorney for securing an annuity, whether it be or be not collaterally secured by bond, it is not necessary under 8 & 9 W. III. to assign breaches; Austerbury v. Morgan, 2 Taunt. 195. Kinnersley v. Mussen, 5 Taunt. 264; nor where the warrant of attorney is conditioned for payment of money by instalments; Cox v. Rodbard, 3 Taunt. 75; a warrant of attorney not being within that statute. Before it was decided to be necessary to assign breaches, the plaintiff by mistake levied the whole penalty of the bond; but the court made a rule upon him to refund the overplus beyond what would satisfy the arrears of the annuity. Murray v. Harding, 2 Wm. The Note referred to ante, 266, on Assignments of Officers' Pay, Pensions, &c.

On assignments of officers' pay, &c.

The decision in Flarty v. Odlum, 3 Durnf. & East, 681, mentioned ante, 266, was on an insolvent debtors' act. Lord Kenyon in delivering his judgment, said, "I am clearly of opinion that this half-pay could not be legally assigned by the defendant, and consequently that the creditors are not entitled to an assignment of it for their benefit. Emoluments of this sort are granted for the dignity of the state, and for the decent support of those persons who are engaged in the service of it. It would, therefore, be highly impolitic to permit them to be assigned; for persons, who are liable to be called out in the service of their country, ought not to be taken from a state of poverty. Besides, an officer has no certain interest in his half-pay; for the king may, at any time, strike him off the list. Indeed assignments of half-pay have been frequently made in fact, but they cannot be supported in law. It might as well be contended that the salaries of the judges, which are granted to support the dignity of the state and the administration of justice, may be assigned." In the case of Capt. Kennedy, a bankrupt, the same point was determined by the Lord Chancellor, about a year and a half before. 3 Durnf. & East, 683. In Lidderdale v. The Duke of Montrose, 4 Durnf. & East, 248, it was held on principles of public policy, as well as on account of the interest of the officers themselves, that by law an assignment of the future half-pay of a military officer was void. That the half-pay of officers was not only a chose in action; but that with respect to such payments as were not due, it was also contingent whether or not they would ever be made. And in Stone v. Lidderdale, 2 Anstr. 533, it was held, that an assignment of the half-pay of an officer in the army is bad in equity, as well as at law; half-pay being intended by the state to provide decent maintenance for experienced officers, both as a reward for their past services, and to enable them to preserve such a situation that they may always be ready to return into actual service. It is incidental to the cause for which it was granted, Oliver v. Emsonne, Dyer, 1. b, and cannot be separated from it. 2 Anstr. 541, 542. Nor can the full-pay of a military officer be assigned; it being contrary to the policy of the law, that a stipend given to one man for future services, should be transferred to another who cannot perform them. Barwick v. Read, 1 Hen. Bla. 627. And by the stat. 1 Geo. II. s. 2. c. 14. s. 7, all assignments of seamen's wages are void. But it seems that the assignee may maintain an action against an assignor on his covenant. 4 Durnf. & East, 251. And Mr. Justice Buller thought, that pay actually due might be assigned, as well as any other existing debt, but not future accruing payments. 3 Durnf. & East, 683. However, as to officers who take the benefit of the insolvent debtors' act, the legislature in rejecting the above doctrines, have shewn that their opinion of the principles of public policy, differs from the opinions held by the judges. For, by the 1 Geo. IV. c. 119. s. 31, it is enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said court [for the relief of insolvent debtors] to order such portion of the pay or half-pay or pension of any such officer of the army or navy, or naval or military service of the East India Company, as on communication from the said court to the secretary at war, or the lords commissioners of the admiralty, or the court of directors of the United East India Company, he or they may respectively consent to by writing under the hand of the said secretary at war, or the lords commissioners or secretary of the admiralty, or the said secretary of the court of directors, to be applied in payment of his debts, and for that purpose to be paid to his assignee or assignees; and such order and consent being lodged in the office of the paymaster of his Majesty's forces, or of the treasurer of the navy, or the said secretary of the said court of directors, as the case shall require, such paymaster, or treasurer, or secretary, shall give directions accordingly; and such portion of the pay, half-pay, or pension of such officer, as shall be specified in such order and consent, shall be paid to his assignee or assignees, until the said court shall make order to the contrary. [The corresponding section in the 7 Geo. IV. c. 57. is the 29th. It is in nearly the same words as the above section, but extends to the salaries of clerks in the civil service of the king and the East India Company, and directs a similar communication with the heads of the respective departments. Ed.]

Assignments either of the half or whole pay of a military officer, or of seamens' wages, are void.

A pension for past services may be assigned;

but a pension for supporting the grantee in the performance of future duties, is unalienable.

Although a pension is equally as uncertain as half-pay, yet as no future benefit is meant to arise to the state from granting it, a material distinction arises between them. 2 Anstr. 541. A pension for past services may, therefore, be assigned; and when assigned, it is not a chose in action, but a grant. M'Carthy v. Goold, 1 Ball & Beatty, 389. But a pension granted by act of parliament "for the more honourable support of the dignities" of a dukedom, payable out of the revenues of the Post Office, to such persons severally and successively, to whom the same should come by virtue of the act, with a proviso that the acquittance of every such person should be a sufficient discharge, is unalienable by the person in possession as against himself, and cannot be charged. Davis v. The Duke of Marlborough, 1 Swanst. 74. 79. [2 Wils. Ch. Rep. 130. S. C. And see, on the subject of pensions, Priddy v. Rose, 3 Mer. 86. Clay v. St. John, 2 Sim. and Stu. 32.]

(g) If the special custom of the manor warrant the felling of trees on the copyholds, add,

Under a special custom, a copyholder may cut down and sell trees.

It is a good custom, that a copyholder in fee may cut down trees and sell them at his pleasure. Glasscock v. Peche, 1 Roll. Abr. 560. pl. 16. Rockey v. Huggins, Cro. Car. 221. Jones, 245. 4 Leon. 239. Dal. 8. Noy, 2. S. C. So where by the custom of the manor a copyholder for life may name his successor, and so in perpetuum, such a copyholder for life may cut down and sell timber trees, for he is quasi a copyholder in fee. Rawles v. Mason, 1 Roll. Abr. 560. pl. 18. Rowles v. Masters, cited Cro. Car. 221. Rolls v. Mason, 1 Brownl. 132. 2 Brownl. 87, 192. Noy, 2. S. C. [But a copyholder of inheritance cannot cut timber unless warranted by special custom, Chapple's case, 6 Vin. Abr. 228. pl. 13. Ed.] But if an ordinary copyholder for life cut down and sell trees, it is a forfeiture of his life estate; for a custom that a copyholder not having any further interest than for life, may cut down and sell trees growing on his copyhold, has been adjudged void and unreasonable. Rooke v. Huggins, 1 Roll Abr. 560. pl. 17. Rockey v. Huggins, Cro. So where a copyhold estate is granted to a man and his heirs for three lives, and he has no power of compelling the lord to renew on the falling in of the lives, the copyholder cannot cut timber growing on the estate. Mardiner v. Elliott, 2 Durnf. and East, 746. where a copyholder of inheritance, having power by custom to cut timber, surrendered to the use of his will, and devised to A. for life, without impeachment of waste, with remainders over; and A. upon coming into possession cut down timber: though there was no instance, in fact, of a copyholder for life in the manor cutting timber, yet it was held that the right being annexed to the copyhold fee and inheritance, the copyholder in fee, in carving out his estate, may make a tenant for life dispunishable of waste: and that at any rate the lord cannot enter upon the estate of the copyholder for life as for a forfeiture upon his cutting timber; for the injury, if any, is not to the lord, but to the remainder-man of the copyhold inheritance. Denn dem. Toddrell v. Johnson, 10 East, 266. would not in some instances be prudent for the grantee to risk the loss of the grant, by intrusting it with the receiver. This, perhaps, is a very nice precaution, as there is in fact no necessity for entrusting the receiver with the grant; for, if the grantee himself, or any other person, were to shew the deed to the tenants, that would be a sufficient authority for them to pay the rents to the receiver. The appointment of a receiver in large annuity or mortgage transactions, is very desirable, as it generally is the means of securing the payments before the time the receiver is authorized to act; but not in one case out of fifty does the receiver ever act. When he is appointed by a separate deed, the grantee keeps that deed also, until it becomes necessary, and he wishes the receiver to commence the execution of his office, at which time the appointment is delivered to him.

Unless the reversion be in a receiver, he cannot distrain, &c. in his own name.

(l) If the appointment be in a demise, the person to whom the term is granted should join in the appointment, because he has the immediate legal estate in reversion. In modern printed books of precedents there is a common error in this respect; for after the grantor or mortgagor has parted with the immediate legal estate in reversion, he alone, by the forms in those books, appoints a receiver of the rents, with power to distrain, &c.; but such an appointment is of very little utility, for a distress made under it could not be supported. Under such an appointment as the above the receiver cannot distrain, &c. in his own name, because he has no estate in the land. Pitt v. Snowden, 3 Atk. 750. The distress should be made by the receiver as the attorney of the grantor and trustee. But it seems that as to any lease made before the conveyance in trust to secure the annuity, or as to any lease made afterwards by the grantor by parol, or by deed not indented, or as to a tenant from year to year, the receiver may distrain as the attorney of the trustee alone, as he has the immediate legal estate in reversion: and that as to any lease made by the grantor only by indenture, after the conveyance in trust to secure the annuity, the receiver may distrain as the attorney of the grantor alone, because the lessee would be estopped by the indenture from pleading that his grantor had not the legal estate. Wms. n. 2 Saund. 410 (a). But the authority of the receiver ceases as to each of the persons appointing, on their respective deaths. Vide post, 303 (n). Therefore to enable the receiver to distrain in his own name, either before or after the decease of the persons appointing, the premises should be demised to him, as in the form of an APPOINTMENT OF A RECEIVER BY A SEPARATE DEED, post, title, APPOINTMENT [412]; to which form the reader is referred for other annotations on receivership. [But if a receiver appointed by the Court grant a lease, he may distrain for rent in his own name, although he has no reversion, and it appeared on the face of the lease that he was merely a receiver; as it was held that the tenant could not dispute the lease. Dancer v Hastings, 4 Bing. 2. Ed.]

(n) This clause being usually inserted, had better be retained; but it does not appear that the first part of it is necessary, any farther than as being the foundation of an action for breach of covenant, in case the grantor should, by a revocation, attempt to destroy the receiver's authority. Livery, or something tantamount to it, necessary on granting a lease for lives of lands in possession; but not when the lease is granted under a power in a conveyance to uses.

On leases of lands in possession for lives from ecclesiastical and other persons, deriving their effect from the principles of the common law, livery of seisin, or something tantamount to it, is necessary; such as a lease for a year at common law, and a release in enlargement for the lives, after an actual entry by the lessee; or a bargain and sale for a year under the statute of uses, and a release in enlargement for the lives. But a lease of lands in possession for lives under a power, deriving its effect from the statute of uses, may be created in the mode

Pow. 4th ed. 210.] The reason is, the the lease, or, more correctly speaking, the appointment, takes effect by way of limitation of the use out of the original seisin of the feoffees or releasees, to uses; and it operates by way of shifting use pro tanto. It is on that principle the lease continues, notwithstanding the determination of the estate of the person who created it. But if it took effect out of his interest, it would determine with his estate.

If the lessee died intestate, and it be the case, say,

"AND WHEREAS the said [lessee] died intestate on or about the day of , 18 , leaving [A.] the wife of [vendor] of, &c. his only child and heir at law; and thereupon the said [vendor], and [A.] his wife, in right of the said [A.], became seised of the said messuages, &c. for the residue of the said estate therein." A fine requisite to convey a married woman's estate, pour auter vie.

It has been already stated, that a fine or recovery is not necessary to bar a quasi entail of an estate pour auter vie ; but that when a married woman is seised of such an estate, either absolutely or quasi in tail, a fine is requisite in order to convey it : vide Vol. I. 159, 160 : therefore, if it be the case, say,

Lease and release unnecessary when there is a fine.

Sometimes a lease and release are also taken when it is requisite to levy a fine of lands, as in the above recital ; but as a fine and declaration of the uses would alone be a sufficient conveyance, as well of any estate for life, as of an estate in fee, the lease and release are an unnecessary expense ; and therefore, if the lands were conveyed by fine alone, say,

If the form in the text be used where the grantor is tenant for life, under a settlement or will, and he wishes to retain the freehold reversion for his life, to enable him, without the concurrence of the annuitant, to make a tenant to the præcipe for suffering a recovery of an estate tail in remainder (as the concurrence of the person having the immediate freehold is in that case requisite); or the grantee (for the reasons stated ante, Vol. I. 337, 537-8; ante, 52. 55.) prefers having chattel interest rather than the freehold estate,—recite the settlement or will, ut ante, 2, 3, 181.

BY TENANT FOR LIFE.

Advantages of grantor's retaining the freehold reversion.

Recital of an estate for life under a settlement or will.

When a tenant for life, with powers of leasing, &c. has charged an annuity on his life estate, or mortgaged or sold it, some gentlemen have supposed it requisite, in order to preserve his powers, that he should not part with his whole estate, but only demise it for a term of years, determinable on his death. Thus it is said in a work of considerable merit, "we have seen that a charge on the estate to which the power is appendant, suspends the power during the interest granted; it follows, therefore, on the same principle, that a total alienation of the estate must operate as an extinguishment of the power. Thus, if tenant for life, with a power to grant leases in possession, convey away his life estate, the power is gone; it is no longer possible for the donee to execute it, inasmuch as it would be derogatory to his own grant. See Dougl. 293. And see Cooke v. Bromehill, Noy, 66."—Sugden on Powers, 54, 3d ed. 55, 2d ed. See also to the same effect, 1 Rop. Husband and Wife, 135; 2 Ibid. 104. In a qualified sense the first part of the above proposition is correct; for, as the grant of the rent charge takes effect out of the grantor's interest, the powers are suspended quoad the rent charge, and cannot be afterwards executed so as to defeat the rent charge, if it be not granted for a longer period than

It has been supposed, that a tenant for life with leasing powers cannot exercise them, after he has parted with his life estate; but it is now settled that such a power is not extinguished by a transfer of his estate, unless it clearly appears that the donor of the power intended inseparably to annex it to the life estate given, and to a continuance of that estate, in the identical person to whom it is given.

the grantor's life. Edwards v. Slater, Hardres, 415. But the conclusion deduced from that proposition does not follow as a necessary consequence. The case referred to in Douglas, it will be shewn hereafter, is an authority for the very reverse of the above conclusion. The case in Noy (so far as such an extremely loose case can be considered as an authority,) decided that a power of leasing in a person seised in fee in remainder, expectant on an estate for life, was destroyed by his covenant to stand seised to the use of another person in tail. Giving to that decision the fullest authority it is capable of, yet the donee of the power still retained a reverson in fee, subject to the estate tail; and therefore according to the distinction above quoted, his power could not be destroyed, as he still retained the reversion in fee. Thus it appears that the case referred to in Noy rather militates against, than supports, the above conclusion. In Vincent v. Ennys, and Corker v. Ennys, 3 Vin. Abr. 432. pl. 10. it was held that where a tenant for life with power of leasing, and tenant for life in remainder, with a like power of leasing after the death of the first tenant for life, joined in a mortgage in fee, the power of leasing was thereby destroyed. It is not stated whether they conveyed by an innocent conveyance, as a lease and release, or a bargain and sale. If the conveyance of the fee by the tenants for life, was by a fine or feoffment, there cannot be any doubt, but that the power was thereby destroyed, on account of the peculiarly extensive operation of a fine or a feoffment. See also the dictum in Saville v. Blacket, 1 P. Wms. 778. that a power of leasing annexed to an estate is destroyed by parting with the estate. The point, however, is now so firmly settled to the contrary, that for the sole purpose of preserving powers of leasing, &c. the above precaution appears to be wholly unnecessary. Thus it was determined by Lord Mansfield, that if a tenant for life, with power to grant leases when in possession, for twenty-one years, to take effect in possession and not in reversion, reserving the best rent, &c. convey his life-estate to trustees to pay an annuity for his life, and the surplus to himself,—the power is not thereby extinguished, but that he may still grant leases agreeably to the terms of the power. Ren dem. Hall v. Bulkeley, 1 Dougl. 292. This decision was fully confirmed by the judgment of the House of Lords, in 1821, in the case of Long v. Rankin, on an appeal from Ireland. In one part of the very able opinion of the judges delivered to the House by Lord Chief Justice Abbott, he said, "that though by the deeds granting the annuity, the tenant for life had parted with his life-estate, to which he had become entitled under the settlement, yet nevertheless the life-estate originally vested in him was not destroyed by those deeds; as it might, perhaps, have been by a fine or feoffment, purporting to convey the fee. An estate for his life still continued, though it was no longer vested in him.—Leases for years made in virtue of a power are not derived out of the estate of the lessor. It is not essential to the validity of a leasing power, or of a lease granted in virtue of such a power, that the lessor should have any interest whatever in the lands demised. A leasing power given to a tenant for life is usually spoken of in our books, as a power appendant to the estate of the tenant for life; and it is said that the estate of the lessee is in such a case derived out of the estate of the tenant for life, for such period of the term as he may happen to live. It would probably be more correct to say, that it operates upon that estate, than to say, that it is derived out of it, even during that period.—But a leasing power may by express terms be inseparably annexed to the estate for life." His lordship concluded with these words: "We ought not, therefore, to hold that such a power is extinguished by a transfer of the estate, unless we see clearly in the language of the deed whereby the power is created, that the donor of the power intended inseparably to annex it to the life-estate given, and to a continuance of that estate, in the identical person to whom it is given." The judgment of the house was delivered accordingly. The case of Long v. Rankin, will be fully reported in the next number of Mr. Bligh's Parliamentary Cases [Sugd. Pow. App. 676. 4th ed.], from whose notes the above extract is taken: to his kindness the reader is indebted for this early intimation of the above important decision. [In this judgment, the Lord Chancellor (Eldon) expressly declined giving any opinion on the case of Ren v. Bulkeley.] In consequence of which it may be considered as clearly settled, that a conveyance of the whole life-estate, whether by way of mortgage, or upon trusts for securing an annuity, or upon an absolute sale, would not now be deemed an extinguishment of a power appendant or appurtenant, unless it be a tortious conveyance, as by fine or feoffment, purporting to convey a fee. [Although the levying a fine displaces existing interests, yet where the accompanying deed shews the object for which it is levied, it will not destroy a power which it is clearly the intention of the parties to retain. Tyrrell v. Marsh, 3 Bing. 30. Ed.]

The clause of all the estate should be omitted in a demise.

(d) The clause of "All the Estate," &c. although inserted in modern printed books of precedents, is highly improper, and should be invariably omitted, in a demise. If that clause were inserted in the above form, and it should have any operation, the very purpose for which an underlease is taken, would be entirely defeated. (See the reasons for which an underlease is preferred to an assignment; ante, Vol. I. 337, 537—8; ante, 52, 55.) Thus it has been held and adjudged, that if a lessee for years of a messuage, grant all his interest and estate in the messuage, then the whole lease passes. Wynnybank's case, cited, Griffin's case, 2 Leon. 78. So where a termor, reciting by indenture his term and lease, granted all his term, estate, and interest to another; habendum to him and his assigns, immediately after the grantor's death; it was ruled and adjudged on a special verdict, that the habendum was void, and that the premises of the grant passed the entire term to the grantee immediately; Lilley v. Whitney, Dyer, 272. b; because the premises of the deed and the habendum could not stand together, the estate for life intended to be reserved to the grantor, being greater than a term for years; the Court, therefore, rejected the habendum, rather than permit it to destroy the whole grant. S. C. cited Plowd. 520. So also it is said that an habendum cannot frustrate a grant which was complete before, Stukeley v. Butler, Hob. 171, as the case is, 7 Edw. 6 Bro. Abr. Grauntes, pl. 154; Leases, pl. 66, where a lessee for years granted all his estate, habendum after his death. See also Goshawke v. Chigwell, Jones, 205. Cro. Car. 154. S. C. and a similar determination on a writ of error in the Exchequer Chamber, where the circumstances were not so strong. Germain v. Orchard, 1 Salk. 346, affirmed in the House of Lords, Jermain v. Orchard, Show. Par. Cas. 206. [And see Goodtitle v. Gibbs, 5 B. & C. 709, and 8 Dow. & Ry. 502, S. C.] Independently of the principle established by the above determinations, according to Lord Coke's general rule, the habendum may enlarge the premises, but cannot abridge them. Co. Litt. 299. a. The case of the Earl of Derby v. Taylor, 1 East, 502, has been supposed to have established a principle of construction, contrary to the early authorities. See 1 Pres. Abs. 96. Lord Kenyon asked, "How could this conveyance operate to pass the freehold without proper words for that purpose?" The counsel for the lessor answered, "it may be presumed, if necessary, that livery of seisin was made." His Lordship said, " that is a fact which at any rate must be found by the jury. And I am not satisfied that there is any ground in this case upon which the jury could be directed so to find. The question at present before the court is as to what estate passed to C. under the indenture? It cannot be said that a term of ninety-nine years is co-extensive in law with an estate of freehold: and here are no words by which the freehold of which the original lessees were seised was conveyed to the defendant's testator. Then how can we say that the whole interest in the lease passed to him? The conveyance of all the grantor's " estate, right, title, interest," &c. to a man and his executors for years, cannot convey a freehold. Such words mean no more than all their interest, &c. in the legal estate thereby granted; and we cannot give those words a larger operation than the parties themselves have declared they should have." The reader will perceive that the above case is founded entirely on feudal principles; the point determined by it being, that a lease for lives cannot pass by the clause of " all the estate," without a lease for a year, or livery of seisin, it being a freehold estate: that reason not being applicable to a lease for years, the case, so far from weakening the old determinations respecting leases for years, rather strengthens them. Indeed the above determination introduced no new point, but was strictly agreeable to the resolution of the court in Baldwin's case, 2 Co. 24. a. that when to the estate limited by the premises a ceremony is requisite to the perfection of the estate; and to the estate limited by the habendum, nothing is required to the perfection and essence thereof, but only the delivery of the deed; there, although the habendum be of a lesser estate than is mentioned in the premises, the habendum shall stand. But it was resolved in the same case, that when to things which take their essence and effect by the delivery of the deed without other ceremony, and which lie in grant, there in such a limitation the habendum would be repugnant and void. 2 Co. 23. b. 8 Co. 154. b. If there had been other circumstances in the above cases of Derby v. Taylor, the habendum would most probably have been rejected; for although livery of seisin, or something tantamount to it, is requisite on a conveyance of lands pour auter vie, whether it be made to the lessee or grantee alone, or to him, his heirs and assigns, or to him, his executors, administrators, and assigns; Campbell v. Sandys, 1 Scho. and Lefr. 290; yet livery of seisin may be presumed, after twenty years possession; Rees v. Lloyd, 1 Wightwick, 123: but in the above case there had been only ten years' possession when the action was brought. ever, as the indenture stated the premises to be in the occupation of C. his assignees, &c. if C. had executed the deed according to Baldwin's case, 2 Co. 23. b. the conveyance must have taken effect as a grant of the reversion of the whole estate for lives; and livery being therefore unnecessary, the habendum must have been rejected for repugnancy. For a recital in a freehold lease, that the lands are "now in the occupation and tenure of the lessee and his undertenants," estops the lessor from contending that the lessee was not in possession, so as to render livery of seisin unnecessary. Rees v. Lloyd, 1 Wightwick, 123. The principle of which determination is equally applicable to a grantee, or any other person executing an indenture, and all persons claiming under him. Com. Dig. Evidence. (B. 5.) Estoppel. (A. 2.) Then supposing for either of the above reasons that livery was unnecessary, the grant being to C. his executors, &c. would have been no solid objection to its taking effect by the premises; for the heir could not take the lands, because he was not named, and therefore under the statute of frauds, 29 Car. MEMORIAL.

MEMORIAL of an ANNUITY to be enrolled in CHANCERY.

A MEMORIAL (a) to be inrolled in his Majesty's High Court of Chancery, pursuant to an Act of Parliament made for that purpose (b).

Fill up the form, ante, Vol. I. 331, "with such alterations therein as the nature and circumstances of any particular case may reasonably require.")

(a) If the annuity be charged on freehold or leasehold estates in Middlesex or Yorkshire, whether the grant be or be not within the exception of the annuity act, a memorial should be registered in the particular county registry. For the form, see tit. MEMORIAL [Vol. V. 229.]

If charged on freehold or leasehold estates in Middlesex or York, a memorial should be registered.

(b) By the 53 Geo. III. c. 141. s. 2, ante, Vol. I. 330, within thirty days after the execution of annuity securities (not within the exception of the 10th section,) a memorial should be inrolled in the High Court of Chancery *. The memorial must have a one pound stamp. 55 Geo. III. c. 184. It is usually written on a piece of parchment, a little wider than a common copy of court roll, with ruled ink lines, according to the form in the act. It is not necessary or usual, either for any of the parties to sign the memorial, or for it, or any of the securities, to be acknowledged. The memorial should be left within the thirty days at the Inrollment Office, at the top of Chancery Lane. If the grantee wishes to have a certificate indorsed on the securities, of their having been memorialized, they should also at the same time be left there; and a few days afterwards the securities may be obtained, with the following certificate indorsed, if the memorial were left in due time. "A memorial of this deed was enrolled in his Majesty's High Court of Chancery, pursuant to an act of parliament made for that purpose." But if the memorial be not left there until after the thirty days, the words " pursuant to an act of parliament made for that purpose," are omitted. This variation in the form of the certificate is therefore important. A record in the office states the day and hour when the memorial is left; and it is to be regretted, that there is not agreeably to the provisions of the act, ante, Vol. I. 333, sec. vii, a similar statement in the indorsed certificate, as in the case of deeds memorialised either in the York or Middlesex registry. For in case the grantee should afterwards sell the annuity, it would be requisite for the purchaser to ascertain, by means of a search, whether the securities were memorialized within the thirty days. Vide Vol. I. 357. If the certificate stated that information, the trouble and expense of a search would be saved.

* [The enrollment only takes effect from the execution: it was held therefore that where a memorial was enrolled within thirty days after the execution by the grantee, it was sufficient, although before the execution by the grantor. Flight v. Buckeridge, 3 Bing. 215. Ed.]

Description of the witnesses in the memorial.

In Darwin v. Lincoln, 5 Barn. and Ald. 444, it was held, that a witness described in the memorial as " P. D. clerk to Mr. B." was not well described, because the witness's place of abode was not inserted. This decision not being satisfactory to the profession, the point was again brought before the court in Smith v. Pritchard, 1 Dowl. & Ryl. 374, where the witness was described in the memorial as " C. R. clerk to W. A. Great Marlborough Street, in the county of Middlesex, gentleman;" but the court expressed their sorrow that the question was again agitated; and retaining their former opinion, they set the security aside. This point, and the point mentioned ante, 280, are now both set at rest by the following statute.

By the 3 Geo. IV. c. 92, intituled, " An Act to explain an Act of the Fifty-third Year of the Reign of his late Majesty, respecting the Enrolment of Memorials of Grants of Annuities," and which received the royal assent 29th July, 1822, reciting, " Whereas by an act of parliament made and passed in the fifty-third year of his late Majesty King George the Third, intituled An Act to repeal an Act of the Seventeenth Year of the Reign of his present Majesty, intituled, " An Act for registering the Grants of Life Annuities, and for the better Protection of Infants against such Grants," and to substitute other Provisions in lieu thereof, it is enacted, that within thirty days after the execution of every deed, bond, instrument, or other assurance, whereby any annuity or rent chaage shall, from and after the passing of the said act, be granted for one or more life or lives, or for any term of years or greater estate determinable on one or more life or lives, a memorial of the date of every such deed, bond, instrument, or other assurance, of the name of all the parties, and of all the witnesses thereto, and of the person or persons for whose life or lives such annuity or rent charge shall be granted, and of the person or persons by whom the same is to be beneficially received, shall be enrolled in the high Court of Chancery, in the form or to the effect following, with such alterations therein as the nature and circumstances of any particular case may reasonably require: And whereas the form or effect to which such enactment refers is expressed in several columns, at the head of one of which are the words 'Names of Witnesses,' and underneath, as applicable to indentures of lease and release, the letters and words 'E. F. of' 'G. H. of' and as applicable to a bond and warrant of attorney to confess judgment, the letters 'E. F.' 'G. H.' without the word 'of:' And whereas the words of enactment referring to such form express only that a memorial of the names of all the witnesses to every such deed, bond, instrument, or other assurance as therein mentioned, should be inrolled as directed by the said act, without providing that any description of the witnesses should be given in such memorial, except as such form is thereby referred to; and such form does not provide that any description should be added to such names except by the addition of the word 'of' to the letters 'E. F.' and 'G. H.' as aforesaid, as applicable to indentures of lease and release: and whereas in consequence of such indistinct enactment it may be doubtful, whether it was the intention of the legislature to require any, or if any, what description to be added to the names of witnesses in the memorial of any deed, instrument, or assurance to be enrolled as aforesaid: And whereas a very great number of memorials of grants of annuities have, since the passing of the said act, been enrolled, in which the names of the witnesses to the deeds, instruments, or assurances specified in such memorials, have been inserted without the addition of the place of abode of such witnesses; and it has been inferred, from the use of the word 'of' after such letters 'E. F.' and after such letters 'G. H.' as aforesaid, that it was necessary to describe each of such witnesses in such memorial as of some place, and in consequence thereof some grants of annuities made since the passing of the said act have been, in proceedings in summary applications to courts of justice, which cannot be reviewed in any superior court, deemed null and void, on the ground that no description of the place of abode of the witnesses to some or one of the deeds, instruments, or assurances by which such grants of annuities have been made, had been inserted in the memorials or memorial thereof enrolled as directed by the said act: and whereas doubts have been entertained whether the construction so put on the said act is the true construction thereof, more especially as the same is so far penal as it renders deeds, instruments, and assurances, of which memorials have not been enrolled in pursuance of the said act, null and void, and the provisions in the said act are not so clear and explicit as the same ought to have been under such circumstances, and the parties claiming under grants of annuities may have been thereby misled, and induced to conceive that it was not necessary under the provisions of the said act to insert in the memorial of any deed, instru-

F.' and 'G. H.' respectively, with reference to one species of assurance inserted in the form of memorial before mentioned; and it is expedient to remove all doubts touching the construction of the said act, with respect to so much of the memorials required by the said act to be enrolled as relates to any description of the witness or witnesses to any deed, instrument, or insurance;" It therefore enacted and declared, "That by the said act of the fifty-third year of the reign of his said late Majesty, no further or other description of the subscribing witness or witnesses * to any deed, bond, instrument, or other assurance, whereby any annuity or rent charge is or may be granted, is required in the memorial thereof, besides the names of all such witnesses; and so the said act shall be deemed, construed, and taken."

No further description of witnesses is necessary in the memorial of annuities than the names of such witnesses.

II. And reciting "Whereas doubts have also arisen, whether under the said act of the fifty-third year of the reign of his said late Majesty, the omission to enrol a memorial of any one of the assurances for securing any annuity or rent charge does not vitiate the whole transaction, notwithstanding the enrolment of a memorial of another deed, bond, instrument, or other assurance granting the same; and it is also expedient to remove such doubts:" It therefore further enacted and declared, "That every deed, bond, instrument, or other assurance granting any annuity or rent charge, and of which a memorial shall have been or shall be duly enrolled pursuant to the said act, notwithstanding the omission to enrol any other deed, bond, instrument, or assurance for securing such annuity or rent charge, shall be valid and effectual, according to the intent, meaning, and true effect thereof, notwithstanding a memorial of any other deed, bond, instrument, or assurance for securing the same annuity shall not have been duly enrolled pursuant to the said act."

Annuity, a memorial of which having been enrolled, shall be valid, notwithstanding the omission of enrolling any other deed for securing such annuity. Vide ante, 280.

IV. Provided always, and it was further enacted, "That this act shall not extend or be construed to extend to revive or give effect to any deed, bond, instrument, or other assurance, whereby any annuity or rent charge hath been already granted, so far as the same hath been adjudged, declared, treated, or deemed void by any judgment, decree, action, suit, or proceeding at law or in equity, or by any acts or deeds of the parties thereto, or by any other legal or equitable means whatsoever; nor shall this act affect or prejudice any suit or proceeding at law or in equity, commenced on or before the thirty-first day of May one thousand eight hundred and twenty-two, and now depending, upon the ground of an alleged defect in the memorial thereof, in not describing the witnesses thereto otherwise than by his, her, or their name or names, for avoiding any such deed, bond, instrument, or other assurance." [And see Vol. I. 336 et seq.]

Description of the nominees.

In Barber v. Gamson, 4 Barn. & Ald. 281, it was held that in a memorial of an annuity, under 53 Geo. III. c. 141, it is sufficient to state that the annuity was granted for the lives of A. B. &c. (naming them), without stating their description by residence or otherwise, or adding that the annuity was granted for their joint lives or the life of the survivor, or for a term of years determinable on those lives, notwithstanding the annuity was granted for ninety-nine years, determinable on their lives. And it was also held in the same case, that where there is no bond, but only a warrant of attorney to confess judgment, as a collateral security for an annuity, it is not necessary to state in the memorial, for what penal sum it authorises a confession of judgment.

Description of warrant of attorney.

The memorial of an annuity, granted since last annuity act, need not state that the annuity is redeemable, nor the name of the party in whose favour the warrant of attorney is given *.

In Yems v. Smith, 3 Barn. & Ald. 206, an annuity granted subsequently to the 53 Geo. III. c. 141, and secured by deed and warrant of attorney to confess judgment, was attempted to be set aside on the grounds, 1st, that the memorial of the deed had omitted to state the clause for repurchase; and, 2ndly, that in the memorial of the warrant of attorney, the name of the party at whose suit, or in whose favour the judgment under the warrant of attorney was to be entered up, was also omitted; Chief Justice Abbott, in delivering the judgment of the Court, said, "There is no column in the schedule which requires it to be stated, whether the annuity was redeemable or not; and, as to the objection that the clause for redemption is part of the consideration, it is only necessary to read the schedule, the seventh column of which has these words: 'Consideration, and how paid.' It is obvious, therefore, that the consideration there spoken of, is a consideration which can be paid. The clause for redemption cannot, therefore, come within the schedule; and if any thing not specified in the schedule be necessary, the schedule itself would be worse than useless. The first objection, therefore, fails; and, as to the second, the schedule states the mode of memorializing the warrant of attorney to be thus: A. B. to I. K. and L. M. attornies, &c. It does not, therefore, require the name of the party, in whose favour the warrant of attorney is given, to be specified."

* [Under the old Annuity Act, the clause for redemption must have been stated, and any variance would be fatal. See Yems v. Smith, supra. arg. 207, and Tringham v. Bethune, 7 Taunt. 429. The last case is imperfectly reported, the date of the annuity deed not being mentioned. Ed.]

When the consideration is paid by a draft or cheque on a banker, the time when it is payable should be stated.

Where part of the consideration of an annuity consisted of a draft payable at a banker's, it was held, that it was necessary to state in the memorial at what time such draft was payable. But the application for setting aside the securities, being made twelve years after the execution of the deed, and after the deaths of the attesting witnesses, the Court imposed on the grantors the terms of returning the principal, on taking an account before the prothonotory. Drake v. Rogers, 4 Moore, 402. [2 B. & B. 19, S. C.] So, if the consideration for granting an annuity be paid by a banker's cheque, payable immediately, it is necessary to state in the memorial, the time when it becomes payable. Poole v. Cabanes, 8 Durnf. & East, 329. Berry v. Bentley, 6 Durnf. & East, 690.

There may be a bonâ fide retainer of part of the consideration, but the annuity interest will only run on that sum from the final payment.

Where 700*l.*, part of the consideration money for an annuity had, pursuant to the grantor's agreement at the time of the original contract, been deposited in the hands of the grantee's attorney, till certain houses, out of which the annuity was granted, should be completed; but it appeared the money deposited had not been used by the attorney in the interim, and had all been paid over to the grantee, in a short time after the date of the deeds, and there was no fraud in the transaction, the Court refused to set aside the annuity, on the ground that the power given to them by the 53 Geo. III. c. 141, s. 6, was discretionary, and that this was not the case of a fraudulent retainer, contemplated by the act. However, the Court held, that no annuity interest should be charged upon the 700*l.*, except from the period when it was finally paid. Barber v. Gumson, 4 Barn. & Ald. 281, 287. [And see also Girdlestone v. Allan, 6 B. & A. 61; 2 D. & R. 150; and Vol. I. 333.—Where the memorial omitted to state a provision in the deed, by which the grantor covenanted to pay an additional insurance premium, in case of his going abroad, it was held that as such covenant formed no part of the consideration of the price of the annuity, it was not necessary to insert it. Wood v. Perrott, 5 J. B. Moore, 63. Where the consideration paid for the annuity was duly stated in the memorial, but the assignment of insurance policies to the grantee was omitted, it was held not to be necessary to insert it, as they were only a collateral security. Morris v. Jones, 2 B. & C. 232. Ed.]

MEMORIAL.

It has been stated, ante, Vol. I. 335, 336, 494, 497. Vol. II. 138, that a memorial of an annuity granted in consideration of a conveyance of an estate, is requisite, under the new act. Such was the opinion generally entertained by the profession, and also by the learned gentleman who originally drew the last annuity act. In consequence of this general opinion, two cases have occurred, and have been lately reported. In the first case, which also decided the other, counsel moved to enter a nonsuit, on the ground that a bond on which the action was brought, ought to have been enrolled under the act; but as the court refused to grant the motion, the above opinion cannot be any longer considered as correct. Thus in James v. James, 2 Brod. & Bing. 702, Chief Justice Dallas, in delivering the judgment of the Court, said, "This was an action on a bond, in the penal sum of 800*l.* By the condition it was recited, that the plaintiff was entitled to an interest in certain veins of coal for her life, and that she, by indentures of even date with the bond, had assigned such interest to the defendants, who, in consideration thereof, had agreed to pay her an annuity of 60*l. per annum*, and the bond was then conditioned for the payment of that annuity to the plaintiff for her life. The defendants pleaded, that no memorial was enrolled according to the statute. The plaintiff replied, that the annuity was granted for the considerations mentioned in the deeds, and not for money or money's worth, within the intent of the statute, on which issue was joined. The cause came on to be tried before Mr. Baron Garrow, at the last assizes at Monmouth, when a verdict was taken for the plaintiff, with liberty for the defendant to move to enter a nonsuit, if the Court should be of opinion that such a bond as this requires enrollment. The 2d section of the stat. 53 Geo. III. c. 141, requires every memorial of an annuity enrolled in pursuance of the act, to specify among other things, "the pecuniary consideration or considerations for granting the same;" which words necessarily pre-suppose and require the existence of a pecuniary consideration to be so specified, and shew that the statute does not apply to cases where no such consideration exists. The form of memorial also given by the same section, in the column headed "consideration, and how paid," specifies only pecuniary considerations, whether paid in money or in bank notes, or other notes or bills of exchange, as the case may be.—The 10th section declares, that the act shall not extend (amongst other things) "to any voluntary annuity or rent charge, granted without regard to pecuniary consideration or money's worth;" and from these words it has been argued, that the act applies to all cases where any thing valuable is given for the purchase of an annuity. It is here that these words import, that "money's worth" may, in certain cases,

A bond for payment of an annuity, in consideration of a conveyance of a life estate in coal veins, does not require enrollment under 53 Geo. III. c. 141.

ation or money's worth within the statute.

be a "pecuniary consideration," within the meaning of the act, as, where the grantee pays for the annuity in part or in whole, by goods or merchandize, with a nominal or perhaps real value imposed upon them, to be converted into money by the grantor, and where the object of the grantor was to raise money, and such appears to be the real nature of the transaction, however it may be disguised. But, considering the 2d and 10th sections together, and the intent of the legislature, as it is to be collected therefrom, the Court is of opinion, that the act does not extend to cases of fair and bonâ fide sale of landed property, whether freehold for life or leasehold for term of years, where the consideration in part or in whole may be an annuity to be paid to the vendor. In such cases, the consideration for granting the annuity, being an estate in land bonâ fide sold and conveyed, does not appear to the Court to be a pecuniary consideration or money's worth, within the meaning of the statute.—The same observations apply to Harrison v. Smitheringale." In which case a similar motion had been made in the same term, on a similar ground. [See also Tetley v. Tetley, 4 Bing. 214; Harrison v. Smitheringale, 5 J. B. Moore, 497; and Blake v. Attersoll, 2 Bar. & C. 875, where it was determined, that to bring a case within the 53 Geo. III. c. 141. there must be an actual sale of an annuity for money, bills, or goods; that the consideration must be either money or something which can be converted into money. This last expression occurs only in the judgment of Littledale, J., and leaves the question open to further discussion. See Vol. I. 336. Ed.]

Memorials of grants by persons having a power over the fee of lands of greater annual value than the annuity, need not be enrolled:

Where a tenant for life, with remainder to trustees to preserve, &c. remainder to his first and other sons in tail, remainder to himself in fee, suffered together with his only son a recovery, and declared the uses to such person, and for such estate, &c. as they should jointly appoint; and they jointly granted an annuity, and appointed and granted the lands to a trustee for a term of years in trust for the grantee, it was held that, as the lands were of greater annual value than the annuity, the grant came within the exception of the old annuity act, 17 Geo. III. c. 26, s. 8, ante, Vol. I. 357. Halsey v. Hales, 7 Durnf. & East, 194. So, where an annuity was granted by a mortgagor in fee, in possession of the lands on which it was secured, of greater annual value than the interest of the mortgage and the annuity, it was held that the grant was within the exception of the old annuity act, as a grant of an annuity by one who was seised in fee simple; and therefore no memorial of it need be enrolled: the seisin in fee therein excepted, extending by parity of reasoning, to equitable as well as legal estates. Amhurst v. Skinner, 12 East, 263. So a mere surety who charges with the payment of an annuity his estate in fee simple of which he was seised in possession at the time of granting the annuity, and which was of greater annual value than the annuity, is a grantor withing the meaning of the 17 Geo. III. c. 26, s. 8, and therefore in such a case no memorial is required. Darwin v. Lincoln, 5 Barn. & Ald. 444. So an annuity, secured on lands in fee of equal annual value, is within the exception, although the annuity be also secured upon leasehold property. Ex parte Mitchell, 2 East, 138. These decisions are equally applicable to the new act. [Where a party unconnected with the grantor, and for a separate consideration, guarantees the payment of an annuity, a memorial of it need not be enrolled, as it does not shew the extent of the responsibility of the grantor. Sandilands v. Marsh, 2 B. & A. 673. An admittance on a surrender of copyholds need not be memorialized pursuant to the provisions of the annuity act. It is sufficient that the surrender be memorialized. Doe v. Stephens, 1 Pri. 38; and see Crowther v. Wentworth, 6 B. & C. 366; and Vol. I. 335 et seq. & 494. Ed.]

At law and in equity, on an annuity being vacated, an account is taken of the consideration and interest thereon, and of the payments of the annuity and interest thereon, and the balance (if any) is paid to the grantee.

At law where an annuity is set aside for informality, the practice now is as stated ante, Vol. I. 358. 460. 523. Drake v. Rogers, 4 Moore, 402; ante, 324. Poole v. Cabanes, 8 Durnf. & East, 330. In equity, where an annuity was set aside for an informality in the memorial, a general account was decreed of the consideration, and costs, and of all money received under the annuity; the balance to be paid, the securities delivered up, and a reconveyance: but if it appeared the annuitant was overpaid, he was to pay such overplus to the grantor, Byne v. Vivian, 5 Ves. 604. However, where the defendant admitted he had received more than was due to him for principal and interest, the securities were decreed to be delivered up to be cancelled; and that the defendant should pay the plaintiff the costs of the suit; but the Court did not order the defendant to repay the surplus. Byne v. Potter, 5 Ves. 609. [Although under the 17 Geo. III. c. 26. s. 6. the Court will set aside the judgment for arrears of an annuity, on the grounds of minority, and the want of a proper memorial, yet these not being the cases mentioned in sec. 4. it has no authority to cause the deeds to be delivered up. Storton v. Tomlins, 2 Bing. 475.]

But if the grantee has been overpaid, it seems the surplus cannot be recovered.

The money being voluntarily paid, it seems the surplus cannot be recovered. Bromley v. Holland, 5 Ves. 618. 7 Ves. 24. So where an annuity had been assigned for a less sum than than the original purchase money, an account was directed of the consideration paid by the original grantee of the annuity, with interest at five per cent, and of the payments of the annuity to the grantee, or any persons claiming under him by assignment or otherwise, to be applied in discharge of the interest and principal of the consideration; and if the consideration, with interest, should appear to be fully repaid, or, if not, upon payment by the plaintiff of what should be remaining due from him, the securities to be delivered up, &c. with costs; the assignee, unless under special circumstances, being in the situation of the grantee. Bromley v. Holland, 5 Ves. 610. 7 Ves. 3, 29. But the grantee is not allowed in the account the premiums for insuring the life of the grantor, and costs incurred in supporting the annuity. Ex parte Shaw, 5 Ves. 620. However, in some cases the premiums paid for insurance have been allowed, under particular circumstances : as where the bill offered to pay principal and interest, and other reasonable demands, and a letter was admitted in evidence, written by the grantor, prior to the grant, in another negociation, which did not take place, and in which he proposed the insurance of his life as a reasonable thing. Hoffman v. Cooke, 5 Ves. 623, 633. And see Gwynne v. Heaton, 1 Bro. C. C. 11. In Hoffman v. Cooke, it was directed that the Master should make rests upon the payment of each sum paid for the insurance, and also upon each sum paid to the annuitant, on account of the annuity, and compute interest upon every such payment at five per cent; and the plaintiff paying to the annuitant what should be found due upon the balance of the said accounts, it was ordered, that satisfaction should be entered upon the judgment, and the annuity, and the policy of insurance be re-assigned. 5 Ves. 633. [And see Aguilar v. Aguilar, 5 Madd. 411. Upon reference to the Master to take the accounts, the plaintiff will be entitled to all fair disbursements for the conveyances by which the annuity had been secured. Williamson v. Goold, 1 Bing. 316. Where an annuity is sought to be set aside, there must be an affidavit of the illegal circumstances by the grantor himself. Dartnall v. Marquis of Wellesley, 3 Brod. & B. 255. THIS INDENTURE, made day of , 18 ; BETWEEN [grantee] of, &c. (a) of the first part; Parties.

(a) If a married woman be entitled to an annuity, by way of rent charge, granted out of a freehold interest, either in fee or in tail, or for her own life, or for the life of another person, she should be a party to the release with her husband, in order to declare the uses of a fine sur conuzance de droit come ceo, &c. or sur concesserunt, which they should levy of the rent charge, ut ante, Vol. I. 640. Or they should join in a fine of the lands out of which the rent charge issues, with a declaration that the fine was levied with an intent to bar the rent charge. Heliot v. Sanders, Cro. Jac. 699. Taylor v. Shaw, Carter, 24. Whitfield v. Fausset, 1 Ves. 390. Pres. Shep. Touch. 11. S. P. Sed vide Plowd. Com. 435, g. Therefore if a fine be requisite for any other purpose, an additional fine to convey the rent charge would be unnecessary. (Mr. Belt, Supp. to Ves. 170 (4), citing Goodright, dem. Hare v. Board, Cru. on Fines, 252, 2d ed. 5 Cru. Dig. 272, 2d ed. appears to have totally mistaken the meaning of Lord Mansfield.) So if the rent charge be in fee, or for life, and the husband and wife join in suffering a recovery of the land, out of which the rent issues, it would extinguish the rent. But as recoveries do not operate by estoppel against the issue, or those in reversion or remainder, a recovery suffered of the lands will not bar an intail of a rent issuing out of the

To convey or release a married woman's annuity, charged on a freehold for her own or another's life, a fine is requisite.

A fine of lands by one entitled to a rent in fee, in tail, or for life charged on them, will bar the rent.

A recovery of lands by one entitled to a rent in fee, or for life out of them, will extinguish the rent:

but a recovery of the lands will not bar an intail of a rent charged on them.

But if a rent charge be for years or for life, derived out of a chattel real, or a personal annuity be limited to executors, a fine is unnecessary.

A fine seems requisite to convey a married woman's personal annuity for life, or in fee, limited to her heirs.

Although there are different opinions on this subject, yet the better opinion is, that a fine may be levied of a personal annuity on a writ of covenant, or on a writ of annuity.

lands, as far as the issue or those in remainder or reversion are interested therein; although it would, by estoppel, bind the interest of the tenant in tail who suffered it. 1 Pres. Conv. 6. But if the rent charge be a chattel interest, as for years determinable on a life or lives, a fine is unnecessary, as the husband alone may convey or release it. So if a married woman be entitled to an annuity granted for a life or lives, out of a chattel real, whether it be limited to her heirs, or to her executors, it seems that a fine is unnecessary. Vide Butt's case, 7 Co. 25, a.; ante, Vol. I. 618, 629, post, 350 (i). So, it seems, that if it be a personal annuity for life or lives, limited to a married woman, her executors, &c. a fine would not be necessary. Vide Vol. I. 628. But if a personal annuity, for life or in fee, be limited to a married woman and her heirs, it seems that a fine would be necessary. However, it has been said that a fine cannot be levied of an annuity; Shep. Touchs. 11; because it is only a personal inheritance, although granted in fee. 5 Cru. Dig. 152, 2d ed. But according to 2 Roll. Abr. 15 (G), pl. 1, a fine may be levied of an annuity upon a writ of covenant. See also Com. Dig. Fine, (E. 2.) "Agreeable to an elaborate opinion of Mr. Hargrave, and on principle, a fine may be levied of a mere personal annuity on a writ of annuity." Pres. Shep. Touch. 11. And it is apprehended, that the judgment on a writ of annuity, will bind the interest of the parties, and even of a married woman: 1 Pres. Conv. 270: whether the annuity be in fee, for life, or though it be but for years. F. N. B. 152. A. Finch's Law, 301, edit. Pickering. Co. Litt. 144, (b). "Mr. Hargrave observed, the balance upon authorities appears to him to be much in favour of the application of fines to annuities; and he concluded that a married woman, with her husband, might levy a fine of a mere personal annuity, which was the interest of the wife." Indeed there appears to be no other method whereby a married woman can prevent the descent to her heirs of a personal annuity limited to them. For a personal annuity cannot be barred as a rent may, by suffering a recovery; ante, Vol. I. 587; because that is a real action. Dr. and Stud. Dial. I. c. 30, p. 89, 18th ed. Turner v. Turner, 1 Bro. C. C. 319. But of this kind of inheritance a husband is not entitled to be tenant by the curtesy, nor a wife to be endowed. Co. Lit. 144, b: ante, Vol. I. 580. 2 Wooddes. Lect. 72.

There appears to be no other mode of preventing the descent to her heirs; for a recovery cannot be suffered.

Other modes are sometimes adopted.

(e) There are two other modes of releasing an annuity, besides that here pursued.—1st. To "remise, release, and quit claim" the annuity to the grantor, without the word "grant;" which is proper where the legal estate in the land, is clearly vested in the grantor, so that the annuity may merge. 2d. To "acquit, release, and discharge" the land, and the grantor in respect of it, from the payment of the annuity. But these modes are sometimes objected to, as they may extend to release other interests, which the annuitant may possibly have in the property. The above form is free from this objection; and although the legal estate in the land may not be in the grantor of the annuity, still by the operation of the word "grant," the annuity will vest in him, and his equitable estate be discharged from it. MS. opinion of an eminent conveyancer.

Advantages of the above form.

Another form.

Grant, and release of annuity, to the intent to free the lands therefrom.

(j) It is generally desirable to have the trusts, as well as the condition, inserted in the surrender, and consequently on the court rolls. Vide Vol. I. 563. However, if the parties do not wish it, the trusts may be omitted. Sometimes the trusts are referred to in the surrender, thus, "Upon such trusts, &c. as are declared in a certain indenture," &c. without mentioning them. But it would be wrong in the steward to receive such a surrender, for he has a right to call for a specification of the trusts, or to refuse that any reference whatever shall be made to them on the court rolls. See Kensington v. Mansell, 13 Ves. 244.

Generally desirable to have the trusts inserted in the surrender, but they may be omitted.

The steward has a right either to have the trusts inserted, or entirely omitted.

(k) The above trusts seem to be generally preferable, because they meet the circumstances of the case, as well before as after the condition of the surrender is broken, and whether the surrenderee be or be not admitted; for in some manors the lord may compel his admission.

When not secured by actual grant or conveyance, any of the securities may be stamped with the ad valorem duty.

"Where upon the sale of any annuity or other right not before in existence, the same shall not be created by actual grant or conveyance, but shall only be secured by bond, warrant of attorney, covenant, contract, or otherwise; the bond, or other instrument by which the same shall be secured, or some one of such instruments, if there be more than one, shall be deemed and taken to be liable to the same duty, as an actual grant or conveyance." When there is a conditional surrender of copyholds, to become absolute on non-payment of an annuity, the annuity does not issue out of the estate; vide ante, 338; nor is it created by actual grant or conveyance; and therefore either the bond, warrant of attorney, or deed of covenant may be stamped with the ad valorem duty, at the election of the parties. See the fourth subsequent provision of the act. And where copyhold or customary lands or hereditaments are charged together with other property for securing the same annuity, under the above-mentioned provisions, and the provisions of the act, page 1590-1, the whole ad valorem duty should be charged on the deed relating to the other property. In all which cases the copyhold surrender should be charged on a one pound stamp: and if with the trusts, &c. the surrender should contain thirty folios or upwards, then for every entire quantity of fifteen folios contained therein, over and above the first fifteen folios, a further progressive duty of one pound (pages 1575-6). However, it is proper to apprise the reader, that under a previous part of the act (page 1571), it has been supposed, that the surrender, or the memorandum thereof, if made out of court, or the copy of court roll of the surrender, if made in court, is to be deemed the principal instrument, where it is made subject to a condition to become absolute on non-payment of an annuity. But as that part of the act is qualified by the above-mentioned express provisions, it seems that the construction alluded to is erroneous. The object of the legislature appears to have been, to secure an immediate payment of the ad valorem duty; but the covenant to surrender might never be performed, and indeed frequently the surrender is not made for months afterwards, and sometimes not at all: in which case the revenue would be defrauded.

Where copyholds are charged with other property, the deed relating to the other property should be stamped with the ad valorem duty.

Where the ad valorem duty is charged on some collateral security, the surrender should be on a 1*l.* stamp, with progressive duty of 1*l.*

"every attorney, and side clerk in the office of Pleas of the Exchequer, or other person who shall prepare any warrant of attorney to confess judgment, which is to be subject to any defeazance, must cause such defeazance to be written on the same paper or parchment on which the warrant of attorney is written; or cause a memorandum in writing to be made on such warrant of attorney, containing the substance and effect of such defeazance." In the construction of this rule, it has been determined, that if the attorney employed to prepare a warrant of attorney to confess judgment, which is to be made subject to a defeazance, neglect to insert such defeazance in the warrant, the security is not thereby avoided against the innocent party; but the attorney is guilty of a breach of duty imposed on him by the Court, and answerable for it on motion. Shaw v. Evans,

A defeazance to a warrant of attorney, must be written on it, or a memorandum indorsed, containing the substance.

An attorney who neglects it, is guilty of a breach of duty, and the defendant may move the Court against him.

(b) The above seems to be the most usual form; but sometimes, the defeazance is written immediately under the warrant of attorney; in which case, say,

And by the above rule of all the Courts, "no judgment can be signed upon any warrant, authorising an attorney to confess judgment, without such warrant being delivered to, and filed by the clerk of the dockets, or master in the Exchequer; who is ordered to file the warrants in the order in which they are received." Therefore, where a warrant of attorney is filed for the purpose of having judgment signed, it is generally prudent for the grantee previously to have a fair copy of the warrant of attorney and defeazance. But in order to make a warrant of attorney valid in case of bankruptcy, under the 3 Geo. IV. c. 39, s. 1, it is sufficient to file a copy of it with the defeazance, &c. whether the judgment is to be confessed in the King's Bench, or in any other Court.

When a judgment is to be signed, the original warrant of attorney must be filed in the office: therefore the grantee should previously have a copy.

It is sufficient to file a copy, to make it valid in case of bankruptcy.

But every annuity granted out of a chattel interest will be a chattel interest, although it be limited to the grantee and his heirs for a life or lives. An interest which in its nature is a chattel real, cannot be rendered transmissible to heirs. Litt. § 740." 1 Pres. Abs. 446. And see Butt's case, 7 Co. 25, a; ante, 621, 629.

A personal annuity may be limited to the grantee and his heirs in fee;

or quasi in tail;

But a personal annuity, that is, where it is not charged on lands, but only secured by grant, bond, or covenant, or bequeathed by will, may be limited to a man and his heirs in fee: F. N. B. 152. A; Finch's Law, 301, ed. Pickering; ante, Vol. I. 580; Smith v. Pybus, 9 Ves. 574-5: or quasi in tail, as a fee simple conditional at common law, to become absolute and alienable on having issue; an annuity, in the proper sense of the word, not being within the statute de donis, and consequently of it, there can be no remainder limited. Turner v. Turner, 1 Bro. C. C. 324, 319; Ambl. 782; 5 Bro. Par. Cas. 435. S. C.

or pour auter vie.

And if not aliened will descend to the heir.

Or such a personal annuity may be limited to a man, and his heirs, pour auter vie, Savery v. Dyer, Ambl. 140; ante, 593. And in all these cases, the personal annuity may be aliened either by the ancestor, or his heir; 9 Ves. 574; or by husband and wife, entitled to it in right of the wife, ut ante, 329; but if not aliened, it will descend to the heir. Ante, Vol. I. 583, 588, 638; 9 Ves. 575.

An ancillary security arising from real estate, for paying a personal annuity pour auter vie, will not prevent its going to executors.

Where there is an ancillary security, or (according to Lord Hardwicke's expression, Vol. I. 593,) a supplemental fund to arise from real estate, for payment of a personal annuity pour auter vie, originally granted or bequeathed to the grantee or legatee alone, (ante, Vol. I. 593-4,) or to him, his executors, administrators, and assigns, (ibid, 628,) it seems that the capability of its devolution to the personal representatives, is not thereby prevented: such as a conveyance of freeholds, or a conditional surrender of copyholds in fee, upon trusts for sale in case of default in paying the personal annuity pour auter vie; where the annuity is not charged on the lands: and consequently in such a case, the objection stated, ante, Vol. I. 587, would be inapplicable.

An ancillary security arising from a chattel real, for paying a personal annuity in fee, &c. will not prevent its descent to heirs.

So likewise it seems that the descent of a personal annuity to heirs, whether limited to the grantee and his heirs in fee, or quasi in tail, or pour auter vie, would not be prevented, although there be, from a chattel real, an ancillary security, for payment of the personal annuity: such as an assignment of leaseholds, or a demise for years, upon trusts for sale, in case of default in paying such a personal annuity before the expiration of the term for years.

Personal annuities of inheritance are not common in modern times. For if A. grant, that he and his heirs, (vide Vol. I. 584) will pay a yearly sum to B. and his heirs, which forms an annuity in fee, or covenant or give a bond that he and his heirs will pay such an annuity, the heirs of the grantor will not in law or reason be liable to this demand, unless they inherit from their ancestor, who created it, real assets, that is, descendible lands or tenements sufficient for that purpose. Co. Litt. 144, b. 2 Wooddeson's Lect. 75. But the executors or administrators will be bound so far as they have assets, whether they are named or not. Dyer, 14, pl. 69; Co. Litt. 209. a; Wms. n. 2 Saund. 137. a; Noy's Max. 200, 233, 241, 9th ed. And it seems that a Court of Equity would compel the personal representatives of the grantor, so far as they have assets, to set aside such a sum as would be sufficient to answer the personal annuity for ever; but the annuitant would have the absolute disposition of the fund so set aside. Smith v. Pybus, 9 Ves. 574. And as to the personal representatives of an heir, who had real assets by descent from the ancestor who created the personal annuity, it seems therefore to follow that a Court of Equity would compel them to set aside so much of the heir's personal estate, as would be sufficient to answer the personal annuity, so far as the value of the real assets descended to the heir would extend. Still it is not a charge upon the land, but only on the person of the heir, in respect to his having real assets; and as to the personal representatives, only in respect to the personal assets, if they have any, and then only so far as they will extend. If annuities of inheritance, therefore, were more common, it is obvious, they in general would probably be of short duration. They serve, however, to illustrate the principles and distinctions of our law.

Personal annuities of inheritance are not common, because the heirs and executors are only answerable so far as they have assets.

It seems a court of equity would compel the executors to set aside assets, to answer the annuity; but the annuitant may dispose of the fund.

Proviso dispensing with necessity to revive judgment seems unnecessary.

(l) Some gentlemen insert here the usual provision, that it shall not be necessary to revive the judgment; but it appears to be unnecessary in the defeazance. Indeed it seems unnecessary in any of the securities, since it has been determined, ante, 289, that a warrant of attorney to confess judgment, whether on bond or not, is not within the statute 8 and 9 W. III. c. 11, s. 8, which requires suggestions of breaches, and the scire facias. See 2 Tidd's Prac. 1142, 7th ed. 2 Archbold's Prac. 12. [See Morris v. Jones. 2 B. & C. 243.]

CONSIDERATION A CONVEYANCE.

(n) If the annuity be granted in consideration of an absolute conveyance of an estate, the defeazance will terminate here.

A vendor of an estate, in consideration of an annuity, is entitled to have it secured on the estate, and by a bond and judgment.

Where a man sells an estate for an annuity, without any agreement being made respecting the security to be given for it, he is entitled to have it secured, not only upon the estate, but also by the bond of the purchaser, and a judgment to be entered up against him. Remington v. Deverall, 2 Anstr. 550. In Ker v. Clobery, V. C. 27 Mar. 1819, Sug. Vend. 225. 6th ed. which came before the court upon a petition between the heir and executor, it appeared that the equity of redemption was sold to the mortgagee for the mortgage money; and a life annuity to be paid to the seller and his wife, and the survivor of them; but nothing was said as to the mode in which the annuity was to be secured. It was held to be a purchase of the equity of redemption, subject to the annuity, which ought to be charged on the estate. It was an interest reserved by the seller out of the estate. It follows, from the general rule of equity, by which that which is agreed to be done is considered as actually performed, Francis's Maxims of Equity, XIII. 1 Fonbl. Treat. Equity, 419, 5th ed. ante, Vol. I. 86 (n), that if a person agree to give a contingent consideration for an estate, as an annuity for the life of the vendor, and the vendor die before the conveyance is executed, by which event the annuity ceases, yet the purchaser will be entitled to a specific performance of his contract. Sug. Vend. 246, 6th ed. Thus in the case of Mortimer v. Capper, 1 Bro. C. C. 156. A. contracted to sell an estate to B. for 200*l.* and 50*l.* a year annuity; and two days after the contract was reduced into writing A. was found drowned; the Lord Chancellor directed an enquiry as to the value of an annuity for the life of A. in order to introduce the question, whether an estate being disposed of for an annuity, which is a contingency, the contract shall fall to the ground, if no payment of the annuity shall be made. He said, that he thought if the price were fair, the contract ought not to be cut down, merely because the annuity, which was a contingent payment, never became payable. The parties in the above cause were so well satisfied with the opinion of the court, that they never, it is said, brought it back for further directions. 3 Bro. C. C. 609. And see Wyvill v. Bishop of Exeter, 1 Price, 292. So in a later case, Jackson v. Lever, 3 Bro. C. C. 605, where A. sold an estate by auction in consideration of a life annuity, the first payment to be made on the 25th of December, 1787; but in case he should die before the 29th of September, 1787, up to which time he was to receive the rents, the contract should be void. A. died on the 1st of February, 1788, after a sudden and short illness of only two days; and owing to some delays, the conveyances were not executed. The quarter's payment, due at Christmas, was tendered to the vendor's agent by the purchaser, a few days after it became due; but the agent declined receiving it, saying, that the conveyance would be soon completed, and that it was not necessary for the purchaser to make such payment in the mean time. On the first hearing, Lord Thurlow said, he did not see, that if an annuity was contracted for, why the consideration should not be paid. It was, he said, objected, that the contract could not be carried into execution modo et forma, and that had great weight where there had been no payment. His Lordship afterwards made his decree for a specific performance, on payment of the arrears of the annuity, the consideration for the purchase of the estate.—The case of Paine v. Meller, 6 Ves. 352, bears on this point also. Lord Eldon, in delivering judgment, said, that, as to the annuity cases, and all others, the true answer had been given; that the party has the thing he bought, though no payment may have been made; for he bought subject to contingency. And in the later case of Coles v. Trecothick, 9 Ves. 246, his Lordship said, it has been held upon true principles, that if a man contracts to sell an estate for a life annuity, if the contract is signed, and the party to have the annuity died before the end of the first half year, the court must execute the contract.

But if an estate be sold for life annuity, and a payment becomes due before the death of the nominee, and the purchaser neglect to make or tender it, he cannot then insist on a specific performance.

But if in a case of this nature, a payment of the annuity become due before the death of the vendor, and the purchaser neglect to make or tender it, he cannot insist on a specific performance. This was decided by the case of Pope v. Root, 7 Bro. P. C. 184. A. contracted with B. for the sale of an estate to him, in consideration of a life annuity, and the completion of the agreement was delayed by the illness of a mortgagee, who was to have been paid off. Two days after the time mentioned for completing the purchase, A. met with an accident, and died within a few days. By the terms of the contract, the first payment of the annuity became due previously to the death of A., but it was not paid or tendered. And Lord Chancellor Bathurst dismissed the bill for a specific performance, and the decree was affirmed in the House of Lords. See Lord Bathurst's decision in Baldwin v. Boulter, 1 Bro. C. C. 156, cited.

The reader will observe, that the decisions in the cases of Mortimer v. Capper, and Jackson v. Lever, do not infringe upon that of the House of Lords, in the prior case of Pope v. Root, but reduce the rules on this subject to an equitable and uniform standard; for the only case in which a purchaser cannot require the assistance of equity, is where he has by laches forfeited his right to its aid; namely, where a payment of the annuity became due, and he neglected to pay or tender it. Sug. Vend. 249, 6th ed. [257, 7th ed.]

Therefore it should be declared, that the nominee's death, before the conveyance, shall not vacate the contract, unless the annuity shall become due, and after demand remain unpaid at his death.

To obviate all doubt, it seems advisable, in agreements for purchase, where the consideration is an annuity for the life of the vendor, to expressly declare, that the death of the vendor, previously to the completion of the contract, shall not put an end to it, although a payment of the annuity shall not have become due, or having become due, shall not have been made or tendered; but that unless a payment shall have become due, and after demand in writing made thereof in the vendor's life time, shall have remained unpaid at his decease, the purchaser shall be entitled to a conveyance, on payment of the annuity up to the death of the vendor. Judgment may be entered up on a warrant of attorney at the time therein specified; and although the warrant of attorney be given to secure the payment of money at a future time, it is not necessary to delay signing judgment until default in payment; MS. M. 1814; and see Anonymous, Hardw. 270, ed. Lee; unless that delay be expressly required by the defeazance. Where a warrant of attorney is given to secure the payment of an annuity, or of money by instalments, or the like, it is prudent, and indeed usual, to docket the judgment immediately. 2 Archbold's Prac. 15. 17. For the judgment must be entered on the roll, docketed, and carried to and filed in the treasury of the court—1, in order to bind the defendant's lands—2, to enable the plaintiff to bring debt or scire facias on the judgment—3, or to charge the defendant in execution—4, or to proceed against the bail on their recognizance—5, in case a writ of error is brought—and 6, in order to bind assets in the hands of the executor or administrator of the defendant. 1 Archb. Prac. 206. Also, in order to bind lands in Middlesex or Yorkshire, it is necessary to file a memorial of the judgment in the registry office of such counties respectively, before which the lands will not be affected or bound by the judgment. See the Form, tit. MEMORIAL. [Vol. V. 230.]

Judgment may be signed, although default has not been made in payment; unless the contrary be stipulated.

Where there is no covenant, there should be a bond.

A bond seems to be unnecessary where there is a covenant.

* Vide ante, 359. A judgment may be as effectually entered up on a warrant of attorney at any time, whether there be or be not a bond. But where there is no covenant for paying an annuity, a bond should also be taken. Yet where there is a covenant, a bond also seems to be an unnecessary expense; for the grantee may prove for the value of the annuity, in case of the grantor's bankruptcy, or receive a dividend in case of his insolvency, whether it be secured by bond or covenant or by bond and covenant; ante, Vol. I. 472, 479†. And such a covenant, if under seal, creates a debt by specialty, ante, 75, which will rank equally with debts on bond. Parker v. Harvey, 11 Vin. Abr. 292, pl. 39. 3 Bac. Abr. Gwill. ed. 81. And it seems that under such a covenant, by the 3 W. & M. c. 14, an action of debt may be maintained against a devisee of the covenantor, as well as against the heir, when he is named;

Agreement for sale of an annuity decreed several years after, where the consideration money had been paid, but the lives had not been named, the delay being occasioned by the grantor.

(a) Where upon a contract for sale of an annuity to be charged lands, the investigation of the grantor's title having occupied some time, the grantee advanced the consideration money immediately upon the security of a promissory note, and a deposit of the title deeds, with a memorandum of the agreement for purchasing the annuity, which was to commence from the time of paying the consideration money, and to continue for three lives, to be named by the grantee; a specific performance was decreed several years afterwards, although the lives had not been named; the delay having been occasioned by the grantor, who positively refused to perform his agreement; but the grantee was directed to nominate the lives of persons who were in existence at the time of the contract. Pritchard v. Ovey, 1 Jac. & Walk. 396. Instructions as to the inrolment of satisfaction piece.

(a) The annuity act does not authorise the entry of a discharge in the books. It is however generally done, as it proves in case a search should be made, that the grantor is freed from the annuity. The entry of a satisfaction piece should never be omitted, when the grantor has several estates, because the memorial does not disclose the property on which the annuities are charged. The satisfaction piece should be written on a small piece of unstamped parchment, and should be left at the Inrolment Office, between the hours of ten and two. The person who takes it sees it entered, and signs a memorandum. The fee at the office is five shillings.

Power to lords of manors to appoint one gamekeeper to kill game, within each manor.

By the 5 Ann. c. 14. s. 4. any lord or lady may of his or her respective lordship or manor, by writing under his or her hand and seal, empower his or her gamekeeper or gamekeepers, upon his or her own lordship or manor as aforesaid, to kill hare, pheasant, partridge, or any other game whatsoever. And by the 9 Ann. c. 25. s. 1. no lord or lady of a manor, shall make, constitute, or appoint above one person to be a gamekeeper within any one manor, with power or authority to kill or destroy the game thereof: and the name of such person shall be entered with the clerk of the peace of the county, riding, or division wherein the manor lies; such entry to be made and viewed without fee or reward; and a certificate thereof to be granted by the clerk of the peace, on payment of one shilling: [and the other gamekeepers to be treated as unqualified persons:] and by the 25 Geo. III. c. 50. s. 2. every deputation or appointment of a gamekeeper granted to any person by any lord or lady of a manor, in England or Wales, shall be registered with the clerk of the peace of the county, riding, or place where the manor shall lie, and such gamekeeper shall take out a certificate thereof, annually, the duties upon which are specified in stat. 52 Geo. III. c. 93. sch. (L). 2 Burn's Justice, 523, 23d ed. sect. 9. If any person, to whom any deputation or appointment of a gamekeeper shall be granted, shall, for twenty days next after the granting thereof, neglect or refuse to register the same, and take out a certificate thereon, as aforesaid, he shall forfeit 20*l*. By sect. 14, in case of a new deputation of a gamekeeper, the same shall be registered with the clerk of the peace, and after a new certificate thereon obtained, as aforesaid, the first certificate shall be void, and the person acting under the same, after notice to him given of such new certificate, shall be liable to the penalties prescribed by this act, in the same manner as if no certificate had been granted to him. By sect. 17, no certificate obtained under any deputation or appointment, shall authorise any such gamekeeper to take or destroy game out of or beyond the precincts or limits of the manor, for or in respect of which such deputation or appointment was given and made. But a gamekeeper of a lord of a manor has a right to carry a gun any where out of the manor, although he cannot use it out of the manor. Rogers v. Carter, 2 Wils. 390.

Appointment to be registered with the clerk of the peace.

Assessed taxes on game-keepers.

After notice of a new certificate, the former gamekeeper cannot act.

No gamekeeper can destroy game out of his lord's manor; but he may carry his gun, although he cannot use it out of the manor.

Lords of manors may appoint qualified or unqualified persons gamekeepers, with authority to kill game.

By the 48 Geo. III. c. 93. s. 2. after repealing the 2 Jac. I. c. 27. s. 2. and the 3 Geo. I. c. 11, it is enacted, That it shall be lawful for any lord or lady of any manor to appoint and depute any person whatever, whether acting as a gamekeeper to any other person or not, or whether retained and paid for as the male servant of any other person or not, or whether a qualified person or not, to be a gamekeeper to any such manor, with authority to such person as gamekeeper, to kill game within the same for his own use, or for the use of any other person or persons whatever, to be specified in such appointment or deputation, whether qualified or not: and no person so appointed gamekeeper as aforesaid, and empowered to kill game for his own use, or for the use of any other person so specified as aforesaid, and not killing any game for the use of the lord or lady of the manor for which such deputation shall be given, shall be deemed or taken to be, or entered or paid for as the gamekeeper or male servant of the lord or lady making such appointment or giving such deputation as aforesaid.

Gamekeepers so appointed shall have the same rights as if qualified.

Sect. 3. And that any person appointed gamekeeper under the authority of this act to kill game for his own use, or the use of any other person, shall have the same rights, privileges, power and authority, as if he had been legally qualified and appointed to act as gamekeeper to kill game, for the use of the lord or lady of the manor appointing such gamekeeper under any laws in force immediately before the passing of this act.

Reputed manors, give no right to appoint gamekeepers.

The lord or lady of a reputed manor, has no power under any of these acts, either to appoint a gamekeeper to seize guns, engines, &c. or to kill game. Many of the places which are called manors, would not be found to be such in point of law if the matter were strictly examined. To constitute a manor, it is necessary not only that there should be two freeholders within the manor, but two freeholders holding of the manor, subject to escheats. Chetwode v. Crew, Willes, 618: [it seems that there must be more than two. Watk. Cop. 9, n. (o).] but a copyhold manor is not capable of an escheat of a freehold, because that which comes in lieu of another ought to be of the same nature, and then the freehold escheated would be copyhold, which is repugnant and impossible. Rex v. Staverton, Yelv. 191. Glover v. Lane, 3 Durnf. and East, 447: Bradshaw v. Lawson, 4 Durnf. and East, 446. Rumsey v. Walton, cited there. [Nor can the lord of a wapentake appoint a gamekeeper. Earl of Aylesbury v. Pattison. Doug. 28.]

Manor extinct for want of freeholders;

If all the freeholds, except one, escheat or become forfeited, to the lord; or if he purchase all the freeholds, except one; or if he grant away the services of all the freeholders, except one; or release their services to all the freeholders, except one; notwithstanding the demesnes and services of the copyholders remain, and although it be known by the name of a manor, yet it is not in law a manor, for want of freeholders, the maintainers and upholders of a Court Baron. But the lord may still hold a court for the copyholders. 4 Co. 26. b. Co. Cop. sect. 31. Tr. 53. Vines v. Durham, cited Sir Moyle Finch's case, 6 Co. 67. a. And although it would cease to be a legal manor, yet it would still be a seigniory in gross. F. N. B. 3. C. 1 Watk. Cop. 21.

GAMEKEEPER. 1 Cru. Dig. 52, 2d. ed. 3 Bac. Abr. 227. 6th ed. Fines, &c. (B.) Co. Tr. 54. The manor is extinct, because there cannot be a manor, unless there be a Court Baron, which is the chief prop and pillar of a manor; Co. Cop. s. 31. Tr. 49; [Heywood. Dissert. on Ranks among the Angl. Sax. 145. Cruise on Dign. 24;] and a Court Baron cannot be held, unless there be two suitors at the least: The King v. Staverton, Yelv. 190, 191; because in a Court Baron the suitors are judges; Co. Litt. 58. a. Melwich v. Luter, 4 Co. 26. b. 4 Inst. 268. Co. Tr. 51; and if there be but one suitor, he has no peer, and consequently there is no person to sit in judgment on him in the manor court; Baldwin v. Tudge, 2 Wils. 20. and therefore when there is but one freehold remaining, the manor is extinct and determined. Bro. Abr. Comprise, &c. pl. 31. 150. b. Tenures, pl. 102. Suite & contribution, pl. 17. Court Barron, &c. pl. 22. Kitchin on Courts, 4. a. Fr. ed. 7, 4th ed. So if the lord transfer to a stranger the services of all his tenants, and reserve to himself the demesnes; or if he grant away the demesnes and reserve the services; in both cases the lord has a manor only in name, because in the first case he wants demesnes, and in the other he wants services. Co. Tr. 53. Sir Moyle Finch's case, 6 Co. 64. a. The King v. the Bishop of Chester, Skin. 661. 1 English Copyholder, 379. So if a manor descend to copartners, and a partition be made, and the entire desmesnes are allotted to one, and the services to another, the manor is then suspended, for neither of them has any other than a nominal manor; but if one of them die without issue, and the demesnes descend to her who has the services, or vice versa, the manor is revived again; because on the partition they were in by act of law, and the manor was only suspended, and was not extinct, and the demesnes and services were united again by act of law. Earl of Gloucester's case, Bro. Abr. Extinguishment, pl. 13. 6 Co. 64, a. 2 Roll. Abr. 122. (F). pl. 3. (H). 15 Vin. Abr. 222, 224. So it is said, if a partition be made of a manor between two coparceners, and on the partition each has part of the demesnes and part of the services, because each of them is in by act of law, each of them has a manor, not in name only, but in reality and in name: Sir Moyle Finch's case, 6 Co. 64. a. Co. Cop. s. 31. Tr. 52, 53. 2 Roll. Abr. 122. (G): because they were compellable to make partition by the common law, being in by descent. But it is otherwise of joint-tenants, for they are in by purchase, and were not compellable by the common law to make partition. Marshe v. Smith, 1 Leon. 27. [And Vol. I. 196.] So if a man has a manor, and he grant part of the demesnes, and part of the services to another, the grantee shall not have a manor, because a man by his own act cannot create a manor at this day; and thus it appears, that fortior et potentior est dispositio legis quam hominis. Sir Moyle Finch's case, 6 Co. 64. Gilb. Ten. 210. Morris v. Smith, 1 Cro. 38. However, the doctrine that coparceners by separating the services from the demesnes;

On partition of a manor.

after partition shall have several manors, is rather doubtful, because it was held in the Queen v. the Duchess of Bolton, 6 Mod. 151. that a manor is an entire thing, and not severable: and common sense seems to oppose the doctrine, because there might by possibility be ten coparceners, in which case, if the doctrine were followed, there might be ten manors made from one manor. After a partition of the demesnes and services either by joint tenants, tenants in common, or coparceners, it seems that they may hold one joint court baron, and consequently may jointly appoint gamekeepers.

The prescriptive rights of a reputed manor remain.

Although a manor exists only by reputation, yet nevertheless all its prescriptive rights remain; such as the right to wrecks, estrays, &c. and if there be but one freehold tenant, the seigniory and services as to him remain. [Reputation alone is admissible evidence to prove the existence of a manor, without proof of the exercise of any manorial right. Steel v. Prickett, 2 Stark. 466.] The power to appoint a gamekeeper however is not a prescriptive right. Yet Mr. Chitty, in his treatise on the game laws, 1 Vol. 25, says, "It should seem that a manor by reputation, but which has ceased to be a legal manor by defect of suitors, may yet retain its privilege as a preserve for game, and might authorise the lord to appoint a gamekeeper. Soane v. Ireland, 10 East, 259, sed quære." This opinion, however, cannot be supported, because the act of parliament gives the power only to "lords of manors," who had no such power at common law; and therefore the person entitled to exercise that power, must fully answer the words of the act. Moreover Soane v. Ireland, cited by Mr. Chitty, is not in point; for the question in that case was, whether an allegation in a declaration, that A. was seised of the manor of F, and that he and all those whose estate he has in the said manor, have immemorially appointed a sexton of the parish of F. is sustained by proof of his seisin of a quondam manor, which had ceased to be a legal manor by defect of freehold tenants, and existed only by reputation; in which case Lord Ellenborough said, If F. were once a manor, as it appeared, this prescriptive right would still belong to it, though other manorial rights, such as that of holding courts, for want of freehold tenants, might be gone and severed from it. It would still be a manor by reputation for this purpose, which will satisfy the allegation; and it was not necessary to prove it a continuing manor for all purposes. Soane v. Ireland, 10 East, 259. [See also as to the appointment of a gamekeeper under a colourable title to a manor, Hunt v. Andrews, 3 B. &. A. 341.]

No lord of a manor under the degree of an esquire, can appoint gamekeepers to seize engines, &c.

No lord or lady of a manor, under the degree of an ESQUIRE, can appoint gamekeepers to seize guns, nets, and other engines used for the destruction of game, 22 and 23 Car. II. c. 25, s. 2, whatever the estate may be; for no landed estate, however large, will confer the title, as the term esquire has no relation whatever to landed property; but it must be acquired either by office, the king's patent, or some of the means laid down by Selden and Camden. A lord of a manor is certainly not an esquire by virtue of his manor or royalty, though in common acceptation he is considered as such. Per Mr. Justice Willes, Jones v. Smart, 1 Durnf. & East, 50, in opposition to a very loose dictum in Mallock v. Eastly, 7 Mod. 488. His lordship added, "Nothing can be more oppressive than the present system of the game laws. We are told that they arose from the old forest laws, which restricted the right of killing game to much narrower limits; and hence that these new regulations encroach on no privileges to which we were before entitled, are introductive of no new or extraordinary severities; but on the contrary, are mild and supportable, when compared with the sources from whence they flow. Mr. Justice Blackstone, however, in the 2d book of his Commentaries, c. 27, holds a different language. And wherever a law is productive of tyranny, I shall ever give my consent to narrow the construction."

Who are esquires.

ESQUIRES in law, and properly so called, are the sons of all the peers and lords of parliament, in the lives of their fathers; 2 Inst. 667. 2 Vin. Abr. 84, pl. 28; the eldest sons of the younger sons of peers, and their eldest sons, in perpetual succession; Doderidge's Nobility, 144. Selden's Tit. Hon. 342; and consequently the younger sons of peers, after the death of their fathers. Cowel's Interpreter, Esquier. All the noblemen of other nations, and Scotch and Irish peers, if they be not knights. 3 Selden's Works, 848. 2 Inst. 667. The eldest sons of baronets; Cow. ut supra; the eldest sons of knights; 2 Inst. 596. 667. Wood's Inst. 45, 10th ed., and their eldest sons for ever. Dod. Nobility, 144. Selden's Titles of Honour, 342, ed. 1614. Esquires created expressly, with a collar of SS. and spurs of silver; Spelman's Glossary, verbo Armigeri, 3 Selden's Works, 853—4. Tit. Hon. 342; of which at present, there are none. Persons to whom the king gives arms by letters patent, with the title esquire, and their eldest sons for ever.—Seld. Tit. Hon. 343. Com. Dig. Dignity. (B. 8.) Esquires of knights of the bath, each of whom formerly constituted two at his installation; 3 Selden's Works, 851; Byshe's Upton de Studio Militari, 21; 1 Dugdale's Antiquities of Warwickshire, 708; Appendix Stuart's View of Society in Europe, 433, 2d ed.; Anstis's Historical Essay upon the Knighthood of the Bath, 66, 72, 99, ed. 1725; Stow's Annals, 899; but the number now is three; for by the statutes of the order of the bath, sect. 15, 23d May, 11 Geo. I. at which time the order was revived, each knight is required to have at his installation one young esquire, and two esquires governors; all of whom have the same rights and advantages as gentlemen of the privy chamber: and it is by the same section declared, that the eldest son of every of these esquires shall have and use the addition and title of esquire in all acts, proceedings and pleadings. Statutes of the Order of the Bath, p. 32. Barristers at law, by their office or profession. Persons attending upon the king's coronation in some employment, or persons employed in any superior office in the kingdom, or serving in some place of better note in the king's household. Dod. Nobility, 144—5. Selden's Tit. Honor, 343. And it has been supposed, that all who bear an office of trust under the crown, and who are styled esquires by the king in their commissions and appointments, as they are once honoured by the king with the title of esquire, they have a right to that distinction for life; Christian's note 1 Bla. Com. 406 (19); such, for instance, as sheriffs of counties, or captains in the army or navy; Christian's Game Laws, 132. Notwithstanding the 44 Geo. III. c. 54, s. 26, enacted, that all officers in corps of volunteers, having commissions from lieutenants of counties, should rank with the officers of his majesty's regular forces, yet a commission signed by the lord lieutenant of a county, and announced in the Gazette, constituting a person captain commandant of a corps of volunteer infantry, and styling him an esquire, does not create such a person an esquire, so as to qualify his son and heir apparent to kill game; because the lord lieutenant cannot confer honours; and the Court said there was no pretence to call such a gentleman an esquire; Talbot v. Eagle, 1 Taunt. 510; consequently such a person, though lord of a manor, has no power to appoint a gamekeeper to seize engines, &c. Although, according to Mr. Serj. Lens's opinion, 2 Burn's Justice, Chetwynd's ed. 505, "that the eldest son of a clergyman is not as such qualified under any of the descriptions of the statute 22 and 23 Car. II. c. 25, s. 3; and that it makes no difference in this respect that the father is a master of arts in an English university, and in the commission of the peace:" still it seems, that a clergyman in the commission of the peace, lord of a manor, would be considered as not being under the degree of an esquire, so as to qualify him to appoint a gamekeeper to seize engines, &c. The ground of the learned Serjeant's opinion perhaps is, that such a clergyman is neither an esquire, nor a "person of higher degree."

A clergyman, lord of a manor, may appoint a gamekeeper to seize engines.

As married women and widows are entitled to the same rank among each other, as their husbands would respectively have borne between themselves, except such rank be merely professional or official: and unmarried women to the same rank as their eldest brothers would bear among men, during the lives of their fathers, 1 Bla. Com. 406, n., it seems that these ranks must be the criterion by which to judge, whether as ladies of manors, they are enabled to appoint gamekeepers to seize engines, &c. Lord Chief Justice Willes appears to have mistaken the words of the statute, when he says, a lady of a manor cannot bear the title required by the statute of Charles the Second. Mallock v. Eastly, 7 Mod. 488. The daughter of a peer, the widow of a knight, &c. are not under the degree of an esquire; and, most clearly, under the statute of Charles the Second, they have authority to appoint a gamekeeper to seize engines, &c.

Any lord of a manor may appoint a gamekeeper to kill game.

Any lord or lady of a manor, although not of the degree of an esquire; or a corporation, though its members are not of the degree of esquires, Spurrier v. Vale, 1 Campb. 457. 10 East, 413. may appoint a gamekeeper to kill game, but not to seize engines, &c.; for although the 5 Ann. c. 14, only authorized the lord or lady of a manor to empower his or her gamekeeper to kill game, viz. the gamekeeper authorized by the 22 and 23 Car. II. c. 25, yet the 48 Geo. III. c. 93, s. 2, authorized "any lord or lady of any manor," of whatever degree, to appoint a gamekeeper to kill game.

The lord of a manor cannot authorize another person to appoint a gamekeeper.

The person to appoint a gamekeeper under these acts, must be dominus pro tempore; for under the rule delegatus non potest delegare, a man cannot give or convey to another the power of appointing a gamekeeper, without a conveyance also of the manor itself. Such a power is a mere emanation of the manor, and inseparable from it. It is a mere shadow, accompanying the substance. Calcraft v. Gibbs, 5 Durnf. and East, 20. See a form of a lease to enable the lessee to appoint gamekeepers, post, 396.

[A gamekeeper justifying a seizure of game on his lord's manor, must show a specific authority to seize the particular game, Bird v. Dale, 1 J. B. Moore, 290.]

Additional powers to appoint gamekeepers in Wales.

All the before-mentioned provisions extend as well to Wales as to England; and now, by the following act, 59 Geo. III. c. 102, there are additional powers given to appoint gamekeepers of lands in WALES;

"An Act for further regulating the Appointment of Gamekeepers in WALES; and which received the royal assent 12th July, 1819.

"Whereas there are now several districts and lands, within the principality of Wales, which are not known to be comprehended within the boundaries of any manors, lordships, or royalties; and there are also several other districts and lands within the principality, which formerly belonged to or formed part or parts of such manors, lordships, or royalties, but which have been alienated therefrom or enfranchised by the lord or lords for the time being of such manors, lordships, or royalties, and many of such districts and lands are very extensive: And

whereas the owner or owners of such districts and lands cannot, nor can any other person or persons appoint any gamekeeper or other servant to kill game on such lands, for the use of the owner or owners thereof, without subjecting such gamekeeper or other servant to the penalties imposed by divers acts of parliament made for the preservation of the game; which regulations and enactments have tended greatly to the encouragement of poachers and other idle and disorderly persons, to destroy the game within such districts of the said principality: For remedy whereof," it was thereby enacted, "That from and after the first day of August next, it shall and may be lawful to and for all and every persons and person, being seised in fee or as of freehold, or otherwise beneficially entitled in his, her, or their own right, of and in any lands situate and being within the said principality, of the full and clear annual rent of five hundred pounds, and not being within the bounds of any manor, lordship, or royalty, or being within the precinct or bounds of any manor, lordship, or royalty, shall have been or shall be enfranchised or alienated therefrom; * or to appoint by any writing or writings under his, her, or their hand or hands, a gamekeeper to preserve, or to course, hunt, shoot at, or kill game, for the use of the person or persons who shall make such appointment, in, over, and upon such his, her, or their lands, and in, over, and upon the lands of every other person or persons who shall, by license in writing under his, her, or their hand or hands, authorize him, her, or them to appoint a gamekeeper or gamekeepers, or other servant or servants, to preserve, course, hunt, shoot at, or kill game in, over, and upon the lands of the person or persons not being within the bounds of any manor, lordship, or royalty, so granting such license.

Persons possessing certain property may appoint gamekeepers.

"II. And be it further enacted, That every such gamekeeper having such appointment as aforesaid, during the continuance of such appointment, shall not be made subject or liable to any penalties imposed by any former statutes of this realm, for having any game in his or their custody or possession, or for coursing, hunting, shooting at, or killing game, on or upon any lands mentioned in his or their appointment or appointments, and whereon the person or persons making such appointment or appointments has or have any power, license, or autho-

Gamekeepers not subject to penalties under former acts.

* To preserve the sense, the word "or" should be omitted, as it has no correllative. A doubt being entertained whether the printed statutes were not in this respect incorrect; the original record has therefore been searched: the error is in the original. After the act passed the lords, it was amended in the Commons, by erasing a few lines; but by mistake the word "or" was not erased from the ingrossment.

GAMEKEEPER.

Act not to authorise appointment of gamekeepers of lands within any manor, and not enfranchised therefrom, without the consent in writing of the proprietor of the manor.

rity to make or grant any appointment or appointments by virtue of this act: Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend or give, or be construed to extend or give, any power or authority to any person or persons to make or grant any such appointment or appointments, licence or licences, to course, hunt, shoot at, or kill game in, over, or upon his, her, or their lands, situate or being within the precinct or boundary of any manor, lordship, or royalty, unless such lands shall have been enfranchised or alienated therefrom, without the licence or consent in writing of the proprietor or proprietors of such manor, lordship, or royalty, having the right to pursue and kill game in, upon, or over such lands, first had and obtained; and where in any existing lease or demise, or agreement for demising any lands, the lessor or lessors, landlord or landlords thereof, hath or have not reserved the right or power of hunting, shooting, or sporting, * when no such appointment or appointments, licence or licences, shall be valid, so as to authorize any such gamekeeper or gamekeepers, servant or servants, to enter upon any such lands, to preserve, course, hunt, shoot at, or kill game thereon, without the consent in writing of the person or persons in the actual possession of such lands first had and obtained.

Where lessors have not reserved the right of sporting, gamekeepers not to enter on lands without the consent in writing of lessees.

Lords of extensive manors may appoint gamekeepers for districts, to seize guns, engines, &c. and to kill game, &c. and whether qualified or not, &c.

" III. And whereas the manors, lordships, and royalties, within the said principality, are in many instances extremely extensive, and comprehend very large tracts of country: and whereas by an act passed in the ninth year of the reign of Queen Anne, intituled An Act for making the Act of the Fifth Year of her Majesty's Reign, for the better Preservation of the Game, perpetual, and for making the same more effectual, it is among other things enacted, that only one gamekeeper shall be appointed to kill game within any one manor: And whereas such restriction hath, on account of the extent of the said manors, lordships, and royalties, been found extremely inconvenient, and tended greatly to the destruction of the game within the said principality; be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the lords and ladies of such manors, lordships, and royalties, and the stewards of the crown for such manors, lordships, and royalties as appertain to his majesty within the said principality, shall be, and they are hereby authorized respectively to nominate and appoint gamekeepers for such districts and divisions of their respective manors, lordships, and royalties, as they shall think fit; and that each and every gamekeeper, so appointed, shall have the like powers, privileges, and authorities within such district or division as any gamekeeper appointed for the whole of a manor hath or would have by virtue of any act now in force: Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to authorize the appointment of more than one gamekeeper for the same district or division, and that all appointments under this act shall be registered with the clerk of the peace in like manner, and be subject to all other regulations which are enacted with respect to the appointment of gamekeepers of manors by any act now in force.

Act not to authorise appointment of more than one gamekeeper for the same district.

Appointments to be registered with the clerk of the peace.

"IV. And be it further enacted, That it shall and may be lawful to and for all and every persons and person, who shall or may grant or make any appointment or appointments, licence or licences, by virtue of this act, to revoke, annul, or render void all and every such consent, appointments and appointment, licences and licence, and to grant or make other consent or consents, appointments or licences in lieu thereof, as often as to him, her, or them, shall seem proper.

Persons granting appointments may annul the same, and grant others in lieu thereof.

"V. Provided always, That nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend the protection of this act to any person or persons killing game without a certificate taken out or purchased, according to the provisions of the act now in force respecting game certificates, or in any manner to affect the rights of his majesty, or his successors, or of any other person or persons, in, to, or over any manor, lordship, or royalty within the said principality."

This act not to extend to persons killing game without certificate.

FISHERIES.

The 4 and 5 Will. and Mar. c. 23, s. 5, reciting, that whereas divers idle, disorderly, and mean persons have and keep nets, angles, leaps, piches, and other engines for the taking and killing of fish out of the ponds, waters, rivers, and other fisheries, to the damage of the owners thereof, enacts that no person or persons whatsoever shall and may, at any time or times from and after the five and twentieth day of March, which shall be in the year of our Lord one thousand six hundred and ninety-three, have or keep any net, angle, leap, piche, or other engine for the taking of fish, other than the makers and sellers thereof, for their better conveniency in the sale of the same, and other than the owner and occupier of any river or fishery for the time being; and moreover, that it shall and may be lawful, not only for the owner or occupier of any river or fishery, and also for all and every other person and persons by him or them for that purpose appointed, to seize, detain, and keep, to his and their own use and uses, all and every net, angle, leap, piche, and other engine which he or they shall find used or laid, or in the custody or possession of any person or persons whatsoever, fishing in any river or fishery whatsoever, without the consent of the owner or occupier thereof, but also for any person or persons whatsoever (being thereunto authorized by warrant under the hand and seal of any justice of the peace of the same county, division, borough, town corporate, or any other place,) in the day-time, to search the houses, out-houses, or other places of any person or persons hereby prohibited to have or keep the same, as shall be suspected to have or keep in his or their custody or possession any net, angle, leap, piche, or other engine aforesaid, and the same and every or any of them to seize, detain, and keep to his and their own use and uses, or otherwise to cut in pieces or destroy, as things by this act prohibited to be kept by persons of their degree.

Persons not owners of fisheries, may not keep nets, &c.

Fishermen, &c. lawfully authorized, excepted.

Sect. VI. Provided that this act, or any thing therein contained, shall not extend, or be construed to extend, to abridge any fisherman or his apprentice or apprentices, lawfully authorized to fish in navigable rivers or waters, with lawful nets and engines; but that every of them shall and may (according to the laws and orders made, and to be made and settled for the good order, rule, and government of such navigable rivers and waters,) use the trade of fishing, as they lawfully might have done before the making of this act; any thing in this act contained to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding. See also 5th Geo. III. c. 14, s. 3.

Who have the right of fishing in rivers.

In rivers not navigable the proprietors of the land have the right of fishery on their respective sides; and it generally extends ad filum medium aquæ. But in navigable rivers the proprietors of the land on each side have it not: the fishery is common; it is, primâ facie, in the king, and is public. [And cannot be abridged even by a royal grant. Warren v. Matthews, Schultes. Seymour v. Lord Courtenay, 5 Burr. 2816. Williams v. Morland, 2 B. & C. 910.] If any one claims it exclusively, he must shew a right. If he can shew a right by prescription, he may then exercise an exclusive right; though the presumption is against him, unless he can prove such a prescriptive right. Therefore he may have an exclusive privilege of fishing, even in an arm of the sea: such a right shall not be presumed, but the contrary, primâ facie: but it is capable of being proved, Carter v. Murcot, 4 Burr. 2164. On guardianship by election.

(a) The right of making a guardian by election of the infant himself only arises, when, from a defect of law, the infant finds himself wholly unprovided with a guardian. Harg. n. Co. Litt. 88. b. (16).

Different kinds of guardianship.

For the purpose of ascertaining when the infant may exercise this right, it will be requisite to state a few particulars concerning the different kinds of guardianship.

Guardian in socage;

Guardianship by socage springs wholly out of tenure; and therefore the title to it cannot arise, unless the infant be seised of lands, or other hereditaments lying in tenure holden by socage, as most of the lands in England now are. It takes place on a descent only, and the title to it is in such of the infant's next of blood, as cannot have by descent the socage estate, in respect of which the guardianship arises, by descent, without any distinction between the whole and half blood. [King v. Wilby, 2 Mau. & Sel. 504.] Guardianship in socage ends, when the infant, whether male or female, attains fourteen, Hargr. n. Co. Litt. 88. b. (13). 3 Atk. 624. 1 Ves. sen. 91. even although the father be guardian on a maternal, or the mother on a paternal descent. Litt. s. 123. The heir may then elect a guardian, 3 Atk. 624, and at law he is then entitled to occupy the lands himself if he will, and call his guardian to account, although his own parent; Litt. s. 123; for the father or other ancestor, being guardian in socage, shall account with the infant for the profits; otherwise it would be more for the infant's advantage to have another person for his guardian. Co. Litt. 88. b. 3 Bac. Abr. 404 (a). [And see

Osborn v. Carden, Plow. 293; Wade v. Baker, 1 Ld. Raym. 131; and Rex v. Oakley, 10 East, 491. But guardianship in socage only applies to the legal estate, and not to an equitable estate. Rex v. Inhabitants of Teddington, 1 Barn. & Ald. 560. and post, 403. Ed.] Guardianship by nurture only occurs where the infant is without any other guardian; and none can have it, except the father or mother. It extends no further than the custody and government of the infant's person, and determines at fourteen, in the case both of males and females. Bro. Abr. Garde, pl. 70. Guardianship by nature is more extensive; for not only the father and mother, 2 Atk. 15, but every other ancestor may be guardians by nature, though with considerable differences, such as denote the superiority of the father's claim. The father has the first title to guardianship by nature, the mother the second; and as to other ancestors, if the same infant happens to be heir apparent to two, as to both a paternal and a maternal grandfather, perhaps in this equality of rights, priority of possession of the infant's person may decide the preference, according to the general rule, in æquali jure melior est conditio possidentis. This guardianship extends no further than the custody of the infant's person; Carth. 386; which it yields to the guardian in socage, until the infant attains fourteen; but guardianship by nature continues till the infant attains the age of twenty-one. Hargr. n. Co. Litt. 88. b. (12). 3 Bac. Abr. 404. However, the proper age to apply to the Court of Chancery to remove a parent from being guardian, in a male, is fourteen, in a female, twelve; but the court will never do it without some misbehaviour in the parent. Roach v. Garvan, 1 Ves. sen. 158. [Where children reside with a relation who provides for them and appoints a guardian over them, their father will be refused the custody of the children if it appear more for their interest to reside with the guardian. Lyons v. Blenkin, 1 Jac. 245, and the cases there cited; and see Wellesley v. Duke of Beaufort, 2 Russ. since confirmed in Dom. Proc. Ed.] By virtue of the 12 Cha. II. c. 24, s. 8. the father, although under twenty-one, may by deed or will, attested by two witnesses, appoint who shall be guardians of his children after his decease, until they attain twenty-one, or for any less period; and thereby he will disappoint the mother and other ancestors of the guardianship by nature, and the next of blood of the guardianship by socage. This kind of guardian has the custody not only of the lands descended or left by the father, but of all lands and goods any way acquired or purchased by the infant, which the guardian in socage had not. Vaugh. 185—6. 2 Fonbl. Treat. Equity, 225, 5th ed. [A jew may devise the guardianship of his children under this statute, 2 Swans. 538. An appointment not attested by two witnesses is, of course, altogether void. Reddall v. Leddiard, 3 Phillim. 256. Ed.]

An infant above seven, having no guardian, may elect one either before or after fourteen.

The right to elect a guardian may therefore happen before fourteen, when the infant, whether male or female, Co. Litt. 88. a. has no such property as attracts a guardianship by tenure, 2 Fonbl. Treat. Equity, 225, 5th ed. and the father is dead, without having executed his power of appointing a guardian for his child, and there is no mother; but if the child be of such tender years that he can make no choice, that is, under seven years of age (see Fitzgib. 164), then the next of kin to whom the inheritance cannot descend, should have the custody of him, Co. Litt. 87. b. until a guardian be properly appointed by the Lord Chancellor, or by the infant himself. Or the right of making a guardian by election may happen after fourteen, when the custody of the guardian by socage terminates, and in case of the father's decease, from the want of his appointment, there is no other guardian ready to succeed to the trust, and to take care of the infant or his property. Hargr. n. Co. Litt. 88. b. (16). 1 Bla. Com. 426. And therefore a minor, after fourteen, although freed from custody, is at liberty, if willing, to put himself a second time under guardianship, until he is of full age. But if a minor, being an adult, does not consent to receive a new guardian, then no court would appoint a guardian, unless ad litem. Harris's n. Just. Inst. lib. I. tit. XXIII. § II. [But see Curtis v. Rippon, post, 407.]

The power of infants over their property has been gradually restrained.

Formerly, in case an infant was of the years of discretion, namely, fourteen, any payment made to him would have been good, for at that age the law held him able to govern and manage his own lands in socage, and consequently to receive the rents thereof. Wentworth's Office of Executor, 219, Wilson's ed. 1 Powell's Swinb. on Wills, 295, part III. sec. xiv. So formerly an infant could be an executor at seventeen; but since the 38 Geo. III. c. 87, s. 6, he cannot act till he is twenty-one; and where he is sole executor, administration, with the will annexed, must be granted to his guardian, or to such other person as the spiritual court shall think fit, until the infant attains twenty-one, at which period probate of the will may be granted to him. The power of an infant has been gradually restrained, and he is now thought to stand in need of a guardian of his person and property until twenty-one. See 2 Watk. Cop. 99. As Lord Coke mentions the right of choosing a guardian by a male ward in socage after fourteen, Co. Litt.

GUARDIAN.

78, b. even in his time a guardian must have been deemed necessary after that age. But it is remarkable that he omits mentioning it in the case of a female after fourteen. However, since the 12 Cha. II. c. 24. s. 8, it has been usual, for want of a guardian by the father's appointment, to allow infants, whether males or females, 1 Bla. Com. 463, and whether heirs or not, (see Hargr. n. Co. Litt. 88. b. (12),) to elect guardians for themselves.

The election is usually made by deed;

Lord Coke omits stating how, and before whom the election should be made, nor does it appear that any prior or cotemporary writer supplies the defect. Lord Hardwicke said, it was frequently done before a judge on circuit, and that it was the constant practice to allow infants to chuse their guardian, and what the Court of Chancery frequently called on infants to do; though he said, this still is liable to any reasonable objection made to such choice. 2 Ves. sen. 375. And see Savill v. Slingsby, Tothill, 15, where an attachment issued against an infant, to make him choose a guardian. See also Wyatt's Prac. Reg. 213. 223. Finch. Rep. 476. But it is not requisite that the election should be made before a judge. Hargr. n. Co. Litt. 88, b. (16.) 3 Atk. 624. Harr. n. Just. Inst. Lib. I. tit. XXIII, § II. The last Lord Baltimore, when he was turned of eighteen, having no testamentary guardian, and being under the necessity of having one for some special purposes relative to his proprietary government of Maryland, named a guardian by deed. This mode was adopted by the advice of two eminent barristers; for though one of them at first doubted, whether the administration of the government of the province was not devolved upon the crown during the infancy, yet he afterwards concurred in thinking, that the guardian named by the infant might act as lord proprietor. Indeed, it seems as if there was no prescribed form of an infant's electing a guardian after fourteen, any more than there is before; and therefore, the learned Hargrave says, election by parol might perhaps be sufficient, though, he says it would be wrong to trust to a mode so unsolemn. Hargr. n. Co. Litt. 88, b. 16. The form drawn by the celebrated conveyancer, Sir Orlando Bridgman, is under hand and seal. 1 Bridgman's Conveyances, 249, 5th ed.; and in the present day, the appointment or election is generally also delivered as a deed; and therefore the duty of thirty-five shillings becomes chargeable on it, "as a deed not otherwise charged," under the last stamp act. But it seems that an appointment, under hand and seal, without being delivered as a deed, would be equally effectual; and, unless it be delivered as a deed, a stamp would not be requisite. Vide post, 588, (d), 633, 642.

and therefore it requires a deed stamp. But a deed does not appear to be requisite.

The guardian of a male infant continues till 21; of a female, till 21, or marriage.

The guardian appointed by a male infant after he is fourteen, continues till he is twenty-one; 3 Bac. Abr. 403; 4 Ibid, 138; and does not determine by his marriage. Mendes v. Mendes, 3 Atk. 625. So likewise a guardian appointed by a female infant after she is fourteen, continues till she is twenty-one, unless she previously marry; for on marriage, every kind of guardianship as to a female ceases, Mendes v. Mendes, 1 Ves. sen. 91, because the husband, immediately on the marriage, becomes her guardian; and it would be inconsistent that she should at the same time be under the power of another guardian. 3 Bac. Abr. 413. However, where a female eleven years of age was sent to France for her education, and being entrusted to the care of a banker at Paris, he married her to his own son, who was not then seventeen years of age, Lord Hardwicke held, that though the Court of Chancery cannot appoint a guardian of a female after marriage, yet it will not determine a guardianship, or discharge any order made for a guardian because of a marriage. Roach v. Garvan, 1 Ves. sen. 159.

As it is doubtful whether an appointment under 14 continues after that age, a ratification seems prudent afterwards; and then, if delivered as a deed, another deed stamp is necessary.

It does not appear to be certain whether an appointment of a guardian by an infant above the age of seven, and under the age of fourteen years, continues, after the infant has attained fourteen; but it seems that it continues for the same period as it would if it had been made after fourteen. To avoid this doubt, a ratification of the appointment has sometimes been recommended after the infant arrives at the age of fourteen years, ut infra, 411. In which case, if the ratification be delivered, it operates as a new deed, and becomes chargeable with another thirty-five shilling stamp. But as to the necessity for delivery, and a stamp, the observations in the preceding page are here equally applicable.

Guardianship cannot be transferred, nor is it transmissible to representatives;

Neither a guardian in socage, Hargr. n. Co. Litt. 88. b. (13); 90. b. (1); Bedell v. Constable, Vaugh. 181, nor a testamentary guardian, Mellish v. De Costa, 2 Atk. 14, nor consequently a guardian by election, can assign or transfer the guardianship to another: neither will it, upon the guardian's death, go to his executors or administrators, nor to the husband of a deceased wife, but it determines. Vaugh. 185. Eyre v. Countess of Shaftesbury, 2 P. Wms. 121. 1 Wooddes. Lec. 458. And in case a guardian in socage die, the guardianship shall go to the next of kin of the infant to whom the inheritance cannot descend. 2 Inst. 260. For though the office of guardian be an interest, yet it is an interest joined with a trust and confidence, personally reposed in the guardian himself; either by the law, or by the person appointing him, wholly for the infant's benefit, and not in any respect for the guardian's for it is a personal confidence in the guardian himself.

profit. Shoplane v. Roydler, Cro. Jac. 99. Vaugh. 183. Plowd. Com. 293. [And thus, where a mother had, by an agreement, devolved the care of her two children to their grandfather, and married again, it was held that her guardianship continued notwithstanding the agreement and her second marriage, and the children were ordered to be restored to her. Villareal v. Mellish, cit. 2 Swans. 533, n. Ed.] But it seems, that if two or more are made guardians, and one of them dies, the survivor or survivors will continue guardians: for, from the nature of the thing the authority must be joint and several; and were it otherwise, the more guardians were appointed for the security of the infant, the less secure would he be, because, upon the death of any one of them, the guardianship would be at an end. 2 P. Wms. 107. 121. 3 Bac. Abr. 407. However, it is usual to expressly appoint the survivors and survivor, guardians and guardian, ut infra, 410. [But where guardians are appointed by the Court of Chancery, the office does not survive. Bradshaw v. Bradshaw, 1 Russ. 528.]

When there are two or more guardians, the office survives.

Some of the purposes for which a guardian by election is appointed while the infant is under fourteen, and has no guardian, are for enabling the guardian to make leases of the infant's lands, in which he has only an equitable estate, or in which, although he has the legal estate, yet he took them not by descent, but by purchase; for in neither of these cases is guardianship in socage attracted. Rex v. Teddington, 1 Barnw. and Ald. 560. Quadring v. Downs, 2 Mod. 176. But if the infant has any such lands as attract guardianship in socage, that is, lying in tenure, then the guardianship in socage attracts the custody of the infant's hereditaments not lying in tenure, and of his copyhold estates, unless there is either a special custom for the lord's appointing a guardian of them, Hargr. n. Co. Litt. 88. b. (13), or by the peculiar custom of the manor, the copyhold may by possibility descend to the guardian in socage; 2 Watk. Cop. 102; and the guardian in socage is also, it seems, entitled as well to the custody of the infant's equitable estates in lands, of which there is no trustee expressly appointed, as of those lands which he took by purchase. However, as to leases made by a guardian by election before fourteen, the books are silent.

Guardianship by election is made while the infant is under 14, for making leases of his lands, of which there is no guardian.

Guardianship in socage attracts guardianship of the infant's hereditaments not lying in tenure, and sometimes of his copyhold estates.

Under a special custom, the lord may appoint a guardian of copyholds.

When, after fourteen, an infant is destitute of a guardian, he sometimes appoints one by election, principally to enable him to make leases of all the infant's lands. As to leases by this guardian, the books are clear; for it is said, the guardian before fourteen (that is, in socage) as well as he whom the infant thinks fit to choose after fourteen, are both of the same nature, and have the same office and employment assigned to them by the law, without any intervention or direction of the infant himself; for they were therefore appointed because the infant, in regard of his minority, was supposed incapable of managing himself and his estate, and consequently they derive their authority

Jac. 99, make distresses for rent of the infant's lands, Bradby on Distresses, 91, and transact all affairs in their own name, and not in the name of the infant, as they would be obliged to do if their authority were derived from him. 3 Bac. Abr. 403. 4 Ibid. 138. Gwil. ed. Guardian (A). Leases (I) 9. And although there is no authority as to leases of infants' lands taken by purchase, &c. made by guardians elected before fourteen, yet it seems, according to the prevailing opinion, founded on reasonable grounds, that guardians by the election of the infants themselves after they arrive at the age of fourteen, and guardians appointed by the father, as well as guardians in socage, have the power of making valid leases of the infant's lands for so long a time as their guardianship continues. See 4 Bac. Abr. 139. Chambers on Leases, 35. 1 Ld. Raym. 131. 1 Leon. 158. Vaugh. 182. Plowd. 293. Cro. Jac. 55, 99. 2 Lev. 219. 2 P. Wms. 105. 14 Vin. Abr. 185. 2 Watk. Cop. 105. However it was held in Roe v. Hodgson, 2 Wils. 129, 135, after the infant had come of age, that a testamentary guardian cannot make a lease of the infant's lands, and that a lease previously made by him for twenty-one years was absolutely void, and not merely voidable. But this decision has not been regarded in practice to the extent the words of the report might have warranted. For independently of the above citations, it is opposed by the great authority of Lord Chief Justice Vaughan, who clearly held that the office of a guardian appointed by the father, under 12 Car. II. c. 24, as to the duty and power, is the same as the law before had prescribed and settled of guardian in socage, excepting that it may be held for a longer time, namely, till the heir attains the age of twenty-one; Bedell v. Constable, Vaugh. 179; and no point is more certain, than that a guardian in socage could make valid leases in his own name, to continue during the guardianship. Dr. Wooddeson understood the case of Roe v. Hodgson to have adjudged, that leases made by a guardian are absolutely void, when the infant attains the age of majority, if the term is then unexpired, without any act done by him to defeat them. 1 Wooddes. Lect. 459. But, he adds, notwithstanding the general expression in the case alluded to, that "a guardian cannot make a lease," it should seem that such demise, to continue during the minority, or any shorter term, must be valid, without resorting to the Lord Chancellor's authority, and a reference to a Master of the Court. [See a form of a lease by a guardian and ward, Vol. V. 116.]

According to the prevailing opinion, every kind of guardian of the lands may make leases to continue during the guardianship, without resorting to the Lord Chancellor's authority.

(b) Sometimes the appointment of a guardian by an infant authorizes the making of leases, &c. yet as appears above, the guardian does not derive his authority from the infant, but from the law, it seems better to omit the enumeration of any particular act which he is to do. The remainder of the above form is subject to the same observation, and is liable to another objection; for it is in the nature of a power of attorney, and an infant cannot appoint an attorney, Perk. s. 13. 2 Inst. 483. 2 Roll. Abr. 2 (E.) pl. 4. 3 Bac. Abr. 598, Gwil. ed. Infancy (I.) 3, excepting to receive livery of seisin, 1 Roll. Abr. 730, (D.) 6; but as the whole form is used by some gentlemen, it has therefore been inserted. For the above-mentioned reason, the subsequent forms seem preferable, and they certainly are more generally used.

The appointment of a guardian should be general, without enumerating any particular act which he is to do.

A guardian by election is appointed when an infant is entitled to a legacy or share of an intestate's estate, and his friends wish to avoid applications to Chancery.

Sometimes guardians by election are appointed when the infant is destitute of a guardian, and is entitled to a legacy, but the trustees of the will have no authority to advance the interest for maintenance, &c. or where the infant is entitled to a distributive share of an intestate's effects, and in both cases the friends of the infant are desirous of avoiding the expense of an application to the court of Chancery. The chief end the parties have in view by such an appointment is, that without an application to the Court, there may be some persons recognized by law as capable of taking care of the infant, and directing a proper maintenance and education for him, out of the interest of his property, during infancy. An executor or an administrator might, however, without the direction of the guardians, apply a reasonable part of the interest of the infant's legacy or share, during his infancy, for his maintenance and education; and such payments would be allowed by the Court. For where an executor, Lee v. Brown, 4 Ves. 369, and consequently an administrator, does, without application, what the Court would have approved, he will not be called to account, and forced to undo it, merely because it was done without application. But the concurrence of the guardian in the payment of maintenance and education is thought to make it much safer. The act of a guardian without authority of the Court, if beneficial to the infant, the Lord Chancellor said the Court would perhaps ultimately have protected; though had the actual consequence been detrimental to him, that might have created some difficulty. Milner v. Harewood, 18 Ves. 273. The learned Hargrave appears to have thought, that a guardian in socage is entitled to take into his custody the infant's personal estate, except where by the custom of a particular place it happens to be liable to a different custody; his idea being, that the custody of the infant's person draws after it the custody of every species of property, for which the law has not otherwise provided. Hargr. n. Co. Litt. 88. b. (16). But see Wentworth's Office of Executor, 220, from which it seems, that in his time, payment of a legacy to the guardian of the lands, was not a proper payment. Vide ante, 400. And although Mr. Hargrave's opinion is not sanctioned by the modern practice of the court of Chancery, and is opposed by an expression of Lord Chief Justice Vaughan, in his reports, 186, ante, 399, yet as a guardian by election has the same power and authority as a guardian in socage, there have been instances in which, under the authority of Mr. Hargrave's opinion, executors and administrators have paid infants' legacies and distributive shares to their guardians by election. Sometimes this has been done on an indemnity by the guardians, from all actions and claims in consequence of making the payment; and in other instances the money has been invested in the three per cent. consols, in the names of the executor or administrator, and of the guardians, in trust for the infants. However this is not a prudent course for the executor or administrator to pursue. For the Court of Chancery has compelled an executor to repay a legacy, which he had previously paid to the father, the natural guardian of an infant entitled to it, in order, as the Lord Chancellor said, not to encourage payments to parents and guardians in wrong of infant children. Dagley v. Tolferry, 1 P. Wms. 285. Doyley v. Tollferry, 1 Eq. Ca. Abr. 300. pl. 2. S. C. Dawley v. Ballfrey, Gilb. Eq. Ca. 103. S. C. And see Holloway v. Collins, 1 Chan. Ca. 245. [1 Eq. Ca. Ab. 300. pl. 1. S. [Bullen v. Allen, Finch. 264; nor will a legacy belonging to infants be paid to an executor on application to the Court, however respectable he may be. Orrok v. Binney, 1 Jac. 523.] And when the infant's money is invested in the names of the executor or administrator, and of the guardians, there is a possibility of danger in doing it, for in case the executor should die, and the stock be sold out by the survivor, and misapplied, the infant might then call on the representatives of the administrator for repayment of the money. for the executor or administrator to pursue in such a case, is to pay the infant's legacy or share, after deducting the duty, into the Bank of England, with the privity of the accountant general of the Court of Chancery, to the account of the infant; or if more than one, to the account of the respective infants; which, after payment of the duty, will be a sufficient discharge for the money so paid; and such money, when paid in, will be laid out by the accountant general without any formal request for that purpose, in the purchase of three per cent. consols, which, with the dividends thereon, will be transferred and paid to the person or persons entitled thereto, or otherwise applied for his or their benefit, on application to the Court of Chancery, by petition or motion in a summary way, by virtue of the statute 36 Geo. III. c. 52. s. 32. or administrator to pursue, is, to pay the infant's money into the bank.

Mr. Hargrave was of opinion that the guardian in socage was entitled to the custody of the infant's personal estate; but this opinion cannot be safely followed.

A guardian by election, being a "guardian of the person lawfully appointed," it seems, that the consent of such a guardian would be a sufficient consent to the marriage of the infant, where there is no father, or any other guardian. See 26 Geo. II. c. 33. 3 Geo. IV. c. 75. s. 9. * However, this mode has not been resorted to when an opportunity occurred; for, under the old marriage act, an application was made to the Court of Chancery by petition, on behalf of a female infant, in the twentieth year of her age, whose father and mother were both dead, and who had no guardian, nor any property, real or personal, praying that her brother might be appointed her guardian, for the purpose of giving a legal consent to her marriage; on which petition Sir Thomas Plumer, the Vice Chancellor, made an order accordingly. In the matter of Woolscombe, an infant, 1 Madd. Rep. 215, a similar order was made by his honour, in the preceding term, after looking into the

The Lord Chancellor may appoint a guardian, and remove all kinds of guardians for improper conduct.

Where an infant is destitute of a guardian, the lord Chancellor has the power of appointing a guardian of his person and estate. Hargr. n. Co. Litt. 88, b. (16). 2 Fonbl. Treat. Equity, 226 (a). But it seems that this right cannot be exercised after fourteen, without the infant's consent. Vide ante, 400. [In the case of Curtis v. Rippon, 4 Madd. 462, however, a guardian was appointed for an infant aged seventeen, although he had himself appointed one by deed.] And if a guardian appointed by the father die, or refuse to take upon himself the guardianship, or becomes a lunatic, or is otherwise incapacitated to execute the trust reposed in him, the Lord Chancellor may appoint a proper guardian. So if either a common law guardian, or a guardian by election, or a testamentary guardian, abuse the trust, by doing any thing prejudicial either to the person of the infant or his estate, the Court of Chancery may either totally remove him and appoint another guardian, or else impose such terms on him, by obliging him to give security, &c. as will effectually hinder him from doing any thing prejudicial to the infant. 3 Bac. The ecclesiastical court can only appoint a guardian ad litem.

The right of the ecclesiastical court to appoint guardians of the personal estate of infants, has in modern times been treated as a presumption, and has been confined merely to the appointment of guardians ad litem, on the ground that it would break in upon the jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery, relating to the guardianship of infants. Buck v. Draper, 3 Atk. 631. Rex v. Delaval, 3 Burr. 1436. 3 Bac. Where a natural child is destitute of a guardian, in order to save the expense of applying to the Court, he sometimes appoints one by election, both before and after fourteen, to enable the guardian to make leases of the infant's lands, and to take care of his property and person. For a bastard being considered, as it were, the first of his family, he cannot by law be heir either to his father or to his mother; consequently he cannot take by descent; in which case only guardianship in socage arises; ante, 398; and as he has no legal relations, excepting those who spring from his body, no person can claim the right of being his guardian. Vide Noy's Maxims, 238, 9th ed.

In some cases an infant may elect a guardian, although he has parents.

(a) An infant having lands or hereditaments which do not attract guardianship in socage (vide ante, 402-3), may, it seems, before fourteen, elect a guardian of such lands or hereditaments, notwithstanding his parents are living. So after fourteen, when the guardianship in socage terminates, the infant may exercise his right, although he has parents. For although guardianship by nature continues, notwithstanding the determination of guardianship in socage, yet guardianship by nature only attracts the custody of the infant's person. Ante, 399. But it is not common to elect a guardian when there is a lawful parent living, except it be for the purpose of enabling the guardian to make leases. Parties.

(a) See the reason why the trustee is made a party, post, 418 (d).

(b) The nature of the office, power, and authority of a receiver appointed by deed, and of a receiver appointed by the Court of Chancery, is totally different; for, as the first derives his authority wholly from the deed, he cannot go beyond the powers thereby given. The other is an officer of the court, and acts under its direction; and therefore being in many respects guarded and protected by its transcendant authority, he is invested with some powers which our law of tenures renders impossible for private individuals to confer, by way of authority. [See Davis v. Duke of Marlborough, 2 Swans. 153. Thus if he grant a lease he may distrain for the rent, although he has no reversion, and although he is mentioned as a mere receiver on the face of the lease. Dancer v. Hastings, 4 Bing. 2., et ante, 301.] The numerous cases to be found in the reports respecting receivers, relate almost exclusively to those appointed by the Court; but the principles which regulate their proceedings have only a partial connection by analogy to a receiver appointed by deed. It is for the above reason that, in a deed of receivership, the powers and liabilities of the receiver are clearly defined.

A receiver appointed by deed, derives his authority wholly from the deed, while a receiver appointed by the Court of Chancery derives his authority from the Court.

The Court of Chancery will not appoint a trustee a receiver of the estate where he is an accounting party, because he ought to check the receiver. Anonymous, 3 Ves. 516. Nor will the Court appoint a trustee and executor receiver, although there are others joined with him in the trust; for the testator meant to have the benefit of the exertion and management of all whom he named, and it would be a mode of giving a trustee emolument who ought to manage and receive without gratuity. ——— v. Jolland, 8 Ves. 72. And in case the trustee has either in himself, or jointly with another, a power of leasing, the cestui que trust would lose the benefit of the trustee's knowledge and superintendance as a check, and he would be exposed to the temptation of immediate increase of emolument, by an immediate increase of rent; and one of the principal duties of the court is, to take care that the most shall be made of the estate, during minority, with a view to the interest of the inheritance, not the immediate income. Sutton v. Jones, 15 Ves. 588. Therefore if a trustee has been appointed a receiver by the Master, the Court will discharge the receiver from his office. 8 Ves. 73. However the Court will appoint a trustee receiver, if he will act without emolument; and if no other person can be procured, the Court will appoint a trustee receiver, with emolument. Sykes v. Hastings, 11 Ves. 364.

A nominal trustee may be a receiver.

But it is no objection to a trustee being appointed a receiver, if he be a trustee merely for preserving contingent remainders, or if he be a trustee with a power of sale and exchange at a future period, and which cannot be exercised during his receivership. Sutton v. Jones, 15 Ves. 587. [The Court will not appoint the next friend of an infant, a receiver on his behalf; Stone v. Wishart, 2 Madd. 64; nor the son of the next friend. Taylor v. Oldham, 1 Jac. 529. Ed.]

Where the parties beneficially interested are sui juris at the time, a trustee may be appointed receiver by deed; but it is not usual.

These equitable principles do not however extend to a receiver appointed by deed, where the persons beneficially interested at the time are sui juris; and therefore in an annuity, mortgage, or any other transaction, a trustee of the estate may be appointed a receiver; but in that case the amount of the compensation which he is to have as receiver, should be distinctly stated in the deed; for as trustee he is entitled to no allowance for his trouble, unless there be in the deed a special provision for that purpose. However it is not usual in practice, in any case, to appoint a trustee receiver by deed, although there appears to be no other objection to such an appointment, than the seeming impropriety of uniting in the same person two apparently incompatible offices; but which objection might perhaps, in some instances, not appear to the parties interested, to be of a very formidable nature.

A mortgagee cannot be a receiver with a salary.

A mortgagee cannot stipulate to be receiver of the rents and profits with a commission. In one case it has been considered by the Court of King's Bench, usurious. Scott v. Brest, 2 Durnf. and East, 238. But it has long been determined in the Court of Chancery, that though a mortgagee may stipulate for a receiver to be paid by the mortgagor, and may appoint a bailiff, &c. yet he cannot himself stipulate for any advantage beyond the interest. And though it seems to make little difference to the mortgagor, who is receiver, yet the Court of Chancery considers it as tending to usury and oppression, and a collateral advantage, which a man contracting for a loan of money shall not make. Chambers v. Goldwin, 9 Ves. 272. French v. Baron, 2 Atk. 120.

him of a clear annuity, or yearly rent charge of [annuity] pounds, to be paid to the said [grantee], his executors,

RECEIVER BY DEMISE, ON GRANT OF ANNUITY.

But on principle, that objection cannot extend to an annuitant, because the annuity is not in the nature of a loan. However, it is not usual to appoint the annuitant the receiver.

The annuitant is not usually appointed the receiver.

If no receiver has been previously appointed, and from the nature of the property one be requisite, the person having the legal estate may appoint a receiver, when the annuity becomes in arrear. Jenkins v. Milford, 1 Jac. and Walk. 630. For a mortgagee in possession, or a trustee, and consequently an annuitant, where he is himself the trustee, is not bound to be his own bailiff; and if either of them manage the estate himself, there is no allowance made to him for his care and pains; but if either of them employ a skilful bailiff, and for his trouble give him a reasonable compensation out of the rents and profits, the Court of Chancery allows of the payment. Bonithon v. Hockmore, 1 Vern. 316. The most usual remuneration to a receiver appointed by deed is one shilling in the pound on the rents received, which sum has been allowed by the Court, where the rents arose from several small houses; Davis v. Dendy, 3 Madd. Rep. 170; but where the rents arise from large farms, sixpence in the pound is sometimes the stipulated allowance. A trustee or an executor, having no allowance for his trouble, is allowed many charges and expenses which a receiver, who has a salary, is not allowed. Potts v. Leighton, 15 Ves. 276. But a trustee may be allowed a compensation for his trouble, if there be an express provision for that purpose in the deed creating the trust; but not, it seems, if the agreement for an allowance to a trustee be subsequent, excepting it be under extraordinary circumstances. Gould v. Fleetwood, 3 P. Wms. 251. n. Ayliffe v. Murray, 2 Atk. 60. It is otherwise as to a mortgagee. Chambers v. Goldwin, 9 Ves. 272. And where the mortgagee was the attorney of the mortgagor, and in an account settled between them had charged poundage for having received the rents, which were very small, and the collection troublesome, and in consequence thereof the mortgagee was entitled to have a receiver at the mortgagor's expense, yet Sir William Grant, Master of the Rolls, disallowed the charge; for, he said, the Court does not permit a man to get out of the rule by shewing that he was in a situation in which it would have been justifiable to have had a receiver appointed. He is not permitted to shew that case did exist. Nothing is considered as evidence that the appointment of a receiver was necessary, but that appointment itself; and the Court takes the circumstance that a receiver was not appointed, as evidence

The person having the legal estate may appoint a receiver, with an allowance, although there be no express power for that purpose; but he will be answerable for the receiver's deficiencies.

A mortgagee or trustee has no allowance for his trouble.

that a receiver was not necessary. As to the acquiescence, whatever may be the effect of acquiescence in general, the relation of these parties prevents it in this instance: the one an attorney, and not only an attorney, but the attorney of the other party. The former was acquainted with the rule of the court, the other was not. It was the duty of the attorney to inform his client, that he was not to allow that charge, if another person had been the mortgagee; informing him also that the appointment of a receiver would be the consequence; but that was for the consideration of the client, so informed. In this case that information was not given to the client. The mortgagee claimed this allowance as of right, not stating the objection. The mortgagor allowed it, not aware of the objection; in that article, therefore, the account is impeached as erroneous. I do not enter into the distinction between the cases of an article allowed from ignorance of the law, and from ignorance of the fact. The reason of the admission is not material. He has not given his assent; that is, what the Court holds a binding assent. I do not mean to say generally, that ignorance of the law will open an account: but, as between these parties, standing in this relation to each other, liberty must be given to surcharge and falsify. Langstaffe v. Fenwick, 10 Ves. 405. So in Carew v. Johnston, 2 Scho. and Lef. 301, an exparte report of the Master charged receiver's fees; but Lord Redesdale said, a mortgagee is not entitled to receiver's fees for himself; he is if he pays a receiver. But the evidence was, that he received for himself. This therefore was fraudulently erroneous, and taking an advantage to himself which the mortgagee had no right to.

Formerly, thought that a mortgagee should be allowed for a receiver, only where the estate was at a distance: but the necessity of a receiver seems principally to depend on the degree of trouble necessary to collect the rents.

In Godfrey v. Watson, 3 Atk. 518, Lord Hardwicke said, that a mortgagee shall not be allowed for his trouble in receiving the rents of the estate himself; but if an estate lies at such a distance from the place of his residence as he must have employed a bailiff, if it had been his own, he shall then be allowed such sums as he has paid to a bailiff to receive the rents of this estate. The modern rule does not seem to depend so much on the degree of distance of the estate from the residence of the mortgagee, &c. as the degree of trouble. Thus, where a mortgage of twenty leasehold houses in the parish of St. Andrew, Holborn, was assigned to a trustee who lived in Chancery Lane, near the houses, in trust for a person (since deceased), who resided at Dorking; Sir John Leach, Vice-Chancellor, said, a mortgagee cannot be paid as a receiver, nor can he, generally and universally, when he takes possession, appoint a receiver. But if the nature of the estate be such, that great time and trouble must be sacrificed in the receipt of the rents, he may appoint a receiver. Here the mortgagee resided at Dorking, and the mortgaged property was of such a description, that a provident owner of the estate, whose time was of value to him, would probably have thought it right to appoint a receiver. The trustee's residence is immaterial: he was not the person beneficially entitled, nor the person to receive the rents. The charge, therefore, in respect of a receiver during the life of the assignee of the mortgagee, must be allowed. The testator died in 1810, and appointed the defendants executors and residuary legatees. The latter circumstance I lay out of the question. After the death of the assignee of the mortgage, the executors received the rents up to the year 1813, and then appointed a receiver. As the assignee of the mortgage could not have charged for a receiver, if he had himself received the rents, so his executors, as long as they received the rents, can make no charge for a receiver; but they may charge from the time when they appointed a receiver. Davis v. Dendy and others, 3 Madd. 172.

The trustee's residence is immaterial.

Executors of a mortgagee, whether they be, or be not, his residuary legatees, cannot charge for a receiver while they received the rents.

Trustees and executors, not beneficially interested, cannot be generally advised to appoint a receiver, where they have no authority for that purpose; for unless the deed or will authorises the appointment, the trustee or other person appointing the receiver, will be answerable for him in all events. Anonymous, 12 Mod. 560. But if the deed or will authorises the appointment of a receiver or agent, and one be appointed, who at the time of his appointment is solvent and in good circumstances, though he should afterwards become insolvent, the person appointing shall not answer for him. However it is otherwise if he were not solvent at the time he was appointed. 12 Mod. 560. But where a debtor conveyed an estate to two trustees, appointed by his creditors in pursuance of a previous agreement, and the creditors permitted the acting trustee to retain in his hands, for about three years, a sum belonging to the trust fund, which he had received out of the rents of the estate, Lord Manners held, on the trustee's bankruptcy, that as the debtor did not appoint the trustees, and had no power to remove them, the loss must fall on the creditors. For the creditors being the persons most interested in the conduct and punctuality of those trustees, and in the manner the rents were to be applied; the Persons appointing a receiver where they are not authorized to do it, are answerable for his deficiencies: but where the deed authorizes an appointment, it is otherwise.

But if the receiver be permitted to retain the rents an unreasonable time, and become insolvent, the estate will be discharged from the loss.

Chancery receivers must pass their accounts annually.

Receivers appointed by the Court of Chancery are to pass annual or half-yearly accounts, as the rents and profits are received. Potts v. Leighton, 15 Ves. 577. And by the general order of the Court, 23d April, 1796, 15 Ves. 278, receivers must annually pass their accounts and pay in their balances, or lose their salaries and be charged with interest at five per cent. ——— v. Jolland, 8 Ves. 72; White v. Lady Lincoln, 8 Ves. 571; although the money be only kept back a quarter of a year after it ought to have been paid in. Fletcher v. Dodd, 1 Ves. jun. 85. Receivers appointed by deed are not subject to this rule, and therefore it is always prudent to call on them to account regularly as the money is received.

Receivers appointed by deed should be called on to account regularly.

The estate must bear a loss occasioned by a receiver appointed by the Court.

In Rigge v. Bowater, 3 Bro. C. C. 365, Lord Thurlow intimated his opinion (without deciding the case), that if a receiver be appointed by the Court, upon the application of a mortgagee or other incumbrancer, and he afterwards embezzle or otherwise waste the rents and profits, the loss must fall on the mortgagor. The reason is, it seems, the receiver is the officer of the court. 2 Ball and Bea. 55.

If the mortgagee has the legal estate, the Court will not appoint a receiver.

However, if there be no receiver appointed by the deed, and the mortgagee has the legal estate, he cannot have a receiver appointed by the Court of Chancery, but he must recover the possession by ejectment. Berney v. Sewell, 1 Jac. and Walk. 648. Yet if there be a prior mortgagee who is not in possession, a second or equitable mortgagee may have a receiver appointed by the Court, without prejudice to the prior mortgagee's taking possession; but if he be in possession, the second mortgagee cannot have a receiver appointed: he must redeem him; and then in taking the accounts, the prior mortgagee will not be allowed any sums he may have paid over to the mortgagor, after notice of the subsequent incumbrance. Ibid. 649. Bryan v. Cormick, 1 Cox, 423. Dalmer v. Dashwood, 2 Cox, 378. Quarrell v. Beckford, 13 Ves. 377. Parker v. Calcraft, 6 Madd. 11. [But the Court will not allow a prior incumbrancer to object to the appointment of a receiver, with any thing short of a legal estate and an actual possession. Silver v. Bishop of Norwich, 3 Swans. 112, n. And see White v. Bishop of Peterborough, 3 Swans. 109. Lloyd v. Passingham, 3 Mer. 697. Brooks v. Greathed, 1 J. & Walk. 176. Ed.]

If a prior mortgagee be not in possession, the Court will appoint a receiver for a subsequent mortgagee, without prejudice to the first.

(d) Some gentlemen omit the recital of the demise to the trustee, and make the grantor alone demise the estate to the receiver, by the direction of the grantee. But as reference is made by the deed appointing the receiver, to the deed granting the annuity, if the annuity deed were produced, it would immediately appear that the grantor had previously conveyed to the trustee the immediate legal estate in reversion, and consequently, that the trustee was the only person entitled to distrain, or to authorise a distress, on the tenant in possession of the land. Jenkins v. Milford, 1 Jac. and Walk. 629, ante, 342. Gregory v. Henderson, 4 Taunt. 772. Therefore, unless the receiver distrained as the bailiff of the trustee, the distress could not be supported, at least as to tenants whose leases were granted prior to the annuity, or afterwards, not by indenture. Vide ante, 301. For, generally, a distress for rent must be made by, or in the name of the person appearing to have the immediate legal estate in reversion, Pitt v. Snowden, 3 Atk. 750. Hughes v. Hughes, 3 Bro. C. C. 87, as he alone possesses a privity of estate with the tenant in possession. 1 Ves. jun. 161, S. C. and who consequently is the tenant of the person having that legal estate. Griffith v. Griffith, 2 Ves. sen. 401. So that if the trustee do not join in the demise, the receiver must distrain as his bailiff; in which case, if there be no previous authority, a subsequent assent would excuse him from being punished as a trespasser. 2 Leon. 196. But a previous authority in writing is always desirable when a distress is made by a bailiff; for he ought, if he be required, to shew the cause why he made the distress: yet if he be not required, then he is not bound to shew it. And if the bailiff, upon making the distress, shews the cause and reason of it, he cannot afterwards vary from it: but if he distrain generally, without shewing any cause, then he is at liberty afterwards to shew what cause he thinks fit. Buller's case, 1 Leon. 50. To prevent the necessity of having an express authority from the trustee or his representatives, every time a distress is made, and to prevent the trouble and delay which must be thereby occasioned, it seems prudent invariably to make the trustee a party to the appointment, if it be in the nature of a power of attorney. [A receiver appointed by the Court may distrain at his discretion for a year's rent, but if more than that be in arrear, an order is necessary, Brandon v. Brandon, 5 Madd. 473. Ed.]

But to prevent the determination of the receiver's authority by the death of the trustee, and to enable the receiver to distrain, &c. in his own name, it seems prudent to make the appointment by a demise of the trustee and grantor.

But as it appears, ante, 300 (l), 304. that an appointment of a receiver by demise, as in the above form, is preferable to a simple appointment in the nature of a power of attorney, ut ante, 301; and as the trustee has the immediate legal estate in reversion, expectant on the estates of the tenants in possession, it seems generally prudent to make the trustee a party to the demise to the receiver. For the trustee will notwithstanding retain a reversion, as the term in him is for ninety-nine years, if the grantor should so long live; while the term in the receiver is for ninety-nine years, if the grantor and the receiver should both of them so long live. And if, notwithstanding the declaration, that the term in the receiver shall not prevent the trustee from executing the trusts of his term, it should be thought that if the deed of receivership were produced, the term in the receiver would prevent the trustee from recovering in ejectment, a power is inserted, enabling the grantee at any time to destroy the term vested in the receiver.

deed, it seems, for the above reasons, equally necessary that the trustee of the attendant term should join in the appointment or demise, whichever form be adopted.

ticed in the the deed appointing a receiver, should join in the appointment.

But if an annuity is charged, or a mortgage made on an estate which has been previously incumbered, and the person having the legal estate will not join in the demise to the receiver, where, from the nature of the property it is desirable to have one, then he is sometimes appointed without a demise, ut ante, 300; and the prior charges are either recited in the deed, or stated by way of schedule, and the receiver directed to apply the rents in the first place in paying the prior charges, and in the next place in paying the annuity or mortgage. This may be done either by the annuity or mortgage deed, or by a separate deed, according to the circumstances. Vide ante, 299 (k).

Where the estate is previously incumbered, and the person having the legal estate will not join in the demise, the receiver's appointment should be by power of attorney.

So a receiver of copyholds is always appointed by a deed in the nature of a power of attorney. See the form where a receiver is appointed both of freeholds and copyholds by that mode, ante, 300. And see the form where the receiver is appointed by a demise of the freeholds, and a power of attorney as to the copyholds, post, 432.

"or other the person or persons for the time being entitled to redeem the said hereditaments and premises, or some," &c. ut supra.

Receiver's indemnity clause always inserted.

(x) Independently of this clause, the receiver is not answerable for involuntary losses. Vide ante, 429 (p). But a clause to that effect is always inserted, in order to relieve the receiver's mind from any anxiety on that ground. Sometimes the indemnity is extended by the original deed to future receivers, as in the following form. Although this mode is not common, yet it is found useful in case the mortgagor neglects to join in a future appointment, or his heir is disabled from joining by infancy, &c. for it is easier to procure a receiver where there is a clause of indemnity, than where there is not such a clause.

Advantages of extending it to future receivers.

(b) As to the advantage of a demise, vide ante, 300 (l), 419, 426. In this case a demise is attended with a further advantage, for it enables the receiver in his own name, as lessee, to recover the tithes due, by a suit in equity. See Archbishop of York v. Stapleton, 3 Atk. 136. Ellis on Tithes, 24. Or if the value of the small tithes due from any person do not exceed ten pounds, the receiver may, in his own name as lessee, recover them before two justices of the peace, by virtue of the 7 and 8 Wm. III. c. 6, and the 53 Geo. III. c. 127, s. 4. Or as to Quakers' tithes, whether great or small, if not exceeding fifty pounds, the receiver may, in his own name, as lessee, recover them before two justices of the peace, by virtue of the 7 and 8 Wm. III. c. 34; and 53 Geo. III. c. 127.

Receiver of tithes appointed by demise, may recover them in his own name by suit in equity; or of small tithes not exceeding ten pounds: or Quakers' great or small tithes, not exceeding fifty pounds, before two justices of the peace.

(a) As an appointment of a receiver, by way of power of attorney, is used by some gentlemen, a form is therefore inserted. But that mode being liable to the objection stated ante, 300 (l), it seems likely that it will, gradually, be generally disused, whenever the form by way of demise can, from the circumstances of the case, be effectually adopted. Vide ante, 420. [Whatever may be the advantages of a demise to a receiver, it is certainly more usual to appoint one in the form adopted in this precedent ; and this latter mode is practised by many very respectable conveyancers. Ed.]

An appointment by demise, when it can be adopted, seems preferable to an appointment by power of attorney.

(e) The power to appoint a deputy is not usually inserted, a personal confidence being reposed in the receiver; and as he is allowed a salary for his trouble, it is generally expected that he will act himself. If there be no such power, and the receiver acts by deputy, the rule delegatus non potest delegare, will be in full force, and he will be answerable for his deputy's deficiencies. But empowering him to appoint a deputy, seems liable to abuse, as the receiver would not be answerable for the deputy's deficiencies, unless he was insolvent at the time of his appointment. Vide ante, 416. On the part of a mortgagor or grantor of an annuity, the power to appoint a deputy should be objected to, unless under very extraordinary circumstances.

It seems prudent not to authorize a receiver to appoint a deputy.

A joint demise, or a joint power of attorney, seems preferable to the above.

(a) It seems adviseable, in such a case as the above, to make the appointment by a joint demise of the mortgagor, mortgagee, and grantee, to the receiver for his life, ut ante, 434. STEWARD OF A MANOR.

Appointment of a Steward (a) of a Manor or Manors.

Grant. Know all men by these presents, That I [lord (or lady)], of, &c. (b) have given and granted, And by these presents do give and grant unto [steward], of, &c gentleman, the office of steward of my manor (or manors) of , in the county of , (and of every of them): And I have constituted and appointed, And by these presents do constitute and appoint him the said [steward] steward of the said manor (or manors, and of every of them), to keep and hold all courts belonging to Appointment.

A steward appointed by parol, by one solely seised, has the same powers as if appointed by deed.

(a) A voluntary appointment of a steward of a manor by a lord or lady, solely seised of the manor, is frequently notified to the steward by word or letter, without any formal appointment being made. For a steward, either of a court baron or a court leet, Co. Litt. 61. b, may be retained by parol; [Co. Cop. s. 45.] and this retainer by parol is as effectual in all points until the steward is discharged, as the most effectual institution by patent or deed. A steward thus retained, may examine a feme covert, or take a surrender, either in or out of court, although there be no special custom to warrant it; Smithson v. Cage, Cro. Jac. 526, or make voluntary admittances, or do any other act incident to the office of a steward, as well as if he had a grant thereof by a patent or deed. Co. Cop. s. 45. Tr. 104. Harris & Jay, 4 Co. 30, a. Lady Holcroft's case, 4 Co. 30, b. Hargr. n. Co. Litt. 59, a. (1). Gilb. Ten. 221. 313. But a patent is necessary to the making of stewards of the king's manors. Harris & Jay, 4 Co. 30, a. Cro. Eliz. 699. S. C. Co. Cop. s. 45. Tr. 10. Hargr. n. Co. Litt. 61, b. (1). 5 Gwil. Bac. Abr. 189. Vide 1 Ann. st. I. c. 7. s. 5 & 8. So in the case of a corporation aggregate, a patent or deed is requisite. Co. Cop. s. 45. Tr. 105. See further, 19 Vin. Abr. 596. Steward (F). Com. But it is otherwise as to the steward of the king, or of an aggregate corporation.

A recital is not requisite.

(a) It is not requisite that the original appointment should be recited. Parker v. Kett, 1 Ld. Raym. 660. Com. Dig. Poiar (C. 4). If the steward were appointed by parol, or his appointment, although in writing, did not authorize the appointment of a deputy, the succeeding form should be adopted.

Without authority or custom, a steward cannot appoint a deputy. Where a deputy may be appointed, his authority is as great as the steward's.

(b) It seems that a steward cannot appoint a general deputy, unless he be authorised so to do, either by the terms of his own appointment, Co. Cop. sec. 46. Tr. 107. Gilb. Ten. 284, 320, or by the special custom of the manor. Lord Dacre's case, 1 Leon. 288. [Parker v. Kett, 1 Ld. Raym. 660. 1 Salk. 96. Burgess v. Foster, 1 Leon. 289]. forming the selfsame duties that the high steward himself is to perform. Co. Cop. sec. 46. Tr. 107. [1 Salk. 96]. It was formerly held, that a deputy steward could not admit out of court, without a particular custom, Co. Cop. ubi supra, or an authority from the lord or head steward for that purpose. Bro. Abr. Court Barron, pl. 22. Tenant per Copie, pl. 26. However, later authorities establish, that a deputy steward may do any act which his principal might have done. Parker v. Kett, 1 Ld. Raym. 659. 1 Salk. 95. 12 Mod. 467. S. C. A deputy steward cannot make a general deputy, because it implies an assignment of his whole power, which he cannot assign over. 5 Bac. Abr. 208. Offices. (L). For a deputy being only one who is authorised himself, he cannot delegate that authority; and if a deputy might make a deputy, such second deputy might also do the same; and so ad infinitum, which would be highly inconvenient. Lib. Reg. 446. But every steward, or deputy steward, may authorise another to do any special act for him; as to hold a court, to take surrenders, make grants by copy and admittances. Lord Dacre's case, 1 Leon. 288. Gilb. Ten. 284. Parker v. Kett, ubi supra.

A deputy steward may admit out of court.

A deputy steward cannot make a general deputy.

Every steward or deputy steward, may appoint another to do any special act.

A general or a special deputy steward may be appointed by writing or by parol. Co. Cop. sec. 46. Tr. 107. 1 Leon. 288. 1 Ld. Raym. 661. However, the appointment of a deputy for either purpose, is most usually made by writing under hand and seal. [In the case of the King, it is said that the steward must be expressly empowered by his patent to appoint a deputy. 4 Co. 30. a. b. 1 Watk. Cop. 30. Ed.]

A deputy may be made by word, by writing, or by deed.

THIS INDENTURE, made the day of in the

(a) The rule of the common law, that the widow's acceptance of a collateral satisfaction of or out of lands in which she was not dowable, was no bar to her title to dower in those to which that title attached, united with the inconvenience which would have ensued after the passing of the statute of uses, induced the legislature, by that act, to enable the husband to bar effectually his wife's right to dower, by making a provision for her before marriage in lieu of it, and which is known by the name of her jointure. What the inconvenience would have been if it had not been obviated, the reader will understand from the following observations :— The origin of jointures.

At the period of passing the statute, the greatest part of the lands in England was vested in feoffees to uses. Now, since a widow was not entitled to dower of an use, Perk. s. 349. 2 Bla. Com. 331, her father or friends, upon her marriage, procured a settlement to be made of some particular lands of the intended husband, to his and his wife's use, in joint tenancy for their lives, as a provision for her in the event of her surviving him. But the statute removed the partition between the possession in the feoffees, and the use limited to the cestui que uses, in declaring that the latter should attract the former; so that the legal inheritance in the husband's estates not settled upon the marriage, no longer continued in the feoffees, but was instantaneously transferred by the operation of the act to the husband, the cestui que use. The unavoidable consequence of this would have been, to entitle the widow to dower in all her husband's unsettled estates of inheritance, and at the same time she might have retained the lands which had been settled upon her, in lieu of that right. Vernon's case, 4 Co. 1. b. 2, a. 1 Rop. Husb. and Wife, 456. To remedy this injustice, by the statute

VIII. c. 10, s. 6, it was enacted, "that whereas divers persons have purchased, or have estate made and conveyed of and in divers lands, tenements, and hereditaments, unto them and to their wives, and to the heirs of the husband, or to the husband and to the wife, and to the heirs of their two bodies begotten, or to the heirs of one of their bodies begotten, or to the husband and to the wife for term of their lives, or for term of life of the said wife; or where any such estate, or purchase of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, hath been, or hereafter shall be made to any husband and to his wife, in manner and form [above] expressed, or to any other person or persons, and to their heirs and assigns, to the use and behoof of the ssid husband and wife, or to the use of the wife as is before rehearsed, for the jointure of the wife; that then, in every such case, every woman married, having such jointure made, or hereafter to be made, shall not claim nor have title to have any dower of the residue of the lands, tenements, or hereditaments, that at any time were her said husband's, by whom she hath any such jointure, nor shall demand nor claim her dower of and against them that have the lands and inheritances of her said husband; but if she have no such jointure, then she shall be admitted and enabled to pursue, have, and demand her dower by writ of dower, after the due course and order of the common laws of this realm; this act, or any law or provision made to the contrary thereof notwithstanding.

Definition of a jointure.

Upon this statute the modern legal jointure is founded. It is defined by Lord Coke, from the purview of the act, to be a competent livelihood of freehold for the wife, of lands or tenements, &c. to take effect presently, in possession or profit, after the death of her husband, for the life of the wife at the least, if she herself be not the cause of the determination or forfeiture of it. Co. Litt. 36, b. 37.

A legal jointure must be as beneficial in duration as dower.

In the construction of this statute, courts of law have regulated their decisions upon the validity of jointures, in reference to the widow's title to dower, in lieu of which jointures were substituted; so that as to the commencement, certainty, interest, &c. they have required the jointure to be as beneficial to the widow as her dower. If this object be effected, it is indifferent in what manner the estate is limited to the wife; for although the statute expressly mentions five forms of limitation only, yet these particulars are only expressed as examples, and not in exclusion of other cases which may fall within the meaning and intention of the act.

A rent charge is usually given as a jointure.

The inconveniences which attend a limitation of land, by way of jointure, are so numerous, that it has long been a general practice to limit a rent charge to the intended wife for her life, as a jointure, to commence from the death of the husband, with powers of distress and entry, and generally with a term for years to a trustee, for further securing the payment of it, which has been found by experience to be much more convenient, both to the jointress and to the remainder-man, as a more certain income is thereby provided for the former, and the latter continues in the possession and management of the whole estate. 1 Cru. Dig. 229, 2d ed. And by which means the freehold goes over to the remainder-man, who may, when his estate falls into possession, suffer a recovery, if he be tenant in tail, without the concurrence of the jointress. Sug. n. Gilb. Uses, 148 (4).

Unless there be a term, trustee unnecessary. A jointure limited to a trustee, is no bar at law.

(c) If the power of jointuring does not authorise the creation of a term for securing the rent charge, a trustee would be unnecessary and improper. For at law, if an estate be made to others in fee, or for the life of the jointress upon trust for her, yet if the estate remain in them, although it be for her benefit, and by her assent, and by express words is declared to be in full satisfaction of her dower, yet this is no bar of her dower at law, for there it must be made to herself. Co. Litt. 36, b. Hervey v. Hervey, 1 Atk. 563. But a trust estate being equally as certain and beneficial as what is required at law, it is a good equitable jointure in bar of dower. And even a covenant by the husband with trustees previous to a marriage with an infant, to settle a jointure on her in lieu of dower, although the infant be not a party to the articles, yet it is an equitable bar. Jordan v. Savage, 3 Bac. Abr. 717. Jointure (B. 5). 2 Eq. Cas. Abr. 101, pl. 8. S. C. Hargr. n. Co. Litt. 36, b. (5). adult, previously to marriage, accepts in lieu of dower, will be a good jointure in equity. Charles v. Andrews, 9 Mod. 152. Williams v. Chitty, 3 Ves. 545. Sug. Gilb. Uses, 151, (6). [Harvey v. Ashley, 3 Atk. 612. Earl of Bucks v. Drury, 5 Bro. P. C. 570.] For if the intended wife be of age, and a party to the deed, as she is able to settle and dispose of all her rights, she is competent to extinguish her title to dower upon any terms to which she may think proper to agree. 1 Rop. 481. Accordingly, Lord Alvanley, adverting to this subject, in Caruthers v. Caruthers, 4 Bro. C. C. 513, said, " that if the wife had been an adult, she might have taken a chance in satisfaction for her dower, acting with her eyes open."

marriage, is a good equitable jointure.

Infants are within the statute, and may be barred of dower by a legal jointure, made before marriage. Drury v. Drury, 3 Bro. Par. Cas. 492. 4 Bro. C. C. 506, n. 2 Eden, 60. Mr. Justice Wilmot's Opinions and Judgments, 117. Hargr. n. Co. Litt. 36, b. (7). By analogy to this rule, infants may also be barred by an equitable jointure; but they will not, like adults, be barred by a precarious provision: it must, to be effectual, although an equitable provision, be as certain a provision as is required to operate as a legal bar. Thus where, on the marriage of a female infant, an estate was settled on the husband's mother for life, remainder to the husband for life, remainder to the wife for life, in bar of dower: it was held that the settlement did not bind the wife, because the mother might, as in this case she did, survive the husband; and that the wife might therefore elect to take the provision under the settlement, or her dower and free-bench. The mother's death before the husband would not have altered the case; for if the jointure be good at all, it must be so from the making of the settlement. Caruthers v. Caruthers, 4 Bro. C. C. 513. So if a provision previous to the marriage of a female infant, in bar of dower, thirds, and all claim upon the real and personal estate of the husband, be precarious and uncertain, as, that the personal estate shall go according to the custom of London, it does not bar her. Smith v. Smith, 5 Ves. 189. Co. Litt. 36, b. [But it has lately been decided by the Vice-Chancellor (Sir J. Leach), that a jointure granted to an infant before marriage, her father assenting, issuing out of lands of the husband, the title of which was defective at the time of the marriage, but which afterwards became good, could not be renounced, and that the wife could not claim her dower. Corbet v. Corbet, 1 Sim. & Stu. 612. The editor believes, however, that an appeal from this decision is now waiting for the judgment of the Lord Chancellor. Ed.]

Jointure after marriage is no bar to dower, unless accepted after husband's death.

If a jointure be made before marriage, and the husband and wife alien it by fine, she is not dowable of his other lands; but it is otherwise where the jointure is made after marriage.

(f) If the jointure be made after marriage, it will not bar the wife of her dower, either by law or in equity, unless she accept the jointure after her husband's death. Noy's Ten. 40. 1 Eden. 138. And if a jointure be made to a wife of lands before marriage, and after, the husband and wife alien by fine those lands so conveyed for her jointure, she shall not be endowed of any other lands of her husband. But if the jointure had been made after marriage, notwithstanding the alienation thereof by the husband and wife, by fine, yet as her estate was originally waivable, and the time of her election came not till after the decease of her husband, she may claim her dower in the residue of his lands. ---

(h) The above appointment being subject to a previous life estate of the husband's father, it would not be an effectual jointure if made on an infant, either before or after marriage; ante, 492; or if made on an adult after marriage. Ante, 491. The parts of the above form, not included in parentheses, are adapted to ordinary circumstances. Observations on the above form.

(i) Where a power of jointuring was executed in favour of a wife, but with an agreement, that the wife should only receive a part as an annuity for her own benefit, and that the residue should be applied to the payment of the husband's debts, it was held to be a fraud on the power, and the execution was set aside, except so far as related to the annuity, the bill containing a submission to pay it, and only seeking relief against the other objects of the appointment. Aleyne v. Belchier, 1 Eden, 132. Appendix Sug. Pow. 677, 2d ed. 710, 3d ed. [733, 4th ed.] S. C. A fraudulent execution of a power of jointuring will be set aside in equity.

So if there be a power to make a jointure under restrictions, as 100*l.* a year for every 1000*l.* and the lady having but a small portion, the husband or his friends advance a sum of money, in order colourably to enable him to make the larger jointure, a court of equity will reject such part as is more than proportional to the real fortune. Lane v. Page, Ambl. 235. Lord Tyrconnell v. Duke of Ancaster, Ambl. 239. 2 Ves. sen. 501, S. C. Because these are cases of fraud on the property of a third person, the remainder-man. Ambl. 235. The reader will observe, that in the first case, the bill submitted to pay the annuity; and in the other case, there was a consideration actually paid for the restricted jointure. The execution of a power to jointure, in proportion to the wife's fortune, will be good only to the extent of the actual amount.

But whether, in cases otherwise circumstanced, equity will not set aside the whole settlement, but merely that part which is infected with fraud, seems doubtful. [See Palmer v. Wheeler, 2 Ball & Beat. 18.] For in ordinary cases of fraud, the whole transaction is undone, and the parties are restored to their original situation. Daubeny v. Cockburn, 1 Meriv. 644. Qy. Whether the execution be void in toto, or pro tanto.

But it is not requisite that the portion should be actually received by the husband; for if it is settled so as to come for the benefit of the family in the fair way of contracting and making settlements, that comes for the benefit of the husband and his family; and what is settled fairly for the benefit of the family, comes to the benefit of the husband. And therefore if a part or the whole of the portion be settled to pay the in- If the portion be settled for the benefit of the family, it is sufficient;

An appointment under a power, should be expressed to be in execution of it, and of every other authority; and should shew that the formalities are complied with.

(a) In every well drawn deed of appointment, these three points should be embraced; 1st, the deed executing the power should be expressed to be in exercise of it; 2dly, of every other authority enabling the donee in that behalf; and, 3dly, it should be shown in the body of the deed, that the formalities required to the execution of the power, are complied with. The first clearly evinces the intention of the person executing the power, which is particularly necessary where he has an interest as well as a power; the second guards against any misrecital of the deed creating the power, and in some cases has reached powers understood to have been extinguished; and the third affords internal evidence of the ceremonies having been complied with; and moreover, the attestation indorsed on a deed executing a power, should always state precisely that the formalities were attended to. Sug. Pow. 184. 2d ed. 193, 3d ed. [196, 4th ed.]

The attestation should state that the formalities were attended to.

If signing be required to be attested, the attestation should have the word 'signed.'

If the power, or a consent to the execution of a power, be required to be executed under hand and seal, attested by witnesses; Wright v. Wakeford, 17 Ves. 454. 4 Taunt. 213. Sug. Pow. Appen. hereupon indorsed as witnesses hereto;" and although the witnesses after the death of the person, or one of the persons executing the power, sign a memorandum on the deed, certifying that it was signed as well as sealed in their presence. For every thing required to be done in the execution of a power, must be strictly complied with, and must be completed in the life time of the person by whom it is to be executed. Hawkins v. Kemp, 3 East, 410.

Previously to these cases, the common form of an attestation of a deed had always been "sealed and delivered by the within named [A. B.], in the presence of." For signing was not essential to the validity of a deed at common law; sealing and delivery alone being sufficient. Perk. s. 130. Goddard's case, 2 Co. 5, a. Co. Litt. 7, a. 35, b. [Touchs. 60.] However, by the statute of frauds, 29 Car. II. c. 3, all conveyances of lands or hereditaments must be in writing, and signed by the parties making the same, or their agents thereunto lawfully authorised by writing; and therefore signing is now as necessary to the perfection of a deed as sealing.* But as an attestation is not essential to the validity of an

Since the stat. of frauds, a deed should be signed as well as sealed.

* [This is incorrect. The first section of the statute of frauds has enacted, "that all leases, estates, interests of freehold, or terms of years, or any uncertain interest of, in, to, or out of any messuages, manors, lands, tenements, or hereditaments, created by livery of seisin only, or by parol, and not put in writing and signed by the parties creating the same, or their agents, thereunto lawfully authorised in writing, shall have the force and effect of leases or estates at will only, and shall not, either at law or equity, be taken to be of greater force or effect, any consideration for making any such parol leases, or estates, or former usage to the contrary notwithstanding." The second section makes an exception in favour of leases not exceeding three years, whereupon the reserved rent should amount to two-thirds of the full improved value.

29 Car. II. c. 3. s. 1., that all leases created by livery or parol, and not put in writing and signed, shall have the effect of leases at will.

Sec. 2. Exception.

By sec. 3. it is enacted, "That no leases, estates, or interests, either of freehold or terms of years, or any uncertain interest, not being copyhold or customary interest of lands or hereditaments, shall be assigned, granted, or surrendered, unless by deed or note in writing signed by the parties, or their agents thereunto authorised by writing, or by act and operation of law."

Sec. 3. No leases, &c. shall be assigned, granted, or surrendered, unless by deed, signed by the parties.

ing them, unless the agreement upon which such action shall be brought, or some memorandum or note thereof, shall be in writing, and signed by the party to be charged therewith, or some other person thereunto by him lawfully authorised."

Sec. 17. Contracts for sale of goods must be in writing, and signed.

And by sec. 17, it is enacted, "That no contracts for sale of goods for the price of 10*l.* shall be good unless a part of the goods is delivered, or something is given in earnest, or that some note or memorandum in writing of such bargain be made and signed" by the parties or their agents.

All deeds affecting real property and chattels in particular manner, and contracts for goods of a certain value, should be signed, but no others.

By these sections it will be seen that "all leases, estates, interests of freehold, or terms of years, or any uncertain interests" in lands, and that "all assignments, grants, and surrenders" of such leases, estates, or interests, must be in writing, and are to be signed; and that all contracts for lands, and goods of 10*l.* value, must also be signed, but that no other deeds than these are directed to be signed by this statute.—The construction put upon the words of the first and fourth sections, by an eminent writer, is, that the terms of the first section are co-extensive with those of the fourth, and extend to every possible interest in lands which is not within the exception of the second section, Sugd. Vend. 67, 7th ed.; and this construction, although not perhaps according to the words of the act, see Crosby v. Wadsworth, 6 East, 610, is consistent with its intent and objects. All that the statute of frauds, therefore, has enacted, according to its most liberal construction, is, that all deeds conveying, assigning, granting, and surrendering real property or chattels, and agreements for their sale, and contracts for goods of a certain value, shall be in writing, and signed either by the parties conveying, &c. or their agents, to be authorised in writing; but all other deeds are unaffected by this act. This subject has been gone into at some length, as very erroneous opinions are to be found in books of constant reference, on the necessity of signing a deed. On the one hand Mr. Justice Blackstone considers, that since the statute of frauds, signature is as necessary to the perfection of all deeds, as sealing, 2 Comm. 305 & 306; and on the other, Mr. Preston has said "that the statute of frauds is applicable only to mere agreements, not attended with the solemnities of a deed," 3 Abstr. 61, and see tion had been raised in practice, in consequence of the omission of the word "signed" in the attestation of the execution of a power required to be signed and attested by witnesses, it was a general opinion of the bar, that the objection was not well founded. However the above decisions settled the point. But the alarm thereby excited, in consequence of various titles being liable to the same objection, induced the legislature to pass the following act, 54 Geo. III. c. 168, commonly called Mr. Preston's act.

54 Geo. III. c. 168.

"An Act to amend the Laws respecting the Attestation of Instruments of Appointment and Revocation, made in exercise of certain Powers in Deeds, Wills, and other Instruments." [Royal Assent, 30th July, 1814.]

"Whereas powers, authorities, and trusts are in many cases required to be executed by deeds or instruments, signed by or under the hands of the persons executing the same, or persons consenting to or directing acts respecting such powers, authorities, and trusts, are frequently required to signify such consent or direction by deeds or instruments signed by them, or under their hands, and it has been the ordinary practice, in the memorandum of attestation of deeds, to express the facts of sealing and delivery only: And whereas doubts have arisen respecting the validity of deeds or instruments so attested and requiring also 1 Abstr. 154; so Mr. Sugden says, without any qualification, "signing is not essential to the validity of a deed, although sealing is," Powers, 242, 4th ed. and it is to be remarked, that in the quotation by the same writer, of the first section of the statute of frauds, in the Treatise of the Law of Vendors, 65, the important words "and signed" by the parties creating the same, are omitted, although they are afterwards alluded to in p. 93. The well deserved popularity of these works will perhaps justify these corrections.

Signing not essential to a release by deed of personal estate.

The only late case on the subject is Taunton v. Pepler, 6 Madd. 166, where it was determined that signature is not essential to a release by deed given to an administrator, and of course relating to personal property; which is in confirmation, as far as it extends, of the above remarks. It seems that signing a deed is not notice of all its contents, Lord Rancliffe v. Parkins, 6 Dow, 224. But see exparte Carstairs, 1 Buck. 597. Ed.] signature, although the same may have been actually signed by the persons whose signature is required thereto, and the titles of many purchasers, and of other persons claiming under such instruments, may be defective for want of the insertion of the word "signed," or some word to that effect, in the memorandum of attestation thereof: And whereas it is expedient that the titles of purchasers and other persons should not be disturbed, merely on account of the omission to express the fact of signature in the memorandum of attestation of any such deed or other instrument already made: May it therefore please your Majesty that it may be enacted; and be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, That every deed or other instrument, already made with the intention to exercise any power, authority, or trust, or to signify the consent or direction of any person whose consent or direction may be necessary to be so signified, shall (if duly signed and executed, and in other respects duly attested) be from the date thereof, and so as to establish derivative titles, if any, of the same validity and effect, and no other, at law and in equity, and proveable in like manner, as if a memorandum of attestation of signature, or being under hand, had been subscribed by the witness or witnesses thereto; and the attestation of the witness or witnesses thereto, expressing the fact of sealing, or of sealing and delivery, without expressing the fact of signing, or any other form of attestation, shall not exclude the proof or the presumption of signature.

Deeds, &c. already executed without a memorandum of attestation, deemed valid.

"II. "IV. Provided always, and be it further enacted, That if any person who has made any such entry or claim, or who has brought any such suit, or has defended any suit for the purpose of avoiding any such appointment, revocation, or other assurance, should release the benefit of the same entry, claim, suit, or defence, within six calendar months next after the passing of this act, then such entry or claim, or suit or defence, shall not prejudice or avoid any such appointment, revocation, or other assurance, but every such appointment, revocation, or other assurance shall be and remain in force under this act as if no such entry or claim had been made, or suit brought or defended.

Appointments, &c. not to be affected.

"V. Provided always, and be it further enacted, That nothing in this act contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to affect any question respecting any instrument not within the provisions of this act, and which may want any formality in the attestation of any witness or witnesses thereto, but such instrument shall have the same force and effect as it might have had if this act had not been made; any thing in this act contained notwithstanding."

No instrument, unless within the provisions of this act, to be affected.

This statute is only retrospective, its operation being limited to transactions prior to the 30th July, 1814. The question may therefore frequently occur in regard to future executions of powers. To prevent its recurrence as much as possible, every conveyancer should expunge from his common forms any expression which may be considered to require the word "signed" to be inserted in the attestation. And solicitors should, in every case, make the attestation, "signed, sealed, and delivered." If the latter precaution were generally adopted, the old form would be forgotten, and the question would never arise. Sug. Pow. 257, 3d ed. [261, 4th ed.]

The statute is not prospective in its operation. To prevent the future recurrence of the question, signature should not be required; and the general attestation should be "signed, sealed, and delivered."

The act only extends to a defective attestation of signature; and therefore if a power be required to be executed by will, or any writing or appointment in the nature of a will, to be signed and published in the presence of, and attested by two or more credible witnesses, a will signed by the donee, and attested thus—"witness, A. B. C. D." without any attestation of the publication, is not a valid execution of the power, and the case is not within the act. Moodie v. Reid, 1 Madd.

As the act only extends to a defective attestation of signature, if publication of a will be required to be attested, the attestation

It seems, that during the donee's life, defects in the attestation may generally be remedied;

It seems, that during the life of the donee of the power, defects in the attestation may generally be supplied by means of a re-execution, either in the presence of the former, or of new witnesses, or by means of a new deed, properly executed and attested. Hawkins v. Kemp, 3 East, 410. 3 Pres. Abs. 75. For as the previous deed was not a valid execution of the power, it seems that the case must be considered just in the same light as if no deed whatever had been made. (b) Notwithstanding the omission in the above power, of the usual words, "for such estate or estates," yet it seems clear that estates in fee may be appointed. Daniel v. Ubley, Noy, 80. The rule is the same, where both an interest and an authority pass to the wife, if the authority is collateral to, and does not flow from the interest; because then the two are as unconnected as if they were vested in different persons. Gibbons v. Moulton, Finch, 346. Hargr. n. Co. Litt. 112, a. (6). But unless there be a dispensation with coverture, it should seem that a power, coupled with an interest, cannot be exercised during coverture*. a fine or recovery. Pres. Watk. Conv. 252. And if a power be given to a single woman, to be executed by her "being sole," it cannot be executed by her during coverture. Lord Antrim v. Duke of Buckingham, 1 Cha. Ca. 17. 2 Freem. 168. 3 Salk. 276. 1 Eq. Cas. Abr. 343, pl. 3. Pow. Pow. 31—43. Sug. Pow. 149, 2d ed. 156, 3d ed. [A woman's exercise of her power may also be restrained to the time of a particular marriage. Horseman v. Abbey, 1 Jac. and Walk. 381.]

A wife may convey lands in performance of a condition.

As a feme covert may, without her husband, convey lands in execution of a mere power or authority, so may she, with equal effect, in performance of a condition, where land is vested in her on condition to convey to others. W. Jones, 137, 138. The reason why, in these instances, the wife may convey without her husband, seems to be, that he can receive no prejudice from her acts, but a great one might arise to others, if his concurrence should be essential. Yet if a legal estate of freehold be vested in a married woman, in trust for another, the better opinion, sanctioned by uniform practice, is, that no effectual conveyance can be made, unless she and her husband join in a fine or recovery of the estate. 1 Pres. Abs. 337. This was the opinion of Jones, in the case of Daniel and Upley. But the judges, Whitlock and Dodridge, dissented from Jones, and held, that the husband's joining was not any more requisite than in the other cases. W. Jones, 137. Jones's opinion, however, seems to be most conformable to the strictly legal doctrine; and his thus distinguishing a trust from a power and a condition, may be accounted for. Trusts are properly the subjects of consideration for the courts of equity only; and though in them the legal estate is made subservient to the trust, yet the courts of law take notice of trusts for very few purposes. Butl. Fearn's Rem. 35. Preston on Shelley's case, 58. 1 Preston on Estates, 311.* Nor will it be easy to find an authority for departing from any rule about the effect of legal conveyances, merely in respect of their being a performance of trusts. Hargr. n. Co. Litt. 112. a. (6). Another reason for this distinction may be drawn from the consideration, that if a married woman were allowed to convey a legal estate, without her husband's concurrence, she might convey it before the several objects of the trust were satisfied, for which he might jointly with her be responsible to the cestuis que trust: a reason which does not apply to the mere execution of a power, or performance of a condition. 1 Fonb. Treat. Equity, 92, 5th ed.

But, as connected with the above doctrine, it may be observed, that although the wife of a trustee in fee, or of a mortgagee in fee, of a forfeited mortgage, is at law entitled to dower, Sug. n. Gilb. Uses, 369; Noy's Ten. 16, yet a fine on that account is never required by a purchaser; because, if the wife of a trustee or mortgagee were to be so ill advised as to prosecute her legal claim, equity would at this day restrain her from proceeding, by injunction, and would undoubtedly compel her to pay all the costs. Sug. Vend. 303, 5th ed. 317, 6th ed. For the legal estate vested in a trustee in fee, or in a mortgagee in fee of a forfeited mortgage, is in equity protected against his judgments and other incumbrances, Finch v. OF A TRUST ESTATE IN A MOIETY TO ONE, AND OF OTHER MOIETY TO FIVE, IN FEE, WITH POWER OF REVOCATION.

Power of general or partial revocation.

(g) Under a power of appointment, the donee may either appoint absolutely, or in the deed executing the power, he may reserve a power of revocation and new appointment, although not expressly authorised to do so by the deed creating the power; Adams v. Adams, Cowp. 651. And where even a particular power is given to two persons, or the survivor of them, with or without power of revocation, they may execute a joint appointment, and reserve to the survivor a power of revocation and new appointment. Brudenell v. Elwes, 1 East, 442. 7 Ves. 382, S. C.

Under a power of appointment, the donee may appoint absolutely, or reserve a power of revocation and new appointment.

The donee may regulate the mode of revocation, as it need not be attended with the same solemnities as the power of appointment; Winstandley's case, 3 Keb. 7, cited; but he cannot, on a future appointment, dispense with the necessity of conforming to the requisites of the original power; Prest. Watk. Conv. 149. Sir S. Jones v. Lady Manchester, Vent. 198; for by the revocation, the original power is revived. 2 Pres. Abs. 274, 277.

The donee may regulate the mode of revocation; but on a future appointment, he must observe the original power.

A will is always revocable; and therefore where the power is executed by will, an express power of revocation need not be reserved. Hatcher v. Curtis, 2 Freem. 61, S. C. 2 Eq. Cas. vocation in the instrument creating the power; Worrall v. Jacob, 3 Meriv. 256; and even if the original power expressly authorise the donee in the most unlimited terms to appoint, and to revoke his appointments from time to time; for the law will not endure a prospective power like this; but on every execution a new power of revocation must be reserved. Hele v. Bond, ubi supra. The decisions as to the necessity of reserving a power of revocation in order to authorise a party to revoke an appointment by deed, have always been considered to apply to personal as well as to real estate. Sug. Pow. 317, 2d ed. 324, 3d ed. [327, 328, 4th ed.]

of revocation be reserved, the appointment cannot be revoked, whether it be of personal or real estate.

Although in the original settlement a power of revocation only be reserved, yet a power to limit new uses is implied, and may be executed, unless the contrary be declared by the settlement.

And although in the original settlement there be only reserved a power to revoke the uses thereby declared, yet a power is implied to limit new uses out of the first seisin, and may be executed accordingly; Fowler v. North, 3 Keb. 7. Anon. 1 Cha. Ca. 242; "for he that has power to revoke, has power to limit." S. C. by the name of Witham and Bland's case, 2 Cha. Ca. 46. (Contra, Anon. 1 Stra. 584; but that case seems of doubtful authority, and it is reported "ex relatione aliorum.") However it is otherwise if a contrary intention can be collected from the whole settlement; or if an estate be settled to uses with a power of revocation, and it be declared, that upon the revocation the uses shall cease, and the estate shall remain to the use of the settlor and his heirs; after revocation he cannot limit new uses out of the old seisin, it being exhausted on the execution of the use to him in fee. Atwaters v. Birt, Cro. Eliz. 856. New uses can only be raised by means of a conveyance under the ownership.

But a power, reserved in a deed executing a power, will not authorise a limitation of new uses.

But every power reserved in a deed executing a power, will be strictly construed; and therefore a mere power of revocation in such a deed will not authorise a limitation of new uses. Digges's case, 1 Co. 173, b. Ward v. Lenthal, 1 Sid. 343.

It seems that a power of revocation may be reserved on the execution of a power simply collateral.

Upon the authority of Wall v. Thurborne, 1 Vern. 355, an opinion has prevailed, that a power of revocation cannot be reserved on the execution of a power simply collateral, when it is not authorised by the original power. See Powell on Powers, 307. In that case the wife had a power under her husband's will to appoint an estate amongst her daughters; and she executed the power with power of revocation, but never actually revoked the settlement. The book says, "as to the power of revocation, the case may be eased of that, for it was only an authority in the wife; and that being once executed, she could not reserve such power to herself." In the first place then (says Mr. Sugden), it appears that the point did not call for a decision, and it is very

C. 450, or "unto and among" the children of different persons, every one must have a share. Malim v. Keighley, 2 Ves. jun. 334, 533; so even a power of disposal "unto and among such children begotten between us, and in such proportion," as the wife shall appoint, compels a distribution amongst all the children; no child can be excluded. Alexander v. Alexander, 2 Ves. sen. 640. [But see Doe v. Achin, where the words were "for the use of such of the children, &c. as A. B. may appoint;" and it was held, that an exclusive appointment might be made; and particular reliance was placed on the word "such." 2 Barn. and Ald. 122. In Spring v. Byles, 1 T. R. 421, n., the words were "to and amongst such of my relations, in such parts, shares, and proportions;" and it was held, that an exclusive appointment might be made; cases which it is difficult to reconcile with Alexander v. Alexander. See Burleigh v. Pearson, 1 Ves. 281, where the word "such" was held to be governed by a preceding clause, and to render a general appointment obligatory. And see post, 554.] And in a late case, Kemp v. Kemp, 5 Ves. 849, Lord Alvanley held, that a power to appoint "amongst the children as the donee shall think proper," did not authorise an exclusive appointment. He treated the word "amongst," as equivalent to "all and every," which words are mandatory, that each shall have a share. Menzey v. Walker, For. 72. And in an early case, Gibson v. Kinven, 1 Vern. 66, upon a gift to the wife "upon trust and confidence that she would not dispose thereof but for the benefit of her children," it was determined, that no child could be excluded. Sug. Pow. 482, 3d ed. [484, 4th ed.]

What words will not authorise an exclusive appointment.

At law any share, however nominal or illusory, will satisfy the terms of the power. 1 Durnf. and East, 438, n. 5 Ves. 861. But in equity some share must be given which does not come within the meaning of an illusory appointment. What that share is, remains in some doubt, unless the criterion be fixed by the determination of Lord Alvanley, that where a party is, in default of appointment, to take a third share, a gift of a hundred and ninetieth share to him is illusory: it was here Sir Wm. Grant, the late Master of the Rolls, drew the line; so that any share, which, squared by this rule, would exceed that in amount, was not deemed illusory. Sug. Pow. 493, 3d ed. But the old rule, which leaves a discretionary power in the judge, to be directed by the circumstances of each case, has been countenanced by Lord Eldon, though certainly with restrictions. The following is the result of the leading cases on this important subject. In Wilson v. Piggot, 2 Ves. jun. 356, the proportion given to one of four children amounted only to one sixteenth of the whole fund, and Lord Alvanley held it to be good, although it was one-fourth less than an equal proportion. In Alexander v. Alexander, 2 Ves. sen. 640, the proportion given was only a sixtieth part of the fund to one of five children; but the point was not raised, because the child did not claim more. 9 Ves. 392. In Kemp v. Kemp, 5 Ves. 849, the fund amounted to nearly 1,900*l.* There were three objects: to one 50*l.* was given, to another 10*l.*, and the residue to the other. The first therefore had only a thirty-eighth share, and the second only a one hundred and ninetieth share of the entire fund, when, upon an equal division, each would have been entitled to a third. Lord Alvanley, in delivering judgment, but lamenting that the Court did not follow the rule of law, said, that he was bound to say, the bequest of the 10*l.* was clearly meant as an illusion, and not an execution. The discussion of this case turned, not upon the 50*l.* but upon the 10*l.* 12 Ves. 125. In Butcher v. Butcher, 9 Ves. 382, there were nine persons, and the fund amounted to about 17,000*l.* To some of the children 200*l.* 3 per cents. only was given; so that, reckoning the stock at even 70 per cent. the share did not exceed a hundred and twenty-second part of the fund. The late Master of the Rolls, after expressing his opinion of the rule, said, "it is impossible not to feel the disposition of Lord Alvanley, as expressed in Spencer v. Spencer (5 Ves. 368), to get rid of it altogether. But I am not authorised to act upon that disposition. I am bound to follow the precedents, as far as they have gone; but having no principle to guide me, I cannot go a step farther. As therefore no case has been found in which a sum of this amount has been declared illusory, there is no ground upon which I think myself justified in determining, that this is an invalid appointment." In Bax v. Whitehead, 10 Ves. 31, the fund was 2,500*l.* South Sea Annuities, and there were only two objects of the power: to one, 100*l.* stock was given, and the residue to the other. The first therefore had only a twenty-fifth share; and the Master of the Rolls, referring to his former decision, held the appointment not illusory. In Mocatta v. Lonsada, 12 Ves. 123, the fund was 2,500*l.* There were five objects of the power. To some, the donee of the power gave only a share equal to about a seventy-fifth of the fund, it amounting to 33*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* each, when upon an equal division, they would have been entitled to 500*l.* each. The Master of the Rolls said, that he adhered to the rule he laid down in Butcher v. Butcher, that he would go as far as he was bound by authority, and no farther. In Dyke v. Sylvester, 12 Ves. 126, the disproportion was still greater. The fund amounted to about 7,100*l.*; and there were nine objects of the power, seven of whom had only about 71*l.* a-piece given to them. The point was given up in argument; and the Master of the

Under an inclusive power of appointment, the shares may be illusory at law, but they must not in equity.

OF LEASEHOLD FOR YEARS TO CHILDREN, IN UNEQUAL SHARES; AND ASSIGNMENT OF TERM TO NEW TRUSTEES.

Rolls thought that there was nothing in an objection taken that there might be more children; there was so little probability, under the circumstances, that the shares would ever be reduced below the standard, under which he had said he should consider himself bound by the authorities.

Lord Eldon's opinion.

On appeals to Lord Chancellor Eldon, in Bax v. Whitbread, 16 Ves. 15. and in Butcher v. Butcher, 1 Ves. & Bea. 79, against the decrees of the Master of the Rolls in those cases, the Lord Chancellor in both instances confirmed the decrees, the shares not being in his opinion illusory; but he expressed his dissatisfaction with the negative rule, adopted by the Master of the Rolls, and appeared inclined to the old rule, which permits the Court to exercise a discretion, according to the peculiar circumstances attending each case. By which, according to the Master of the Rolls, "the Court keeps itself in a state of constant embarrassment, and those who have such powers to execute, in a perpetual uncertainty, without aiming at any object of the least importance." 9 Ves. 398. These difficulties are equally recognized by the Lord Chancellor; for in Butcher v. Butcher, 1 Ves. & Bea. 96, 97, he says, "having given to this subject the most deliberate attention, I find it in such a state of contradiction, both from dicta and decisions of great Judges, that, if I had to advise, I could not say, how such a power can be safely exercised. The doctrine is as loose as this; that, though a power is given, to be exercised according to discretion, as to the shares, yet in effect, unless the judgment of the person, who was to exercise that power, agreed with the judgment of the Judge, who had to decide upon the execution, it is impossible to know, whether the execution would or would not be good." Vide post, 531.

An illusory appointment may be excused by a provision in some other way.

If the person exercising the power, provides for an object of the power in some other way, that prevents the appointment from being illusory. Bristow v. Warde, 2 Ves. jun. 349. Spencer v. Spencer, 5 Ves. 368. Kemp v. Kemp, 5 Ves. 861. Mocatta v. Lonsada, 12 Ves. 124. In Spencer v. Spencer, 5 Ves. 368, Lord Alvanley said, "if one child is already provided for, I desire it not to be understood as my opinion, that in such a case the party would be bound to give that child any thing." See also 12 Ves. 124. In another case, his lordship inclined to think, that an otherwise illusory share might be excused, where there is an actual provision made, even where it does not move from the person executing the power. Vandezec v. Aclom, 4 Ves. 785. And this latter doctrine is countenanced by Lord Redesdale. Lysaght

An illusory appointment may be of real as well as personal estate.

A power to appoint to children will not authorize an appointment to grand-children.

v. Royls, 2 Scho. & Lefr. 152; and see 16 Ves. 25. 1 Ves. & Bea. 95. But it is clear, that a provision made by the person creating the power would not have that effect. Kemp v. Kemp, 5 Ves. 861.

The doctrine of illusory appointments extends to real as well as to personal estate. Pocklington v. Bayne, 1 Bro. C. C. 451. See 5 Ves. 861. 1 Ves. & Bea. 99. But the chief ground of the determination in Pocklington v. Bayne, seems to have been for an excess in the execution of the power, by appointing to grand-children in remainder, and to trustees to preserve contingent remainders, when the power only authorised an appointment to children. See Alexander v. Alexander, 2 Ves. sen. 640. Brudenell v. Elwes, 1 East, 442. 7 Ves. 382, S. C. [Butcher v. Butcher, 9 Ves. 382.]

The very learned gentleman who drew the above deed, made on it the following observations, caused by the doubts and difficulties in which the doctrine of illusory appointments is at present involved. Vide etiam ante, 523, 525.

" If Mr. G. has advanced Mrs. K. and his son J., then the smallness of the shares of the leasehold estate, to be appointed to Mrs. K. and Mr. J. G. will not vitiate the appointment; but if they have not been substantially advanced, then the shares now to be appointed, must not be illusory. What proportion of the trust fund would amount to an illusory share, it is difficult to determine. In the case of Bax v. Whitbread, 10 Vesey, 31, the Master of the Rolls held, that one twenty-fifth part of a trust fund, was not an illusory share; but upon an appeal, 16 Vesey, 15, the Lord Chancellor seems to have disapproved of his Honour's determinations in former cases; the principle of which determinations seems to have been, to ascertain some precise proportion, which might be considered as the standard of an illusory share.

A person having a power to appoint to uses, may appoint to to such uses as another person shall appoint, which uses will take effect out of the original seisin.

(a) On a point similar to the above, Mr. Sugden well observes, "in a preceding page I put the case of an estate being conveyed to such uses as A. shall appoint, and of his desire to convey the estate as B. shall appoint. Perhaps there is no conveyancer to whom, in the early part of his professional life, a doubt has not presented itself in regard to the validity of such an appointment. Two objections have been made to it, which have come within my observation: the one, that it is contrary to a known principle, that a power cannot be delegated; and the other, that it is a new attempt at a perpetuity. Both these objections are easily answered. As to the first, the rule that a power cannot be delegated, is not a general inflexible rule, but is simply a regulation, that a confidence reposed in one, cannot by him be delegated to another. This rule, therefore, is inapplicable to the case before us; for no confidence was reposed in A., but the estate was, merely for his own convenience, conveyed to such uses generally as he should appoint. In regard to the second objection, the limitation has no greater tendency to a perpetuity than a simple conveyance in fee. Under the power in

Appointment by a married woman under a power,

AND WHEREAS the said [father] died on or about the day of , last past. AND WHEREAS the said [appointor], the wife of the said [husband], hath declared her intention to make an absolute appointment of her one third part of the said shipping and fire shares comprised in the said recited indenture of the day of 179 , (in exercise of the power thereby vested in her) to the said [husband], her husband, his executors, administrators, and assigns, in the manner hereinafter mentioned. AND WHEREAS the said [trustee], on the faith of the said intended appointment being made by her the said [appointor], hath this day, at the instance and request of the said [husband], and [appointor] his wife, [son], and [daughter], respectively, sold and disposed of the said shipping and fire shares, so vested in him, upon the trusts of the said indenture of the day of 179 , as aforesaid; and the same produced (after paying all incidental expenses) the clear sum of [ninety] pounds; which thereupon, became divisible in equal third parts, between the said [husband], [son], and [daughter]; And accordingly, he the said [trustee] hath, at or immediately before the sealing and delivery of these presents, paid the clear sum of [thirty] pounds, one equal third part of the said sum of [ninety] pounds, to the said [husband], (on the appointment and by the express direction of the said [appointor], his wife); And hath at the same time paid the sum of [thirty] pounds, and [thirty] pounds, the two remaining third parts of the said sum of [ninety] pounds, to the said [son] and [daughter], respectively; in consideration of which payments, they the said [husband], [son], and [daughter], have agreed to join in releasing the said [trustee], in the manner hereinafter mentioned. NOW THIS INDENTURE WITNESSETH, that in pursuance of the said recited intention of the said [appointor], and in order to complete the title of the said [husband], to the said sum of [thirty] pounds (one third part of the said sum of [ninety] pounds, the produce of the aforesaid shipping and fire shares), She the said [appointor], (in exercise, and by virtue of the power (b), or authority given to, or vested in her, by or under and by virtue of the

(b) A purchaser of a part of leasehold premises held under one lease, cannot object to the title on the ground of a clause of re-entry, &c. which by the neglect of another purchaser in paying the apportioned rent, may cause the purchaser to be evicted, or distrained without his default. For the whole premises must necessarily remain subject to the landlord's distress, &c. as no apportionment of the rent can be made, as against the landlord, without his consent. Thus certain leasehold premises, consisting chiefly of houses, were sold by auction in several lots. The purchaser of lots 28 and 33, excepted to the Master's report in favour of the title. The first exception was on the following grounds: In the particulars and conditions of sale, the premises were described as being held under a lease from the Earl of Halifax, for a term of years, subject to a ground rent of 60*l.* and to several under leases; and it was mentioned, that the purchaser of lot 9, was to be exclusively subject to the payment of the ground rent of 60*l.* It appeared by the abstract, that the original lease contained a clause of re-entry on the whole premises, in default of payment of the rent. The counsel for the exception argued, that under the clause of re-entry, the purchaser will be liable to the forfeiture of his estate, upon the default of a third person. Of this liability there was nothing to apprize him; for though a person purchasing a leasehold estate, must expect to take it subject to those inconveniences that are necessarily incident to the tenure, such as a power of distress; yet merely being informed that there is a

On a sale in lots of premises, the particulars of which state them to be held under one lease, reserving rent, and that the purchaser of one lot is to be exclusively subject to the rent, the other purchasers cannot object to the title, on the ground of a clause of re-entry on non-payment, contained in the lease.

assigns, and the premises by him purchased, from the rents, covenants, and agreements, reserved and contained in the said recited indenture of lease, which ought to be paid, kept, done, and performed in respect of the premises purchased by the other of them, it hath been mutually agreed between the said [purchaser], and [other purchaser], that they should respectively enter into such covenants and agreements as are hereinafter contained.

enter into the covenants hereinafter contained.

First testatum.

NOW THIS INDENTURE WITNESSETH, that in pursuance of the said recited agreement, and for and in consideration of the covenants hereinafter contained, on the part of the said [other purchaser], his heirs, executors, and administrators, he the said [purchaser], for himself, his heirs, executors, and administrators, doth hereby covenant, promise, grant, and agree, to and with the said [other purchaser], his executors, administrators, and assigns, in manner following, that is to say; that he the said [purchaser], his executors, lease reserving rent, cannot be considered to render him conusant of its containing other, and less usual remedies, for enforcing payment. On the other side it was contended, that the purchaser having notice of the lease, bought, subject to its covenants. Hall v. Smith, 14 Ves. 426. A clause of re-entry is by no means unusual, but what every one would naturally be led to suppose the lease contained. Sir Thomas Plumer, Master of the Rolls, said "I think there is nothing at all in this objection. It was properly admitted, that though the purchaser is liable to be called on for the rent, and even to be distrained on for it, and may thus be put to very great inconvenience, yet that would not form a ground for rejecting the title. If that were urged as an objection, the answer would be, that when several parts of an estate, held under an entire lease, are sold, the exoneration of one part from the rent, does not mean that the rights of the landlord are to be altered; he is not a party to the sale. The purchaser must know this; and knowing that there was a holding by one lease under Lord Halifax, and that his rights were to remain untouched, he would come with a very bad grace to create any difficulty on that head. Now, I do not see how to distinguish between that objection and the present, which applies only to another remedy for the recovery of the rent.—It is said that the purchaser was only apprised of what is at law incident to the tenure; but having notice of the lease, must we not consider that he had constructive notice of this clause? It is a clause very usually inserted; and to pay increased rent, if occasioned by him;

why did he not look into the lease itself? To both the objections, therefore, I think that the same answer is applicable; namely, that he had either real or constructive notice at the time of the sale. The true meaning of what is contained in the particular of sale is, that though the landlord was to continue to have the same rights over the whole estate, yet as between the different purchasers, inter se, the purchaser of lot 9 only was to be liable to the rent." Walter v. Maunde, 1 Jac. and Walk. 181.

A lessor cannot make a valid apportionment of the rent, without the intervention of a jury, or the consent of the lessee.

Nor can the lessor make a valid apportionment of the rent without the intervention of a jury, or the consent of the lessee. Thus, on a bill for the specific performance of the purchase of a public house sold by auction, which was described in the particulars of sale as "Lot 2, an old established freehold brick-built public house, &c. on lease, with a house adjoining, to Mr. R. which expires Michaelmas 1831. The apportioned rent for this lot is 40*l.* per annum." Lot 3, was thus described: "A freehold house, adjoining the preceding, and communicating thereto, on lease with lot 2, to Mr. R. which expires Michaelmas 1831. The apportioned rent for this lot is 25*l.* 5*s.* per annum." This lot was not sold. The purchaser of lot 2 objected to the title. Sir John Leach, Vice-Chancellor said, "The particular, under which the defendant purchased, represents the 40*l.* per annum to be an apportioned rent for this lot; and he insists, that there not being, at the time of the sale, any apportioned rent, he is not bound to complete his purchase. The plaintiff alleges that his conveyance alone will pass this property to the purchaser, with an apportioned rent of 40*l.*, as legally and effectually as if a jury had intervened. This is a mere legal question. Let a case be sent for the opinion of a court of law; viz. Whether the purchaser of lot 2 would, by the conveyance of the vendor alone, without the concurrence of the lessee, acquire the same rights and remedies against the lessee, in respect of the apportioned rent of 40*l.* therein to be reserved to him, as he would acquire in case no rent were mentioned in such conveyance from the vendor, and the annual rent of 40*l.* were legally apportioned by a jury for that part of the reversion comprised in lot 2?" Bliss v. Collins, 4 Madd. 229. The defendant having appealed from the decision of his Honour, the Lord Chancellor gave no opinion on the question, whether the apportionment by the landlord would put the purchaser in the same situation as if it had been apportioned by a jury; but thought the Vice-Chancellor was quite right in sending it to a court of law. However, his Lordship said, that the courts of law refused to answer speculative questions; and the case must therefore state a conveyance that will raise the question. The case was therefore altered, by stating an actual conveyance to have been made to the purchaser. Bliss v. Collins, 1 Jac. and Walk. 475. The case was accordingly argued in the Court of King's Bench, in Easter term, 1822, and the following certificate was sent by the four judges into the Court of Chancery:—"We have heard this case argued by counsel, and are of opinion, that the purchaser of the lot in question, hath not, by the aforesaid conveyance, acquired the same rights and remedies against the lessee, as he would have acquired if the rent had been legally apportioned by a jury; inasmuch as we think that the lessee is not bound by this apportionment, made without his consent, but may dispute the propriety thereof, and cause the rent to be apportioned anew by a jury." Bliss v. Collins, 1 Dowl. and Ryl. 291. Which certificate, probably, will have the effect of overruling the opinion of Sir Thomas Plumer, Master of the Rolls, on the second exception, in Walter v. Maunde, 1 Jac. & Walk. 181, that a landlord contracting to sell part of the demised estate, with an apportionment of a specific amount, part of the rent reserved for the whole estate, can make a good title to it, without the consent of the tenant.

A condition is not divisible.

But the condition, giving a right of re-entry for non-payment of rent and nonperformance of covenants, being entire and not divisible, by the severance of any part of the reversion, the condition is wholly destroyed, and no one can enter for a breach of it. Knight's case, 5 Co. 54, b. Dumpor's case, 4 Co. 120, b. ARBITRATION.

Arbitration is peculiarly adapted to the settlement of accounts; but doubts are entertained whether the praises bestowed on references to arbitration generally, are well founded.

References to arbitration are sometimes the means of saving expense, and are peculiarly adapted to the settlement of matters of account and mercantile transactions, which are difficult and almost impossible to be adjusted on a trial at law. 3 Bla. Com. 17. Courts of justice, and many of our law writers, have been full of praises on these domestic tribunals; but, unfortunately, persons who refer disputes to arbitration, are not generally so well satisfied with the decision of the arbitrators as they would have been with the decision of a court of justice. For, as arbitrators are frequently suspected of entering on the investigation with minds prejudiced in favour of an opposite party, (and there are not wanting instances of gross misconduct in arbitrators) and their decisions being unattended with the formal solemnity of judicial proceedings, the award is too often equally dissatisfactory to all the parties, which leads to endless litigation and expense. The office of an arbitrator between neighbours or friends, is not a desirable office, unless the parties interested are of well constituted minds. And considerable doubts are entertained whether the eulogia upon the domestic forum of arbitrators are well founded. 6 Ves. 818. This is certain, it is generally preferable to make the reference to a stranger, than to a friend or neighbour. [Minor criminal matters, which may also be the subject of an action, as an indictment for an assault, may be the subject of an arbitration, Baker v. Townsend, 7 Taunt. 422; 1 J. B. Moo. 120, S. contributed much to the ease of the subject, as is recited in the preamble of the following statute, 9 & 10 Wm. III. c. 15, intituled,

"An Act for determining Differences by Arbitration."

'Whereas it hath been found by experience, that references made by rule of court have contributed much to the ease of the subject in the determining of controversies, because the parties become thereby obliged to submit to the award of the arbitrators, under the penalty of imprisonment for their contempt in case they refuse submission:' Now, for promoting trade, and rendering the awards of arbitrators the more effectual in all cases, for the final determination of controversies referred to them by merchants and traders, or others, concerning matters of account or trade, or other matters; be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords spiritual and temporal, and Commons in Parliament assembled, and by authority of the same, that from and after the eleventh day of May, which shall be in the year of our Lord, one thousand six hundred ninety-eight, it shall and may be lawful for all merchants and traders, and others desiring to end any controversy, suit, or quarrel, controversies, suits, or quarrels, for which there is no other remedy but by personal action or suit in equity, by arbitration to agree that their submission of their suit to the award or umpirage of any person or persons should be made a rule of any of his Majesty's courts of record which the parties shall choose, and to insert such their agreement in their submission, or the condition of the bond or promise whereby they oblige themselves respectively to submit to the award or umpirage of any person or persons; which agreement being so made and inserted in their submission or promise, or condition of their respective bonds, shall or may, upon producing an affidavit thereof, made by the witnesses thereunto, or any one of them, in the court of which

And be it further enacted, by the authority aforesaid, that any arbitration or umpirage procured by corruption or undue means, shall be judged and esteemed void and of none effect, and accordingly be set aside by any court of law or equity, so as complaint of such corruption or undue practice be made in the court where the rule is made for submission to such arbitration or umpirage, before the last day of the next term after such arbitration or umpirage made and published to the parties; any thing in this act contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

An award may be set aside for corruption, on application on the last day of the next term after making the award; but the Court cannot set aside an award under the statute, on any ground but fraud or corruption.

But if there be any illegality or defect on the face of the award, the Court will not enforce it by attachment, but leave the party to his action; for the process of contempt is discretionary.

The statute does not apply to submissions by parol, by rule of court, or by order of nisi prius.

But even where the submission is by rule of court, it seems the courts of law will, in general, prescribe to themselves the period limited by the statute.

This act is held to be only declaratory of what the law was before, in cases where there was a cause depending. Lucas v. Wilson, 2 Burr. 701. By the second clause of the statute, an award may be set aside for the corruption of the arbitrators, if an application be made to the court for that purpose, on the last day of the next term after making the award. [See In re Burt, 5 B. & C. 668.] Upon this clause, the court cannot set aside an award made in pursuance of the statute, on any other ground but fraud or corruption in the arbitrators. Anderson v. Coxeter, 1 Str. 301. [See Auriol v. Smith, Turn. 121.] But though the court cannot set aside the award upon any other ground, yet if there be any illegality or defect on the face of it, the court will refuse to enforce the award by attachment, and will leave the party to an action on the bond, or on the award itself. Hutchins v. Hutchins, Andr. 297. For it is discretionary in the court, whether they will enforce the award by process of contempt, or not. Hales v. Taylor, 1 Str. 695. S. P. Pedley v. Goddard, 7 Durnf. & East, 73. It is held, that the statute does not give the courts authority to make a submission by parol, a rule of Court; Ansell v. Evans, 7 Durnf. & East, 1; ——— v. Mills, 17 Ves. 421; and therefore an award under a parol submission, can only be set aside for the misbehaviour of the arbitrators, by a bill in equity. Ante, 575. So it is held that the statute does not apply to submissions by rule of Court, or by order of nisi prius; therefore it has been held, that it is not necessary in such case, to apply to set aside the award within the time limited by the statute. Lucas v. Wilson, 2 Burr. 701. Synge v. Jervoise, 8 East, 465. Which three kinds of submission remain as at common law. But in Rogers v. Dallimore, 1 Marsh. Rep. 471, S. C. 6 Taunt. 111, the court of Common Pleas said, that the limitation of the act applied only to cases where an original authority was given by it: that, where a cause was referred to arbitration, the court still reserved a superintending authority over the award, and that it was discretionary with them to afford each of the said respective parties, of the day on which he intends to hold his first sitting on the said arbitration: AND that all costs and charges attending the said arbitration, shall be in the discretion of the said arbitrator, and shall be paid and satisfied pursuant to his award. AND LASTLY, that neither of the said parties shall bring any such statements to be taken into consideration. Arbitrator to give notice of his first sitting. Costs to be in the discretion of the arbitrator.

relief, even though the time limited by the Act of Parliament had elapsed. But, in the exercise of this discretion, the court declared that they should, in general, prescribe to themselves the same rule as the statute has prescribed to them in certain cases; and that, although under particular circumstances they might think proper to interfere, yet that they by no means intended to hold out to parties, that application to set aside awards, where the submission had not been entered into by bond, might be made at any distance of time. [See Thompson v. Jennings, 10 J. B. Moore, 110.] So where the submission to arbitration is made a rule of court, pursuant to the statute, though no motion can be made to set aside the award for extrinsic matter, that is, for fraud or corruption in the arbitrators, after the time limited by the act; or for objections appearing on the face of it, (see Lowndes v. Lowndes, 1 East, 276) yet an application for an attachment for not performing the award, may be resisted at any time for defects appearing on the face of the award itself. Pedley v. Goddard, 7 Durnf. and East, 78, where the case of Hutchins v. Hutchins, in Andr. 297. is recognised. [See Davis v. Getty, 1 Sim. & Stu. 411; but corruption in the arbitrator is not a ground for resisting an attachment, Brazier v. Bryant, 3 Bing. 167.] And in neither case, whether the submission be originally by rule of court, or by bond, and afterwards made such, will the court enter into the merits of the award, and examine into the reasonableness and justice of it; Lucas v. Wilson, 2 Burr. 701; [Anon. 1 Chit. 38.] unless it appears manifestly from the merits, that the arbitrators have acted dishonestly and corruptly. Thus, on a motion respecting an award of commissioners under an inclosure Act, the Court of King's Bench said: "We may punish upon this, if there be any corruption; or enforce its execution by mandamus: but we are not to interpret or set aside these awards, upon complaint of their obscurity," &c. Case on the Over-Kellet Inclosure Act, H. 38 Geo. III. K. B. 2 Tidd, 875, 7th ed. [See further as to setting aside awards, Vol. III. 117, 143.]

Where the submission is made a rule of court, an application for an attachment for not performing the award, may be resisted at any time, for defects appearing on the face of it.

Whether the submission be originally by rule of court or by bond, and afterwards made such, the court will not enter into the merits of the award, unless corruption appears.

Mr. Tidd says, "this statute being confined to courts of record, does not, it seems, extend to the court of Chancery." 2 Tidd's Prac. 853, 7th ed. But although the court of Chancery, in regard to its equitable jurisdiction, is not a court of record; yet, so far as concerns its common law jurisdiction, it is a court of record; 2 Madd. Chan. 2d ed. 712; and as such, submissions to arbitration under the statute, have been made rules of the court; and on those submissions, attachments have issued against the parties, for not performing the award. Webster v. Bishop, 2 Vern. 444. Spettigue v. Carpenter, 3 P. Wms. 362. Pownall v. King, 6 Ves. 10. See also Knox v. Simmonds, 3 Bro. C. C. 359. Independently of these cases, it is presumed, that the second section of the act removes every doubt on the subject. [The jurisdiction in the matters of an award referred under the statute of William, is altogether transferred to the court of which the submission is made a rule. Auriol v. Smith, Turn. 126. Ed.]

Where the reference is by covenant, a penalty seems prudent.

(d) When the reference is by mutual covenants or agreements, it seems generally prudent to have a nomine pœnæ. See the form, Vol. I. 225. [47, n. (h)] For then, if either of the parties should revoke the power of the arbitrators, the penalty would become forfeited, and the other party might take the benefit thereof. [Warburton v. Storr, 4 B. & C. 103.] But if there be only a covenant, he cannot by revoking the authority relieve himself from an action of covenant, for not performing the award. and two suits are also depending in his Majesty's Court of Exchequer, at Westminster, in one of which the said [A. B.] and [C. D.] are plaintiffs, and the said [E. Now for the putting an end to the said actions and suits, and for divers other considerations us thereunto moving, It is hereby mutually agreed by and between the said [E. F.], [A. B.], and [C. D], to refer all questions, disputes, and controversies, in any wise relating to, or touching, or concerning such dealings or transactions, as well between the said [E. F.] and the said [A. B.], as between the said [E. F.] and the said [A. B.] and [C. F.], as on the part and behalf of the said [A. B.], and also on the part and behalf of the said [A. B.] and [C. D.] And it is hereby expressly agreed, that notwithstanding the bond for thousand pounds, in the pleadings mentioned, the said arbitrators are to be at liberty to investigate the whole of the accounts, dealings, and transactions between the said parties, and to award a greater or less sum to be due from the said [A. B.] and [C. D.], or either of them, jointly or separately, to the said [E. F.], on the day of the date of the said bond,

Notwithstanding a bond for a specific amount, the arbitrators to be at liberty to investigate the accounts, and to award a greater or less sum;

An arbitrator should act indifferently, and not consider himself as the agent of the person appointing him.

(a) Where arbitrators are named, one by each party, they ought not to consider themselves as solely representing the persons by whom they were respectively nominated, and as the advocates of their cause, but as called upon to execute a joint trust; and they are bound to look with equal accuracy to the interests of each party. Caldwell, 51. Lord Thurlow has expressed himself in strong terms on this point. "It is not uncommon," says he, "for a person appointed arbitrator, to consider himself as agent for the person appointing him. How that is so common, I wonder; for it is against good faith. The bond says, he is an indifferent person; and he breaks a most solemn engagement in considering himself otherwise." Calcraft v. Roebuck, 1 Ves. jun. 226. 1 Saund. 327, b, where in debt on bond, conditioned for performance of an award in terms similar to the above form, the defendant (among other pleas) pleaded, that the arbitrators did make their award on the day limited in the condition, and that he on that day required them to deliver the award to him, but they neglected and refused so to do: and issue being joined thereon, it appeared in evidence that the arbitrators had made their award on the day, but, because it was not stamped, refused to deliver it to the defendant according to his request: and upon this evidence, the jury, under the direction of his lordship, who thought it an extremely hard case, found that the arbitrators had not complied with the condition of the bond, and gave a verdict for the defendant; and the plaintiff's counsel, being satisfied both of the law and fact, acquiesced. UMPIRE TO ASSIST.

(a) If it be to assist the arbitrators, say, "to assist us, in" &c. ut supra.

The better opinion seems to be, that if the umpire elected refuses, the arbitrators may elect another, toties quoties.

(b) This is prudent; for there is some doubt whether arbitrators, having named an umpire, who refuses to act, can afterwards appoint another. Thus it was adjudged in the Common Pleas, by three judges, against the opinion of Chief Justice Pollexfen, that where a submission was to two arbitrators, and if they make no award, then to the umpirage of such person as they should choose, and they chose one, who refused, and then they chose another, such nomination was a good one, for their power was not so determined by the election of the first umpire, that upon his refusal they could not appoint another; and the first nomination being void by his refusal, was the same thing as if they had never chosen an umpire at all. Trippet v. Eyre, 3 Lev. 263. S. C. 5 Mod. 457. 2 Vent. 113. 1 Show. 76. But in a subsequent case, it was said by Chief Justice Holt, that if arbitrators have authority to choose an umpire, and they choose one accordingly, they have executed their authority, and cannot make another election, though the umpire does not accept of the umpirage; but it is otherwise if they elect upon express condition that he does accept it; for then he is no umpire unless he accepts it: but Justice Rokesby doubted whether an express condition would make a difference, because the words "if the party elected will accept it," seem to be implied in the election. Reynolds v. Gray, 1 Salk. 70. 1 Ld. from the date hereof, by some writing under his hand, accept the umpirage (c). WITNESS our hands this day of , 18 .

CONSENT OF PARTIES.

(c) If the consent of the parties be requisite, add,

"And we the said [parties in difference], do hereby consent thereto."

The appointment of an umpire in writing, does not require a stamp, unless it be delivered as a deed.

(d) The appointment of an umpire made in writing upon paper unstamped is valid, because no statute requires a stamp for the appointment of an umpire. Routledge v. Thornton, 4 Taunt. 704. So if it be under hand and seal, it does not require a deed stamp, for it is not a deed unless it be delivered as a deed. Wilson v. Smee, addendum, Kyd on Awards. vii, 2d ed. Dodd v. Herbert, Sty. 459. Shep. Touchs. 57. Brown v. Vawser, 4 East, 584. But if it be under hand and seal and be delivered as a deed, then a deed stamp becomes requisite. The same doctrine extends to an appointment of an umpire by the parties. To prevent every doubt on this point, the nomination of an umpire is generally under hand only.

At what time the arbitrators may exercise the power of appointing an umpire; and within what time he may make his umpirage.

Arbitrators may, within the time limited for making their award, choose an umpire to make an umpirage, after the time for their award is determined. Jennings v. Vandeputt, Cro. Car. 263. Watson v. Clement, 1 Roll. Abr. 262, pl. 5. Wms. n. 2 Saund. 133, (7). In the case of Fyall v. Varier, 1 Roll. Abr. 261, pl. 3, it is held, that, if there be a submission to arbitrators, with this clause, "that if they do not end it within ten days, they shall nominate another that shall end it within ten days," and they do not agree within ten days, upon which they appoint another who makes an award within ten days, the umpirage is good; because it is the appointment of the parties, and their special agreement; and by making the umpire, the authority of the arbitrator determines.

If arbitrators chose an umpire, before the time allowed for their award was expired, it was formerly holden, that such nomination was ipso facto void, though they absolutely resolved not to make any award themselves. Reynolds v. Gray, 1 Salk. 70. S. C. 12 Mod. 120. 1 Ld. Raym. 222. It was also the opinion formerly, that the power of the arbitrators was not determined by the election of an umpire within the time limited to themselves, unless they absolutely refused to make any award; and even in that case, the umpirage made within the time was void: for though the arbitrators might choose an umpire at any time during the continuance of their power, yet the umpire could not act until the time for the arbitrators was expired; but the arbitrators might still have made an award. Donovan v. Mascal, 1 Lev. 302. S.C. Sir T. Raym. 205. 1 Mod. 274. But the law seems now to be otherwise. As where in debt on bond, with a condition to perform the award of A. and B., so as they made their award on or before the 29th of June, and if they made no award, then to perform the umpirage of him whom A. and B. should elect, &c. upon nul agard pleaded, the plaintiff replied, that A. and B. on the 29th of June, elected C. to be umpire, and that he had made his umpirage, &c. and assigned a breach, &c. And upon demurrer exception was taken, that A. and B. had all the 29th of June to make their award; but it was overruled; for per Holt, Chief Justice, If a submission be made to A. and B., so as they make their award before Midsummer, and if they do not agree, then to such umpire as they shall choose, so as he makes his umpirage before Midsummer, and an umpirage is made accordingly, it is good; because the arbitrators determined their power before by electing an umpire. And so it was resolved in the case of Traverse v. Twisleton, 1 Lev. 174. 2 Keb. 15. Lord Chief Justice Holt held, that if an umpire be named in the submission, he cannot make his umpirage before the time is expired which is given to the arbitrators to make their award. Mitchell v. Harris, 1 Ld. Raym. 671. S. C. 12 Mod. 512. 1 Salk. 71, 72. But that case appears to be now overruled, by Smailes v. Wright, 3 Maule & Selw. 559, where two persons submitted by bond to the arbitration of two others named as arbitrators, and a third as umpire, so as the award be made by the arbitrators on or before a certain day; but if the said arbitrators do not by the time aforesaid make their award, then the bond shall not be avoided, provided the umpire make his award on or before a subsequent day. The arbitrators made no award, having finally, before the day limited for making their award, disagreed, and declared that they did not intend to make any award; whereupon afterwards, and two days before the time of the arbitrators expired, the umpire made his umpirage. And upon a rule nisi, for setting aside the umpirage, upon the ground that the umpire had no authority to make it, until after the day limited to the arbitrators had expired, and the case of Mitchell v. Harris being cited in support of the objection, Lord Ellenborough said, if the arbitrators had chosen to resume their authority within the time, and had made their award, it might have been said that here was a conflict of authorities; but they renounced their power, and also announced that they never meant to resume it, and they kept their word. They might have had the full time if they had agreed; but are we to put such a construction upon this submission, as that if they finally disagreed before the time, the rest should be so much waste time? If they finally disagreed and determined their power, why should not the umpire proceed? It does not appear to me that any inconvenience could result from it, and it saved a waste of time. The thing has been done by an umpire of the parties' own choosing, and after a full renunciation of their power by the arbitrators. I therefore think, that what has been done, is within the authority originally intended to be given to the umpire; his umpirage was only defeasible, in the event of the arbitrators making their award within due time. Mr. Justice Le Blanc added, the submission gave the arbitrators so much time, provided they agreed and went on to make their award; but if they failed to make any award, then to the umpire. When, therefore, they finally disagreed, the umpire might proceed; still his umpirage might have become nugatory, if within the time the arbitrators had made their award. So where the submission was "so as the award be made by the arbitrators on or before the 21st of May, and if not made before that day, then to stand to the award of an umpire," &c. the arbitrators made no award, but chose an umpire on the 20th of May, who awarded, that the defendant should pay to the plaintiff 40*l.* before the 11th day of June following; it was objected, that they had no power to choose an umpire on the 20th of May, because the arbitrators themselves had power till the end of the 21st of May, to make their award: but the objection was disallowed; for the arbitrators not having made any award, the award of the umpire was good, and judgment for the plaintiff. Elliott v. Chevall, 1 Lutw. 541, 544. So where in debt upon bond, for the performance of the award of J. S. and J. N., so as they made it on or before the 1st day of July, and if not, then to the umpirage of J. D., so as he make it on or before the 2d day of July. The arbitrators made no award, but J. D. made his umpirage on the first day of July; and upon demurrer it was objected that it was made before the time allotted by the submission; because the arbitrators had the whole day, namely, the first day of July, to make their award, and this umpirage was made on the first day; and the case of Barnard v. King was cited: but it was adjudged that the umpirage was good, for the parties had expressly given to the umpire the first day for executing his authority; and the court did not think the reason of the resolution of the case cited to be of any force, namely, that the court would be in confusion to adjudge which should be good, in case the arbitrators and the umpire had made several awards; for the award of the arbitrators, if they had made any, would be adjudged good, but if they had not, then the umpirage should bind, and there would be no confusion upon concurrence of authority as to the time; for the umpire had not an absolute, but only a conditional concurrence, namely, if the arbitrators make no award within the time; and they thought the case in Roll. Abr. was not good law. Case v. Dare, Sir T. Jones, 167, 168. S. C. 2 Show. 164. So where there was a submission to two, and in case they disagreed, to the umpirage of a third person; so that the arbitrators made their award on or before a day certain, and the umpire, if they should differ, before a subsequent day: the umpire made his award before the time given to the arbitrators had expired; and it was held, that the umpirage need not state that the arbitrators had disagreed. Sprigens v. Nash, 5 Maule & Selw. 193. And in Roe v. Doe, 2 Durnf. & East, 644, 645, it was objected, that the two arbitrators, who had the power of naming an umpire, had named one before they had entered into the examination of the subject at all; but the court said that there was not any ground for the objection; for it rather seemed to be the fairest way of choosing an umpire. And they said that it had been solemnly determined in that Court about thirty years before, that arbitrators might elect an umpire the instant they began to take the matter into consideration. See also Cowell v. Waller, 2 Barnard. K. B. 154. [And see In re Hick, 8 Taunt. 605.] And it seems to be now settled, that arbitrators cannot proceed on a reference, after they have once named an umpire, for then their authority ceases, though the time for making the award is not expired. Danes v. Monsey, Rep. Prac. C. B. 116. 3 Vin. Abr. 97, Arbitrament, pl. 18. S. C. Hence it seems to follow, that the umpire may make his umpirage before the time which is allowed the arbitrators to make their award is expired, notwithstanding what is said by Lord Holt in the before cited case of Mitchell v. Harris, 1 Ld. Raym. 671.

APPOINTMENT OF UMPIRE.

Arbitrators having the power to name an umpire, may appoint one before they commence the examination of the subject.

When the arbitrators have named an umpire, their authority ceases.

Where the submission was, "so that the two arbitrators should make their award before or on the 21st day of June; but if no award should be made before or on that day, then that the parties should observe the award of an umpire to be chosen by the arbitrators, so as such umpirage should be made before the 28th of June." The arbitrators met, and did not make their award, nor choose an umpire, chosen by the arbitrators, the time for the arbitrators to appoint an umpire commences when the time for their making their award expires.

before or on the 21st of June; but they appointed an umpire before the 28th of June, and the umpire, before the 28th of June, made his award. It was contended, that the umpire was not chosen in due time; that the arbitrators on the 21st of June were functi officio, and could not afterwards appoint an effective umpire; or if they could, they could only do it instantly at the expiration of that day, and not at any indefinite time between that day and the 28th. But the Court said, "before, or upon the 21st day of June; until the last moment of that day, the arbitrators have power to agree in award; if they do not in the course of that day agree in award, then they have power to appoint an umpire; but until they fail to make their award on the 21st day of June, the power to appoint an umpire does not begin. Beck v. Sargent, 4 Taunt. 232. This case seems to be founded entirely on the peculiar wording of the submission, and does not appear to impugn the previous cases, in which it has been held that the arbitrators may appoint an umpire, either before or after they commence the examination of the subject.

The arbitrators joining with the umpire in making his award, does not invalidate it.

If the arbitrators report the evidence to the umpire, and he does not examine the witnesses, yet his award is good, unless he was required to examine them. It is the same if an arbitrator makes his award without examining the witnesses on oath.

So where arbitrators, having chosen an umpire according to their power, afterwards joined with him in making his award, it was held notwithstanding to be a good one; for in law it is the umpirage of the umpire only, who was at liberty to take what advice, or opinion, or assistance he pleased. Soulsby v. Hodgson, 3 Burr. 1474. S. C. 1 Wm. Black. Rep. 463; it is no more than if mere strangers had joined in the award, which could not vitiate. Beck v. Sargent, 4 Taunt. 232. And if the arbitrators hear all the evidence, and afterwards disagree, and state the evidence to the umpire, on which he makes his award without re-examining the witnesses, it is good, unless he is required to examine them before he makes his award. Hall v. Lawrence, 4 Durnf. & East, 589. So if an arbitrator makes his award without examining the witnesses on oath, that is no objection to the validity of the award, unless it be made at the time of their examination. Ridout v. Pye, 1 Bos. & Pull. 91. [See Vol. III. 3, 118.]

[Where the umpire was determined by drawing lots which arbitrator should have the nomination, the award was set aside, although the parties had attended upon the umpire so appointed, Wells v. Cooke, 2 B. & A. 218. And see Young v. Miller, 3 B. & C. 407, and Caldwell, 43, 2d ed. Although there is no power to name an umpire, and one is appointed, if the parties submit to be examined by him, they cannot afterwards object. Matson v. Trower, 1 Ry. and Moo. 17. And see Pearman v. Cotter, 2 Chitt. Rep. 29. An umpire cannot be appointed, on a general power, to decide a particular point, but either the arbitrators or the umpire must decide the whole. Tollit v. Saunders, 9 Pri. 612. Ed.]

APPOINTMENT OF A JOINT ARBITRATOR.

APPOINTMENT of a JOINT ARBITRATOR, by Two Arbitrators named in the Submission, under a Power authorising them to appoint a Third.

WE [arbitrators], the arbitrators within named by this memorandum in writing, under our hands, made before entering upon the within-mentioned arbitration, do hereby nominate and appoint [third arbitrator] of, &c., the third arbitrator, to whom, together with ourselves, the within-mentioned matters in difference between the parties within named, shall be referred, according to the tenor and effect of the within rule (or within-written bond, (or obligation, (or indenture (a)). IN WITNESS whereof we have hereunto set our hands this day of , 18 .

Common obligation from one to one.

Reference to different forms of obligations.

(a) If the obligation be from one to two, jointly and severally, vide post, 598; if from one to two, as tenants in common, Vol. I. 484; if from one to two or more, as joint tenants, Vol. I. 515; if jointly and severally from two to one, Vol. I. 480; from three to one, Vol. I. 502; from five to one, post, 605: some of which forms may be necessary under peculiar circumstances, such as references by partners among themselves, or with others. Thus, where six partners entered into two bonds of submission to arbitration; in one of the bonds, three gave a joint and several bond to the other three, conditioned for the due performance of the award; and the latter gave a similar bond to the three former: the arbitrator awarded that one of three former should pay a certain sum to one of his co-obligors. In an action of debt on the award, brought by the one against the other alone, it was held (Justice Richardson dissentiente), that he might recover the sum awarded Winter v. White, 3 Moore, 674. 1 Brod. & Bing. 350. S. C.

On a submission, six partners give cross joint and several bonds, three to three, an award that one should pay to his co-obligor, is good.

BOND, ONE TO ONE.

A general condition of a common arbitration bond.

THE CONDITION of the above-written bond or obligation is such, That if the above bounden [obligor], his heirs, executors, and administrators, on his and their part and behalf, should in all things well and truly stand to, obey, abide by, perform, fulfil, and keep the award, order, arbitrament, judgment, and final determination of [two arbitrators] of, &c. Now the Condition of the above written bond or obligation is such, That if the above bounden [obligor], his heirs, executors, and administrators should (b), on his and their part and behalf, in all things well and truly obey, abide by, observe, perform, fulfil, and keep the award, order, arbitrament, final end, and determination of them the said [three arbitrators], arbitrators indifferently named, elected, and chosen, as well on the part and behalf of the said [obligor] as of the said [obligee] and [other obligee], to arbitrate, award, order, judge, and determine of and concerning all and all manner of action and actions, cause and causes of action, quarrels, controversies, trespasses, damages, and demands whatsoever, at any time or times heretofore had, made, moved, brought, commenced, sued, prosecuted, done, suffered, committed, or depending, by or between the said [obligor] and [obligee] and [other obligee], or any or either of them, or of such two of the said arbitrators as shall consent to accept and take upon

Condition of arbitration bond, to abide by award of three arbitrators, or any two of them:

(b) Instead of the word "should," the words "shall and do" are generally used in the condition of a bond, and in other legal instruments, where the thing to be done is spoken of under a condition or supposition. But that mode of expression is not grammatically correct; for it is a general rule, that when something contingent or doubtful is implied, the subjunctive mood ought to be used. Therefore, as "if," "unless," "provided," &c. govern the subjunctive mood, and as it is not an invariable practice to use the words "shall and do," instead of "should," the precedents have been generally altered, by substituting "should" for "shall and do." It is not of the least importance which form of expression is used in a deed, excepting so far as regards grammatical propriety. But the strict attention which is now observed in relation to the rules and elegancies of our language, would render a deviation from the rule wholly inexcusable in ordinary compositions. See Bishop Lowth's Grammar, 44, 47, ed. 1767; and Murray's Grammar, 19th rule of Syntax.

Where the thing to be done is spoken of under a condition, the word "should" ought to be used, and not "shall and do."

Thus in a modern case, there being disputes between A. and B. who had been in succession tenants of a farm, and C. the in-coming tenant, respecting the repairs, &c. by an agreement in writing between A. of the first part, B. of the second part, and C. of the third part, the said parties jointly and severally agreed to refer all matters in dispute between them, or any or either of them, to arbitration; and A. and B. thereby for themselves, their executors, &c. jointly and severally undertook, promised, and agreed to and with C. that they and their and each of their executors, &c. would, on his and their respective parts, abide by, perform, and keep the award; and C. undertook and promised to and with A. and B. jointly and severally, and their respective executors and administrators, to perform the award on his part. pay a certain sum to C.; and notwithstanding the arbitrator awarded nothing to be done by A. and B. jointly, yet it was held that they were jointly responsible for the sum awarded to be paid by each. Lord Kenyon, in delivering the judgment of the Court, said, "This is rather a hard case on these two tenants: perhaps if it had been stated to them at the time of the agreement, that each was to become answerable for the other, they would have hesitated before they signed the agreement: but the words of the agreement are too strong to be got over. It was reasonable that each should make satisfaction for the time he occupied; but by the terms of this agreement they have promised jointly and severally, which makes them responsible the one for the other." Mansell v. Burridge, 7 Durnf. and East, 352. This doctrine of joint responsibility has been carried to a greater extent in a more ancient case. For where there was a controversy between A. the heir at law of a testator, and B. and C. his devisees, concerning certain lands devised to them; and by a deed between A. of the one part, and B. and C. of the other part, they submitted to the award of an arbitrator, and thereupon A. bound himself in an obligation of 1000*l.* to B. and C. with a condition to perform the award of the arbitrator touching the controversy; and B. and C., because they would not be bound the one for the other, entered into several obligations of 1000*l.* each to A., with several conditions for the performance of the award of the arbitrator; and he awarded that A. should make a release of all his right in the land to B. and C., and that in consideration thereof, B. and C. should pay 300*l.* to A. In an action of debt by A. against B. upon his obligation for non-performance of the award, the breach assigned was, that neither B. nor C. paid the 300*l.* at the time appointed, according to the award; and all the above mentioned matters were disclosed by the pleadings. It was argued for the defendant B. that the arbitrament was void; for the defendant's bond was for a reference of all controversies between A. and B., and C. was not mentioned in the bond; and the award was between A., B., and C., and that B. and C. should pay such a sum; and the breach was alleged therein; and for any thing that appeared in the bond and condition, C. was a stranger to the submission, unless by this collateral surmise, which surmise was not allowable; also that this surmise was quasi a departure from the declaration. But on a demurrer, after divers arguments at the bar, the Court resolved, that forasmuch as this is not a bare surmise, but grounded upon a deed, which is of as high a nature as the bond, and made at the same time, it is quasi but one submission by several bonds, and so the surmise is allowable, and stands well with the bond in question. And although B. and C. did not join in one bond of submission, because they would not be bound one for the other, yet when at the same time they entered into several bonds to perform the award, it is but as one submission, and is not any departure from the declaration. For it is not fitting that the declaration (which is but for the debt upon the bond of B.) should mention any such submission; but it suffices to shew it by the replication to maintain this arbitrament. For upon all the matter being shewn, it appears that C. is no stranger to the award, for he and B. submitted themselves jointly; and though they entered into several obligations, yet this did not make C. any stranger to the award. And therefore all the Court adjudged, that the award was good, the replication being good enough to maintain the arbitrament, notwithstanding this objection. Hayes v. Hayes, Cro. Car. 433. S. C. Haies v. Haies, 1 Roll. Abr. 247, pl. 9. 3 Vin. Abr. 54. Mr. Kyd says, "but in such a case, if the award had been several, certainly the one could not have been sued for nonperformance on the part of the other." Kyd on awards, 45, 2d ed. Yet it seems, that in consequence of the submission by deed, each would, in case of a several award, have been liable for the other. For where three entered into an obligation to perform an award, concerning disputes between them and another, and the arbitrator awarded that each of the three should pay the other twenty shilling a-piece, it was held that each was answerable for all the payments; and that a tender of twenty shillings by one, was not a performance of the award on his part. Genne v. Tinker, 3 Lev. 24.

and it seems, each would have been liable for the whole, if the award had been several.

a compensation may be recovered by him who actually performs the award, from such of his co-obligors as neglect their share of the duty imposed by the award. Thus where arbitrators directed that each of two parties on the same side should pay a moiety of the costs of the arbitration, and of making the submission a rule of court; and one party, in order to get the award out of the hands of the arbitrators, paid the whole; it was held, that he might have an attachment against the other to compel repayment of the moiety. Hicks v. Richardson, 1 Bos. and Pull. 93. And see Stokes v. Lewis, 2 Smith, 12. An action would have been maintainable, if the party had preferred that mode of proceeding. [Barnwell v. Minot, 4 J. B. (b) Either the above or the following form may be used, as they will both have the same effect; but as this form appears more definite, some gentleman may prefer it:

Full form of obligation from five to one jointly, and any four, three, or two of them jointly, and each of them separately.

"We bind ourselves, our heirs, executors, and administrators jointly; and any four of us, separately and apart from the other of us, bind ourselves, our heirs, executors, and administrators jointly; and any three of us, separately and apart from the others and other of us, bind ourselves, our heirs, executors, and administrators jointly; and any two of us, separately and apart from the others and other of us, bind ourselves, our heirs, executors, and administrators jointly; and each of us separately and apart from the others and other of us, bindeth himself and herself, his and her heirs, executors, and administrators, severally, firmly," &c. ut supra.

Without a severance of a joint and several bond, the obligee cannot sue two or more during the life of the others. The power to sue jointly any number of the obligors, is desirable on an arbitration, as it saves expenses;

Unless there be such a severance or division of a joint and several obligation as in either of the above forms, the obligee cannot sue any four, three, or two of the obligors in the lifetime of the other or others of them, but he must sue them all, or each of them separately. Vide Vol. I. 311, (a); 502, (a); and 1 Chitty on Pleading, 33, 3d ed. The power to sue jointly any number of the obligors in an arbitration bond, is peculiarly desirable; for if some of them should be willing to perform the award, unnecessary expenses would be incurred by an action against all of them, or by several separate actions against such of them as refused.

The remedy under the bond or covenant, independently of the proceedings by attachment, is of considerable importance. For although nonperformance of an award, under a submission of the parties made a rule of court, is a contempt of the court, and obedience to it may be enforced by attachment; yet this interference on the part of the court, is not of course; it is held to be discretionary, whether or not the court will so interfere, since the plaintiff has still another remedy, by action. Hales v. Taylor, Str. 695. Veale v. Warner, 1 Saund. 326. Burton v. Petrie, cited 2 Ves. jun. 453; [Edgell v. Dallimore, 3 Bing. 634. Dickins v. Jarvis, 5 B. & C. 528;] ante, 578. & C. 264. An attachment for nonperformance of an award, will issue although the party is out of the jurisdiction. Hopcraft v. Fermor, 1 Bing. 378. Ed.]

Pending an action by the plaintiff, he cannot proceed by attachment, nor waive his action to proceed by attachment;

Upon a submission being made a rule of court, it was formerly holden, that the party might proceed both by action and attachment at the same time; Clarke v. Elwick, 10 Mod. 333; Anon. Salk. 73; but a different doctrine has since been laid down. Stock v. De Smith, Cas. Temp. Hardw. 106. Anon. Andr. 299. And accordingly, in a late case, the Court of Common Pleas would not grant an attachment for nonperformance of an award, pending an action brought upon it; nor would allow the plaintiff to waive the action, in order to apply for an attachment. Badley v. Loveday, 1 Bos. and Pull. 81. 2 Tidd's Prac. 865, 7th ed. For the party has made his election; and he can have no better remedy upon the attachment than by action. But where the attachment is first resorted to, it does not debar the party from bringing an action, the greater and more beneficial remedy. Paterson v. Gross, 2 Barnard. 227. The two remedies in these cases have but one (d) As the parties agree, post, 621, that the arbitrators may enlarge the time for making their award, in this place the following addition seems requisite, in order that the nonperformance of an award made during the extended period, may be a breach of the condition. Brown v. Goodman, 3 Durnf. & East, 592; et vide post, ENLARGEMENT OF TIME BY THE PARTIES, note (a), [631]. For, although agreements are contained in the condition of the bond, yet it seems they are so far independent of it, that a nonperformance of any of them would be no breach of the condition, but merely subject the party to an attachment on the rule of court, or to an action on the agreement. See Evans v. Thomson, 5 East, 193. [Greig v. Talbot, 2 B. & C. 179, and 3 Dow. and Ry. 446,] et post, ubi supra, note (b), [631].

Where the arbitrators have power under an agreement in the bond to enlarge the time for making their award, it seems requisite that performance of an award to be made during the extended period should form part of the condition.

(f) In Harrison v. Grundy, 2 Str. 1178, it was held, that a consent in the submission bond, to make the award a rule of court, instead of the submission, would not warrant the interposition of the court, under the statute 9 & 10 Wm. However, in Pedley v. Westmacot, 3 East, 603, where Harrison v. Grundy was cited, and it was objected to the court's entertaining jurisdiction, because the consent in the submission bond was to make the award a rule of court, instead of the submission to the award, which, it was said, was not within the words of the statute; the Court referred to the case of Powell v. Phillips, E. 30 Geo. objection in Pedley v. Westmacot was overruled. So if a bond of submission to arbitration between the trustee of a wife, and her husband, recite that a suit for a separation has been instituted between the husband and wife in the Commons; and that in order to put an end to any contest about the terms of separation, it had been agreed that all matters should be referred to J. (a) When a cause is referred at the trial, it is usual to get the witnesses sworn before they leave the court, and under that oath they go before the arbitrators; 6 Ves. 820; otherwise (if required) they must be sworn before a judge. The order of nisi prius being obtained from the clerk of nisi prius, or associate in London or Middlesex, or from the associate at the assizes, the arbitrators will make an appointment in writing, of a time and place for the parties and their witnesses to attend him; which appointment should be subscribed to a copy of the order of nisi prius, and served therewith on the defendant's attorney. Previous to the meeting, the arbitrators should be furnished with a state of the case, and the names of the witnesses, &c. A similar mode of proceeding is to be observed, where the reference is by agreement without suit. 2 Tidd's Prac. 857, 7th ed.

Practice as to swearing the witnesses, when a cause is referred at the trial. Preliminaries to the arbitration.

Lord Hardwicke was of opinion, that the persons interested might, by an agreement in writing, give to the arbitrators a power to examine the parties as well as the witnesses, on oath, excepting in cases of frauds, impositions, and concealments. Wellington v. Mackintosh, 2 Atk. 570. But in Halfride v. Fenning, 2 Bro. C. C. 337, Lord Kenyon said, Lord Hardwicke's opinion must be misreported, as the parties could not give the arbitrators such a power. And in Street v. Rigby, after referring to Lord Hardwicke's opinion, Lord Eldon held, that arbitrators have not power to administer an oath, unless received under the authority of the court; and "the court, if it is not part of the agreement, cannot give them authority to examine upon oath; and the agreement itself cannot authorise any person to administer an oath." Therefore a difficulty arises from the want of the conscience of the witness. 6 Ves. 821, 820, 818.

Practice as to swearing witnesses on references by agreement.

On submissions to arbitration by bond or deed, when the arbitrator is to hold his sitting in London or the neighbourhood, the parties (if they are to be examined) and their witnesses, are generally sworn before a Judge, or a Master in Chancery. On such a reference to arbitration in the country, where it is thought requisite to have the evidence on oath, if either of the solicitors is a Master Extraordinary in Chancery, or a Commissioner authorised to take affidavits by the statute 29 Car. II. c. 5, he swears the parties and witnesses separately before the arbitrators; but where that is not the case, they are sworn at the house of such a person. But on references to arbitration, by the agreement of the parties, as the oath is not administered in a judicial proceeding, a witness may, in foro conscientiæ, incur the guilt, and at the same time evade the temporal penalties of perjury. See 3 Inst. 164—5. 4 Bla. Com. 137.

But such oaths are extra judicial.

[Where the order of submission gives power to examine the parties, the arbitrator is at liberty to examine a party in support of his own case. Warne v. Bryant, 3 B. & C. 590. Ed.]

relative to the construction of the said articles, or to all or any of the matters or things therein contained, the same should be referred to the arbitration of two indifferent persons, one to be named by each of the parties, with power for such arbitrators to appoint an umpire in case of their disagreement: And that the award of the said arbitrators or umpire should be final and conclusive. AND WHEREAS disputes have arisen between the said parties relating to their co-partnership, (and also relating to several other matters and things) and they have in pursuance of the said covenant (*), agreed to refer the same" &c. (referenee to two, with power to nominate a third to join with them, or an umpire, ut ante, 602, 598.)

Recital that disputes have arisen.

* A court of equity will not decree a specific performance of a covenant or agreement in articles of copartnership, &c. to nominate arbitrators to settle disputes; nor, unless there be a reference depending, or made and determined, will such a covenant or agreement oust the courts of law or equity of their jurisdiction; and therefore it cannot be pleaded in bar to an action at law; Kill v. Hollister, 1 Wils. 129; Thompson v. Charnock, 8 Durnf. & East, 140; nor is such a plea any bar to a bill for discovery and relief in equity. Street v. Rigby, 6 Ves. 818. Mitchell v. Harris, 2 Ves. jun. 132. S. C. 4 Bro. C. C. 311. [Agar v. Macklew, 2 Sim. & Stu. 418]. At law, it seems, no action can be maintained for refusing to perform such an agreement; Tattersall v. Groote, 2 Bos. and Pull. 135; at least, only nominal damages can be recovered. 6 Ves. 818—9. The prudential way of drawing such articles is to have an agreement for liquidated damages, in order to enforce a specific performance. But, it seems, if the party enforces his legal remedy by such a stipulated security, he would not also have a remedy in equity.

Equity will not enforce a specific performance of a covenant to nominate arbitrators; nor, unless there has been a reference, will it oust the jurisdiction of a court of law or equity: at law only nominal damages can be recovered. The proper method is to fix the stipulated damages in the agreement, and either to sue for them, or file a bill for a discovery and relief.

(a) If the arbitrators cannot make their award within the time limited by the rule of court, or order of nisi prius, a rule may be obtained, by consent, for enlarging it; or where the submission is by agreement without suit, the time may be enlarged by consent of the parties. 2 Tidd's Prac. 858, 7th ed. When it is supposed that the application for the rule will not be resisted by the other party, it is sufficient to give him notice of the intended motion, and then to move the court upon an affidavit of such notice; though it is usual that there should be a consent signed by the counsel for the opposite party. When it is apprehended that the application will be opposed, the party wishing to enlarge the time should come prepared with an affidavit, stating the circumstances of the case, and move for a rule upon the other party, calling on him to shew cause why such enlargement should not take place. Caldwell on Arbitration, 49. But before this rule can be obtained, a motion must be made for making the order of nisi prius, or agreement, a rule of court. 2 Tidd's Prac. 859, 7th ed. Where the arbitrators, under a submission by bond or deed, require an extended time for making their award, and they have no power by the submission to enlarge the time themselves, and some of the parties will not consent to an enlargement, the best mode of proceeding seems to be, to make the submission a rule of court; vide ante, 571; and then, on shewing sufficient reasons for it, the court will enlarge the time. See the recital of such an enlargement, post, second precedent, title Award. [Vol. III. 7.]

FURTHER ENLARGEMENT.

(b) If it be the case, say, "further enlarge,"

If a judge's approbation be requisite, and the arbitrator enlarges previous to the time limited, the judge's subsequent assent is sufficient:

but it is otherwise if the arbitrator enlarges after the time limited.

Where a cause was referred under a judge's order, with a proviso that the arbitrator should make his award on or before a day certain; but if he should not be then prepared that the time should be enlarged from time to time as he might require, and a judge of the court might think reasonable and just; the court of King's Bench held, that the time for making the award was duly enlarged, by the arbitrator indorsing on the order, on the day preceding the expiration of the original time, that he required further time; although the judge's order granting such further time, was not obtained until a day subsequent. Reid v. Fryatt, 1 Maule and Selw. 1. But where, in a similar case, the indorsement was dated on a day subsequent to the expiration of the time originally given for making the award, that court discharged a rule nisi for an attachment, for non-performance of the award. Good v. Wilks, H. 56 Geo. III. K. B. 2 Tidd's Prac. 859, 7th ed. [See further as to Enlargements of Awards, ante, 619; Vol. III. 17, 125.]

"Until," is for this purpose inclusive.

(c) When the time is enlarged "until" a particular day, the word "until" is for this purpose inclusive; and the award may be made on that day. Knox v. Simmonds, 3 Bro. C. C. 358. For the word "until" may be construed either exclusive or inclusive of the day to which it is applied, according to the context and subject-matter. The King v. Stevens, 5 East, 244.

(d) If the time fixed be not the ultimate extended period limited by the submission, the remainder of the above form had better be omitted.

If an arbitrator has power to enlarge the time for making his award to any other day, the Court will expound it to mean to any other days.

For where the ita quod was, that the arbitrator should make his award before the 10th of November, or any other day to which he should enlarge it, he had first enlarged the time, and then after the 10th of November, and before the expiration of the period for which it stood enlarged, had enlarged it again, and had not made his award until after the day to which the time was first enlarged; the Court decided, as they had before done in Payne v. Deacle, 1 Taunt. 509, that this was no excess of the arbitrator's power. Barrett v. Parry, 4 Taunt. 657. [Where the order of reference gave the arbitrator express power to make his award after the death of any of the parties, and also of enlarging the time, it was held that the subsequent death of any party did not destroy the latter power. Tyler v. Jones, 3 B. & C. 144. Clarke v. Crofts, 4 Bing. 143. Macdougal v. Robertson, 1 Moo. & Payne, 147. referred to us, shall be made and published. WITNESS (e), &c. ut ante, 593.

ENLARGEMENT OF TIME BY ARBITRATORS.

An enlargement of the time for making an award signed before the expiration of the submission, does not require a stamp, unless it be delivered as a deed :

(e) As it has been held by Lord Kenyon at nisi prius, that a subsequent memorandum indorsed on a deed, altering some of the terms of it, does not require to be stamped, Herne v. Hale, 3 Esp. Rep. 237, (see also Robinson v. Macdonnell, 5 Maule and Selw. 234), and as the appointment of an umpire in writing, although under hand and seal, does not require a stamp, unless it be delivered as a deed, ante, 588, (d), it therefore seems to follow, as a necessary consequence, that an enlargement of the time for making an award, if under hand only, or if under hand and seal, if it be not delivered as a deed, does not require a stamp, whether the enlargement be made by the arbitrators or umpire, or by the parties in difference ; provided such enlargement by the arbitrators be made in pursuance of a power contained in the original submission, or subsequently given by the parties before the expiration of the arbitrators' authority ; and provided such enlargement by the parties be made before the arbitrators' authority under the original submission or under an enlargement, ceases by lapse of time. See Evans v. Thompson, 5 East, 192, post, 636, (c), where the authority of the arbitators and umpire was kept alive only by unstamped indorsements, until the last indorsement, which had an agreement stamp ; but Lord Ellenborough treated all the agreements as being valid, although he looked on the stamped agreement as being to a certain extent dependant on the unstamped agreements, and not as a distinct agreement reviving an authority which had ceased ; for the authority must have ceased, if it had been requisite that the prior enlargement should have been stamped. Where a general reference is made, and the time is enlarged by the parties, it seems impossible to contend successfully, that an agreement stamp is necesary, because it is not certain that " the matter thereof shall be of the value of twenty pounds, or upwards ;" in which case only an agreement stamp is requisite for any purpose. See the 55 Geo. III. c. 184, Sched. part I, title AGREEMENT.

But if the arbitrators have become functi officio, a stamp is requisite to revive their authority.

If the authority of the arbitrators or umpire has actually determined, it seems clear that it cannot be revived without a new agreement, deed, or bond, properly stamped and executed, and incorporating by reference all the terms of the original submission. See Evans v. Thompson, 5 East, 193, post, 636. Good v. Wilks, ante, 632, (b). [And Attwood v. Small, 7 B. & C. 390.]

Where there is any doubt, a stamp should be used.

Wherever there is the least doubt, it seems prudent to have the instrument properly stamped before it is executed, in order to avoid paying the penalty, in case a stamp should be requisite before the instrument can be received in evidence. Vide ante, 366 ; Robinson v. Macdonnell, 5 Maule and Selw. 234.

Dernier ressort, parol submission.

But for some purposes the submission may be supported as a parol submission. Vide ante, 575, 578 ; post, 635, (b), ad finem.

(a) Vide post, 637, (d).

(b) In order to make the parties liable to an action on their bonds to recover the penalty for non-performance of an award made during the enlarged period, there should either be such an addition as the following, or the parties should execute new bonds; for otherwise they will only be liable to an attachment for non-performance of the award. Vide ante, 609, 619, (d).

To make the parties liable to the penalty of their bonds for the enlarged period, the penalty should also be extended, or there should be new bonds.

EXTENSION OF PENALTY TO ENLARGED PERIOD.

"AND we do hereby respectively for ourselves, and for our respective heirs, executors, and administrators, consent and agree, that the penalties mentioned in the several bonds entered into by us touching the matters in difference, shall be extended to, and shall or may be recoverable against such of us the said parties respectively, and our respective heirs, executors, and administrators, as shall neglect or refuse to abide by and perform the award which shall be made by the said arbitrators, touching the matters in difference, during the enlarged time hereby given for making the same award, as fully and effectually in all respects, as if the said enlarged time had been mentioned in the conditions of the said several bonds, instead of the time thereby limited."

hereby consent and agree (c), that if it should be requisite, these presents, as well as the within written bond or obligation (or indenture), and the submission thereby and hereby made of the matters in controversy, shall be made a rule of his Majesty's Court of King's Bench, at mission shall be made a rule of court.

Thus in Brown v. Goodman, 2 Durnf. and East, 592, n. in debt on Bond. The bond was a common arbitration bond, in which the time was limited for the arbitrator to make his award. The declaration stated that the time was afterwards, by the mutual consent of both parties, enlarged, within which enlarged time the arbitrator made his award, and it then stated the breach, &c.: to this there was a demurrer. After argument at the bar, Lord Kenyon, Ch. J. said, that the question was not then to be discussed, whether the party had not some remedy, but whether his remedy lay on the bond: to determine which the court must look to the bond; and there it appeared that the defendant had bound himself to abide by an award under a penalty, if made within a given time: but that could never extend the penalty to an award made after that time under a new agreement. To which the other judges assenting, judgment was given for the defendant.

Where by the agreement of the parties only the time is enlarged for making the award, the penalty of the bond is not extended to an award made under the new agreement.

The plaintiff should have proceeded by action of debt or assumpsit, on the submission implied in the agreement, to enlarge the time, 2 Tidd's Prac. 865, 7th ed.

(c) The part in crotchets was formerly introduced in consequence of the decision in Jenkins v. Law, 8 Durnf. and East, 87; it is now perfectly useless; but it can do no harm. In that case, the parties having entered into arbitration bonds, with the usual agreement that the submission should be made a rule of court, it was accordingly made a rule of court. Afterwards the parties, by an indorsement on the bond, and signed by both of them, agreed that the time for making the award should be enlarged: but it was not added, as a part of this agreement, that the indorsement should be made a rule of court. The arbitrator made his award within the enlarged time. A rule having been obtained, calling on the defendant to shew cause why an attachment should not issue against him for not performing the award, Garrow, who now shewed cause, objected, that there being no agreement to make the consent for enlarging the time for making the award a rule of court, no attachment could issue as for a contempt of the court. Bayley, in support of the rule, admitting that this objection was fatal, the Court discharged the rule. The report does not state whether the agreement was stamped. But in a later case, where the parties, by their respective bonds of submission, dated 20th of August 1803, bound

Where it is agreed that an arbitration shall be made a rule of court, and the parties, by an indorsement, enlarge the time for making the award, the indorsement virtually includes all the terms of the original submission, and amongst others, that the submission for such enlarged time shall be made a rule of court; and consequently, the party is liable to an attachment for non-themselves to submit certain matters in difference to the arbitration of A. and B.; and if they did not make their award on or before the 21st of September then next, then to the umpirage of C. so as he made his umpirage on or before the 24th of September, 1803. By a memorandum on the bonds, dated 21st September, it was thereby agreed between the parties, that the time for the arbitrators making their award should be extended from that day unto the 24th of September aforesaid, and for making the umpirage to the first of October: and by another indorsement on the bonds, signed by the parties on the 28th of September, the time for making the umpirage was further extended to the 6th of October, which indorsement was stamped with an agreement stamp. An umpirage was made on the 5th of October. In the bonds of submission it was provided, that the bonds and submission thereby made, should be made a rule of Court, pursuant to the statute, if either of the parties should require the same, and the Court should so please. But when the time for making the award was agreed to be enlarged by the endorsement on the bonds before-mentioned, it was not added, that that should be made a rule of court; but the agreement to enlarge was made a rule of Court. A rule was obtained on the authority of Jenkins v. Law, and it was objected on the part of the defendant, that an agreement to enlarge the time for making an award must contain a new consent that it shall be made a rule of Court, otherwise no award made within such enlarged time can be enforced by attachment. Lord Ellenborough said, it was a case of considerable consequence, affecting the practice of all the Courts upon the construction of a very beneficial act of parliament; and therefore, before the Court gave their final opinion they would consult with the other judges: though, as at present advised, it appeared to him that the memoranda endorsed on the submission-bond for enlarging the time did, by necessary construction, virtually incorporate all the conditions in the bond to which they had reference. That they must be taken to do so to a certain extent was apparent; for in themselves the memoranda did not even specify the names of the arbitrators or umpire, nor the subject matter of the reference; and if any part were adopted, he could not see what line could be drawn, and why the whole must not be adopted. Curia advisare vult. In delivering the judgment of the Court on a subsequent day, and after referring to Jenkins v. Law, his Lordship said, "Upon considering that case, in which the objection appears to have been given way to without any argument on the part of the counsel who had obtained the rule for an attachment, and on which account the matter was probably not brought under the immediate view and attention of the Court; and upon conferring, with a view to an uniformity of practice on this subject, with most of the judges of the other courts of Westminster Hall, we are of opinion, that the case referred to cannot be supported; and that the agreement to enlarge the time for making the award, must be understood as by reference, virtually incorporating in itself all the antecedent agreements between the parties relative to that subject, as if the same had been formally set forth and repeated therein, and of course incorporating, amongst the rest, the agreement contained in the condition of the bond, that the submission to arbitration should be made a rule of court; and that, with reference to the enlarged time, instead of the time originally specified in the condition of the bond." Rule discharged, and rule for attachment, absolute. Evans v. Thompson, 5 East, 193.

(d) Vide ante, 634, (b). It seems that the heirs of the parties cannot be bound by an award made during the enlarged time, unless the indorsement be made under hand and seal. For the heir must be expressly named in a writing under hand and seal, otherwise he is not chargeable. Bac. Abr. Gwill. ed. 458. Heir, &c. (F). Vide ante, Vol. I. [42.] 584. But for that purpose, it is not requisite that the writing should be delivered as a deed, Gifford v. Manley, Cas. Temp. Talb. 109, and therefore a deed stamp is not necessary.

Unless the heir he named in a writing under hand and seal, he is not bound.

IN THE ARBITRATION,

Between { [obligor] and [obligee].

I do hereby give you notice to produce before [arbitrators] of, &c., to whom all matters in difference between the above named parties have been referred, to-morrow morning, at eleven o'clock, at the sign of the in , in the said county of , (or at the chambers of the said [arbitrator], situate in Holborn Court, in Gray's Inn aforesaid), all books, deeds, papers, writings, letters, vouchers, or other documents whatsoever, relating to the matters in difference between the said parties so referred as aforesaid, now in your custody, power, or possession, and especially a certain indenture, bearing date on or about the day of 18 , and made between, &c., whereby the said, &c., agreed to become co-partners in trade for the term of years. DATED the day of 18 .

[attorney]
Attorney for [obligee].

To Mr. [obligor], or Mr. [attorney], his attorney.

Warrant of Attorney to confess Judgment.

WARRANT OF ATTORNEY TO CONFESS JUDGMENT.

In some cases it may be prudent to take a warrant of attorney to confess judgment for a specific sum, as a further security for the performance of an award, in order that execution may be immediately taken out, either against the property or the person of him who neglects or refuses to perform the award. See the Form, ante, 345; and see the difference between the effect of an attachment and a judgment, ante, 609. The defeazance should contain the substance and effect of the bond or agreement, with a declaration that no execution shall issue until nonperformance of the award; and if it should be likely that the time appointed for performance of the award might be beyond a year, from the time of entering up judgment, a proviso dispensing with the necessity of reviving the judgment may be inserted, ut ante, Vol. I. 558.

In some cases it may be prudent to take a warrant of attorney to confess judgment for a specific sum, as a further security for performance of an award, with a defeazance.

So when the dispute is concerning the title to lands, and it is probable that the party in possession will be directed by the award to deliver the possession to the other party, it may be prudent to take a warrant of attorney to confess judgment in ejectment. For although a defendant be apprehended on an attachment for nonperformance of an award, by not yielding possession of lands in pursuance of the award, yet if he continues obstinate, an ejectment is necessary to recover the possession. Bayley v. Bayley, before Mr. Justice Park, Leicester spring assizes, 1823. Vide Doe ex dem. Greville v. Roper, Woodfall's Landlord and Tenant, 420, 3d ed. et infra. The trouble, expense, and delay of that proceeding would be prevented by means of a Warrant of Attorney to confess Judgment in Ejectment. For the Form, see Index to the Precedents, title Warrant of Attorney. The defeazance should be, that no execution shall be taken out, unless the arbitrator should, by his award, direct the defendant to yield the possession, and he should neglect so to do on or before the day appointed by the award; and if the circumstances of the case seem likely to require it, there may be inserted a proviso dispensing with the necessity of reviving the judgment.

So in some cases it may be prudent to take a warrant of attorney to confess judgment in ejectment; with a defeazance.

As the whole legal interest in a testator's personal estate vests in the executor, nothing passes to the legatee without the executor's assent.

(a) Although a testator bequeaths his personal estate, either specifically, or as part of the residue, yet the legal interest in the whole is vested in the executor by operation of law. However, in equity, the executor takes the personal estate in the nature of a trustee, in relation to such persons as have any claim on it. But nothing passes to the legatee, nor can a legatee take any thing bequeathed to him without the executor's assent, either express or implied. And therefore the legatee of a chattel real must aver in pleading that he entered into the land with the consent of the executor. Mathew v. Herle, Sty. 65. Co. Litt. 111, a. Lampet's case, 10 Co. 52, b. Bolle v. Nyseham, Dyer, 254, b. (1). Northey v. Northey, 2 Atk. 77. Day v. Trig, 1 P. Wms. 287. Before assent, the executor may make a good title, even against the legatee,

And in the mean time until assent, the right of disposition is in the executor, and he may make a good title even against the legatee, except the sale be fraudulent.

After assent the legal title to a term bequeathed vests in the legatee. Adams v. Peirce, 3 P. Wms. 12; and he may maintain an ejectment against the executor, Doe, dem. Saye and Sele v. Guy, 3 East, 120, or against after assent the legal title to a term vests in the legatee, and he may maintain an ejectment to recover the possession.

In transactions which took place at a remote period, the rule is, ex diuturnitate temporis omnia præsumuntur solenniter esse acta; Co. Litt. 6, b; 2 Inst. 118, 362; and therefore a title depending either on an assignment by an executor, or by a legatee without any express evidence of assent, is accepted without any difficulty. But in transactions of a recent date, the caution is generally adopted, of having the concurrence of the legatee and the executor in the assignment: of the legatee, to obtain his admission that there has been no previous assent to the bequest, and that the term still remains in the executor: and of the executor, to pass the term in that character. When the assignment is from the legatee alone, it is particularly important to have some evidence of the executor's assent to the legacy; and in general, the consent of the executor, or other personal representative, is required to be testified by his concurrence in the deed of assignment, and by a confirmation thereof. To obviate the necessity of such concurrence, it is, as a point of practice, advisable that every legatee of a term for years should have an express assignment from the executor, or at least an instrument declaring his assent to the legacy. 3 Pres. Abs. 145.

In remote transactions, a title through an executor or a legatee, without assent, is accepted.

But in recent transactions, the concurrence of both is generally required.

To render the executor's concurrence in a future sale unnecessary, such a deed as the above is advisable.

But assent is only a perfecting act, for it is the will of the testator which gives the interest to the legatee, and therefore the law does not require any exact form in which it is to be made. Hence any expression or act done by the executor, which shews his concurrence or agreement to the thing bequeathed, will amount to an assent. 4 Bac. Abr. Gwill. ed. 444. Legacies (L). Noel v. Robinson, 1 Vern. 94.

Any expression or act which shews the executor's concurrence or agreement, will amount to an assent.

(If the premises were assigned to the testator, recite the assignment, ut ante, 29; or if there have been several assignments, recite that by divers mesne assignments, &c., and ultimately by indenture, &c., the premises became vested in the testator, ut ante, 47.) AND WHEREAS

Recital of testator's death,

For the executor's assent being analogous to a tenant's attornment to the grant of a reversion, a small matter will be construed an assent; Wentw. Off. Ex. 226; Noell v. Robinson, 2 Ventr. 358; and whatever verbal agreement will amount to an attornment, may constitute an assent to a legacy. Shep. Touchs. 456; Godolph. Orphan's Legacy, 144; Wentw. Off. Ex. 224. Expressions to the following effect have been adjudged to amount to an assent; "God send you joy of your bequest."—"I intend you to have your legacy according to the devise." The executor's allowing the legatee of a term to receive the rents for a time only, or applying the rents for the devisee's maintenance during minority, when they were directed to be so applied by the will, has been considered an implied assent. Colbourne v. Mixstone, 1 Leon. 129. Paramour v. Yardley, Plowd. Com. 539. 1 Rop. Leg. 251, 2d ed.

The assent should always be in writing; but a deed is not requisite.

It is always advisable to have the assent in writing, on account of the difficulties necessarily attending the proof of a parol assent. But an assignment by the executors is not requisite; nor is it necessary that the assent should be made by deed. As an assent, a mere writing under hand will be as effectual as a writing under hand and seal, or as an indenture. And if it be made under hand and seal, and not delivered as a deed, a stamp does not appear to be necessary. Vide ante, 588, (d); 633. Supposing it be made under hand, or under hand and seal only, the form may be thus:

But where the stamp is not an object, it may perhaps be prudent to have an indenture, in order to prevent an objection to the title, although that objection would be groundless.

An assent by indenture may prevent frivolous objections.

testamentary, he cannot assert his right in court; but he may commence an action at law, Bacon's Law Tracts, 160. 1 Salk. 303. 4 Burn's Eccles. Law, 6th ed., 246; or file a bill in equity before probate; Humphreys v. Humphreys, 3 P. Wms. 351; and when produced, it shall have relation to the time of suing out the writ, or filing the bill; and on a bill in equity, it is sufficient, if the probate be obtained at any time before the hearing. 3 Bac. Abr. 53. Toll. Ex. 46. Com. Dig. Administration, (B. 9). And although an executor may assent to a legacy or assign a term before probate, yet the assent or assignment cannot be given in evidence as an assent or assignment by the executor, without shewing letters of probate of the will, in proof of his being the executor; for the courts of law or of equity cannot receive a will in evidence in respect of personal estate, until it has been sanctioned by the ecclesiastical judge; and the letters of probate and the commission of administration are the only legal proofs of such sanction. Thus, till letters of probate are obtained, there is a good assent or assignment for all the purposes of title, but there is not any legal evidence to prove the right to make such assent or assignment. See 1 Cru. Dig. 264, s. 32. As soon as the will has been sanctioned by the ecclesiastical judge, then the defect of evidence is supplied, and there is a good title in point of fact and of law, and the relevant and proper evidence to support that fact. The doctrine that an executor may assign or release before probate, has frequently led to the conclusion, that a title would be good without obtaining letters of probate; (see Dyer, 367.

a. (39.), and vendors have resisted the right of a purchaser to require the will should be proved. It seems clear, beyond all doubt, that in transactions of a recent date, the purchaser is entitled to require that the will should be proved; but there are many cases in which a purchaser may forego his strict right without any risk to his title. The will may be proved at any time, and even after the death of an executor; and whenever the will shall be proved, the assent or assignment will be admissible in evidence, and establish the deduction of the title from the executor. 3 Pres. Abs. 146.

In recent transactions, a purchaser is entitled to require the will to be proved.

The will may be proved after the executor's death.

Where there are two or more executors, the assent of any one or more of them is sufficient; Went. Off. Ex. 225; [Holkirk v. Holkirk, 4 Madd. 51.]; and in case of the death of either of them the power survives. Flanders v. Clarke, 3 Atk. 510. And if a legacy be given to one executor, he may assent to the bequest without the concurrence of his co-executors, and retain the legacy; and according to Perkins, even before probate or administration. Perk. s. 572. [And it has been lately decided, that an executor may assent to a bequest to himself. Townson v. Tickell, 3 B. & A. 40. Ed.]

The assent of one of several executors is sufficient; and one of them may assent to his own bequest.

If an executor once assent to a legacy, he can never afterwards retract; and notwithstanding a subsequent dissent, a specific legatee has a right to take the legacy. Went. Off. Ex. 227. Mead v. Lord Orrery, 3 Atk. 238. Nor can executors assent to legacies conditionally, except the condition be precedent to the assent; Wentw. Off. riod ; the delivery would be a good assent, and the direction of re-delivery, void. Colbourne v. Mixstone, 1 Leon. 130. 4 Co. 28. b. Com. Dig. Administration, (C. 8).

An assent to one having a partial interest in a bequest, is an assent to the others.

Where a legacy is limited to several persons in the nature of remainders by executory devise, the executor's assent to the first taker will be considered an assent to those who are to succeed ; and è converso, his assent to one of the subsequent takers will enure to the benefit of the persons who take prior interests in the property bequeathed ; and the reason is, because the several interests of the legatees constitute in the whole but one estate. If, therefore, a term for years were devised to A. for life or years, or for so long as A. continued unmarried, with remainder to B., and the executor assented to the interest of A., such assent would extend to B. so as to vest also his interest : in like manner if the assent had been given to B. it would have enured to A. B. is a sufficient assent to the bequest in remainder to C. D. ; and he may, upon that assent, maintain an ejectment to recover the term, after the executor's death. Young v. Holmes, 1 Str. 70.

A married executrix cannot assent to a bequest, without her husband's permission.

It seems to have been formerly matter of doubt, whether a married woman, appointed executrix, was competent to assent to a legacy without the privity and concurrence of her husband : the doubt, however, appears to have been removed by the decision in Russel's case, 5 Co.

27. b. according to which, as she is adjudged incapable of releasing a legacy without her husband, on account of the injury he might sustain; so her assent to a legacy without his permission must be nugatory and ineffectual; and of this opinion was the court in the case of Cookes v. Bellamy, Sid. 188. Vide ante, 510.

The 38 Geo. III. c. 87. s. 6, is in the following words: "Whereas inconveniences arise from granting probate to infants under the age of twenty-one;" be it enacted, "that where an infant is sole executor, administration with the will annexed, shall be granted to the guardian* of such infant, or to such other person as the spiritual court shall think fit, until such infant shall have attained the full age of twenty-one years, at which period, and not before, probate of the will shall be granted to him." Sec. 7. "And be it enacted, That the person to whom such administration shall be granted, shall have the same powers vested in him as an administrator now hath by virtue of an administration granted to him durante minore ætate of the next of kin." Therefore, as it was so held before the act, it seems also that now an administrator durante minore ætate, of an infant, cannot assent to a legacy unless there be sufficient assets to pay debts, &c., for he cannot do any thing to the prejudice of the infant; such administrator being merely appointed for the infant's benefit. Prince's case, 5 Co. 29, b. And as it is provided by the act that the administration is to continue until the infant attains twenty-one, it may be inferred that the infant executor cannot legally give his assent to a legacy before he arrives at maturity. 1 Rop. Leg. 252. See also Wentw. Off. Ex. 217. 3 Bac. Abr. Gwill. ed. 9. Executors, (A.) 7. In Prince's case, it was held, that if a female executor had married a husband of full age, the administration durante minore ætate would have ceased, because her husband might administer as executor. Prince's case, 5 Co. 29. b. But now, it seems, the administration would continue notwithstanding such a marriage.

Executors should not assent to a specific legacy until they are satisfied theyhave sufficient general assets to pay the debts. After assent, a legatee cannot retain, as against creditors; but a voluntary assent binds the executor, unless debts subsequently appear. After assent, and a bonâ fide sale, creditors are defeated.

Executors should not assent to any specific legacy, whether it be an estate for years or an estate pour autre vie limited to executors and administrators, until they are satisfied that there are sufficient general assets to pay the testator's debts, without compelling the specific legatees to abate in proportion among themselves. Duke of Devon v. Athins, 2 P. Wms. 383. Long v. Sharpe, 1 P. Wms. 403. Toll. Ex. 340. Shep. Touchs. 456. For although after assent to a specific bequest, the legatee must in a court of equity refund in favour of creditors where the assets are deficient, 2 Bla. Com. 513; Toller on Executors, 339, yet the executor himself, after his voluntary assent, can neither avoid the assent nor recover the legacy, unless a deficiency be afterwards created by debts, which did not appear until after his assent to the legacy. Davis v. Davis, 8 Vin. But if after a voluntary assent to a bequest of a term for years the legatee sell the term to a third person bonâ fide, the sale will defeat the claim of the creditors on it; for the legatee has a good title in law, and the purchaser shall not be prejudiced by the trust for the creditors. Chamberlain v. Chamberlain, 1 Chan. Executor's assent not necessary to a devise in fee, nor to any estate carved out of a fee by the will.

The doctrine of assent by an executor, does not extend to a devise of an estate in fee, nor to any estate carved out of a fee by the testator's will. For when a man, seised of an estate in fee, devises the same in fee, in tail, for life, or for years, the devisee may enter without the assent of the executor, because he has nothing to do with the real estate. ATTESTATION.

Attestation (a) of the Execution of a Deed in which there are Interlineations (b), Rasures, or Obliterations.

Of a deed, with rasures, &c.

(a) As to the attestation of deeds generally, vide ante, 503: as to the attestation of annuity deeds, ante, 320: and as to the attestation of an appointment by deed or will under a power, ante, 502, 506.

A deed may be avoided by erasure, or interlineation, by a party interested, after the execution.

(b) A deed may be avoided by erasure or interlineation by a party interested, after the execution. In Pigot's case, 11 Co. 27, a. it was resolved, that when any deed is altered in a part material, by the plaintiff himself, or by any stranger, without the privity of the obligee, be it by interlineation, addition, rasing, or by drawing of a pen through a line, or through the midst of any material word, that the deed thereby becomes void. As if a bond is to be made to the sheriff for appearance, &c. and in the bond the sheriff's name is omitted, and after the delivery thereof his name is interlined, either by the obligee or a stranger, without his privity, the deed is void. So if one makes a bond of 10*l.*, and after the sealing of it, another 10*l.* is added, which makes it 20*l.*, the deed is void. So if a bond is rased, by which the original word cannot be seen; or if it is drawn with a pen and ink through the word, although the original word is legible, yet the deed is void, and shall never make an issue, whether it was in any of these cases altered by the obligee himself, or by a stranger without his privity. So if the obligee himself alters the deed by any of the said ways, although it is in words not material, yet the deed is void. But if a stranger, without his privity, alters the deed by any of the said ways, in any part not material, it shall not avoid the deed. 2 Roll. Abr. 29. Vide Dyer, 261, b. (28.) Master v. Miller, 4 Durnf. and East, 320, 346. Shep. Touch. 68. But as to an alteration by a stranger in a material part of a deed, the modern doctrine seems more reasonable. Thus in Henfrey v. Bromley, 6 East, 309, a cause was referred to arbitration, and the umpire was to make his award under his hand, ready to be delivered by a certain day; on which day he accordingly awarded the defendant to pay to the plaintiff 57*l.* and signed the award; recommending to the parties, at the same time, by parol, to pay the costs of the reference in equal moieties: and he then put the written award into the hands of his own attorney, who sent notice immediately to the defendant that the award was executed and ready for delivery. But on the same day the umpire, having been informed that the defendant refused to pay his share of the costs of the reference, took the award before it was delivered by his attorney, and struck his pen through the 57*l.* (still, however, leaving it legible,) and inserted the sum of 66*l.*, in order to include the defendant's moiety of the costs; after which he re-signed the award with a dry pen, and such his signature was attested by witnesses, and notice of the award so altered was given to the parties. Lord Ellenborough, in delivering the judgment of the Court, said, this was not a mere mistake of the umpire in putting down one sum instead of another, as in casting up an account wrong, or the like; but it was a new and distinct act of judgment, formed by him after his authority was spent, and he was functus officio. He only intended originally to give a recommendation to the parties to divide the costs of the reference between them, and not to make it part of his award. Then, when he found that the defendant would not pay his share, he tried to resume his authority again, after he had laid it down; which he could not do. I consider the alteration of the award by the umpire, after his authority was at an end, the same as if it had been made by a stranger, by a mere spoliator. And I still read it with the eyes of the law as if it were an award for 57*l.*, such as it originally was. If the alteration had been made by a person who was interested in the award, I should have felt myself pressed by the objection, [on that part of Pigot's case, that if any deed is altered in a point material by any stranger, without the privity of the obligee, the deed thereby becomes void]; but I can no more consider this as avoiding the instrument, than if it had been obliterated or cancelled by accident.

An alteration, or cancellation, of a deed by a stranger, or by accident, does not invalidate it.

Rep. pl. 738; although 3 Cro. 626, was before adjudged contrary. But as the case is in 3 Cro. the obligation was altered only by consent of the obligors, in the absence of the obligee, and without his notice, though to his use. But here it is by the consent of all parties. S. C. Vent. 185, takes no notice of the consent of the parties, but that upon the delivery by A. and B. a space was left, in which the name of C. was put in, who also sealed and delivered it; and it is there held, that the bond remained the same as to A. and B., and they could not take advantage of it; and that it was the usual practice for sheriffs to make their bonds for appearance in this manner. A person born deaf and dumb is not thereby incapacitated from making a deed or will, or acknowledging a fine or recovery.

(a) A person born deaf and dumb, is not on that account incapacitated to execute a deed or will, or to acknowledge a fine or recovery, if he has sufficient understanding to give evidence of his assent, either by his own signs, or by signs with the assistance of an interpreter. See Ruston's case, 1 Leach's Crown Cases, 455. 1 Hale's Pleas of the Crown, 34, Wilson's ed. The learned Dr. Cowel says, one who is deaf and wholly deprived of his hearing, cannot give; the same is also to be understood of one who is dumb, and cannot speak. Yet (according to the opinion of some) they may consent by signs and nods; but, he adds, it is generally held, that he who is dumb cannot make a gift, because he cannot consent to it. Cowel's Inst. 107, ed. 1651. So Wakering, in his readings at Lincoln's Inn, June, 1626, says, a man deaf and dumb from his birth, is non compos; but not, if by accident. Dyer, 55, b. (13). But these opinions cannot be supported; for Perkins, whose authority on conveyancing subjects is very considerable, (see Hargr. n. Co. Litt. 29, a (5); 50, a. (2); 51, b. (3); 4 Reeves's Hist. English Law, 420, 4th ed.) says, if a man be born dumb, but can hear well, such a man at full age may make a gift by delivery of his hands, or by signs; and without delivery of his hands, by signs only. And a man who is born dumb and deaf may make a gift if he have understanding: but it is rare for such a person to have understanding; for a man, to have perfect understanding, ought to hear: yet many persons have understanding by their sight, &c. and therefore a man born dumb and blind may have understanding. Perk. 5, b. H. French ed. 1563. English ed. s. 25. See also Finch's Law, 103, Pickering's ed. And Lord Coke says, a man born deaf, dumb, or blind, so that he hath understanding and sound memory, albeit he express his intention by signs, may enfeoff, &c. Co. Litt. 42, b. Com. Dig. Capacity, (C). In Martha Elyot's case, Carter, 53, Lord Chief Justice Bridgman (the celebrated conveyancer), on a consultation, with Archer, Tirrell, and Brown, the other judges, said, a woman born deaf and dumb, comes before me to levy a fine. She and her three sisters have an house and land. An uncle hath maintained her, and taken great care of her, and he is to buy the house and land of them; and he agrees to maintain her if she will pass her land for security. As of her intelligence, the sisters say, she knows and understands the meaning of all this. I demanded what sign she would make for passing away her lands, and as it was interpreted to me, she put her hands that way where the lands lay, and spreads out her hands. It being a business of this nature, and for her own good, I thought fit to communicate it to you. It was so in one Hill's case. Hill was born deaf and dumb, and he was brought before Judge Warburton to levy a fine. Judge Warburton would do nothing till he had acquainted his brothers; he examined him, and found him intelligent, and so he took the fine. Justice Archer said, the rule in law is, that in fines and feoffments, &c. if there is a good intelligence, they may do such acts; they may be admitted to make contracts for their good: they are admitted upon examination to marry, and upon examination to receive the sacrament. They may make contracts for their persons—why not for their lands? I conceive it may be done; and your Lordship may take the fine. To this Tirrell and Brown agreed, and the fine was taken. There are two cases cited by Mr. Cruise, as being to the same effect; namely, "Griffin v. Ferrers, Barnes, 19. Keys v. Bull, id. 23." 5 Cru. Dig. 130, 2d ed. and which he thus cites, Cru. on Fines, 105, 2d ed. "Cases of Prac." But after the most diligent search, no such cases can be found.

Many deaf and dumb persons, but more especially those who have received the benefit of the excellent institution in the Kent Road, for instructing the deaf and dumb, can understand what they read or write as well as if they could hear and speak. Those persons who have been accustomed to the society of the deaf and dumb, and to an interchange of sentiments with them, cannot entertain any doubt of their capacity to be grantors. But in all cases of this kind, too much care and circumspection cannot be exercised; and therefore it might not be prudent for commissioners, under a dedimus potestatem, to take the acknowledgment of a deaf and dumb person to a fine or recovery, without noticing the fact in the caption, and also specially setting it forth in the affidavit of the acknowledgment. See the rule of Court. Hil. Term, 17 Geo. II. Wilson on Fines, 102, 4th ed. post, title FINES. [Vol. IV. 143.] In a case that might admit of some doubt as to the capacity, it would be prudent, where the deaf and dumb person is tenant in tail, or a married woman, for the acknowledgment of a fine or recovery to be taken by a judge; and where, in a doubtful case, a deed alone would be a sufficient conveyance, for the deed to be executed in the presence of a judge, in order to give it the authority which must be conferred by such a sanction.

A blind, deaf, and dumb person, cannot make a gift, lease, grant, or will; and ought not to be permitted to acknowledge a fine or recovery.

But persons who are born blind, deaf, and dumb, as they have always wanted the common inlets of understanding, are incapable of making either a gift, lease, grant, or a will. Co. Litt. 42, b. Perk. s. 25. Dyer, 56, a. (13). Com. Dig. Capacity. (D. 4.) 2 Bla. Com. 497. Nor ought such persons to be permitted to acknowledge a fine or recovery. Mansfield's case, 12 Co. 124. When a deed is executed by one who is incapable of writing his name, say,

"The mark ⋈ (b) and seal [L. S.] of A. B."

(a) It is not common in practice to vary the usual form of attestation on account of the person executing it being illiterate. But it deserves consideration, whether it might not be generally prudent to state in the attestation the fact of having read the deed.

It seems prudent to state in the attestation, that the deed has been read to an illiterate party.

For a necessary circumstance to a deed is, that it be read if any of the parties require it; if not, the deed will be void as to the party requiring it to be read. If a person can, he should read it himself; and if he be blind or illiterate, some other should read it for him. If it be read falsely, it will be void, at least for so much as was misread; unless it be agreed, by collusion, that the deed be read falsely, on purpose to make it void; for in such a case it will bind the fraudulent party. Manser's case, 2 Co. 3. Thoroughgood's case, 2 Co. 9, b. Shulter's case, 12 Co. 90. Anon. Skin. 159. Bennet v. Vade, 2 Atk. 327. 4 Cru. (b) In Harrison v. Harrison, 8 Ves. 185, and in Addy v. Grix, 8 Ves. 504, it was determined, that an attestation of a devise, where one of the witnesses signed by a mark, was good within the statute of frauds, which requires the witnesses to wills of freehold lands to attest and subscribe the will. The statute requires the testator to sign, and Attestation of a devise by a mark is good, within the statute of frauds, or the execution of a will or deed by a mark.

EXECUTION OF A DEED BY A MARK.

therefore the principle of these determinations is applicable a fortiori to the signature of the testator himself, since the word "subscribe" seems much more forcibly to point to the actual hand-writing, than "sign," which, without any strain upon its literal sense, though, perhaps, not without some sacrifice of its popular and usual acceptation, might be deemed to be satisfied by any symbol of the testator's consent and ratification. Roberts on Frauds, 387. The same observation is equally applicable to conveyances under the statute of frauds, which are required to be signed by the parties making the same. Vide ante, 503. Indeed, if such a construction should not prevail, the statute would have the extraordinary effect of incapacitating persons, who, through illness or illiteracy, could not write, from devising their lands, or conveying them by deed. In country practice, nothing is more common than for persons to sign their deeds and wills by a mark. And many persons may be astonished that it should ever have admitted of "a considerable doubt with the profession, whether, if a testator or witness could not write his name, he might satisfy the statute by making his mark." See Lemaine v. Stanley, 1 Freem. 538. Hudson's case, Skin. 79. Saunderson v. Jackson, 2 Bos. and Pull. 239. [And see Hearne v. Wigginton, 6 Madd. 119.]

It is better to have witnesses who can write.

But it is not prudent to have witnesses who cannot write, on account of the difficulty of making proof of the attestation after their death.

(b) A purchaser has a right to require the vendor himself to surrender the estate, if copyhold, and to execute the conveyance, if freehold; and he cannot be compelled to accept either a surrender, or conveyance under a power of attorney, unless an actual necessity appears for it. Mitchell v. Neale, 2 Ves. sen. 670. Richards v. Barton, 1 Esp. Ca. 268; and see ibid, 115; for it tends to multiply his proofs, and he may be put under difficulties by these means: the letter of attorney may be lost, and the party is obliged to prove the execution of it. See Johnson v. Mason, 1 Esp. Ca. 89. A letter of attorney may be revoked the next moment; that revocation may be notified to the attorney without the purchaser's knowledge, and then the conveyance would be void; and the purchaser's only remedy would be a suit in equity. Per Lord Hardwicke, in Mitchell v. Neale, 2 Ves. sen. 681. [And see also Noel v. Weston, 6 Madd. 50.] As to the revocation of a power of attorney, vide ante, 303, (n). [And Vol. V. 138.] A purchaser cannot be obliged to accept a conveyance by attorney.

Besides, the vendor may be dead at the time the power is exercised, and in that case the execution would be void, as a power of this nature expires by the death of the principal. Shipman v. Thompson, Wynne v. Thomas, Willes, 105, 565. Wallace v. Cooke, 5 Esp. claration of trust, that he will stand possessed of the purchase money in trust for the purchaser, until it either appear by satisfactory evidence that the vendor was alive at the time of the execution of the deed, or if he shall be dead, until the estate is duly conveyed to the purchaser.

A vendor is not compellable to appoint an attorney to convey an estate, under a covenant to do it on request.

As a purchaser cannot be required to take a conveyance executed by attorney, so, on the other hand, if a vendor only covenant to surrender or convey lands to a purchaser upon request, he is not compellable to appoint an attorney for that purpose. Symms v. Lady Smith, Cro. Car. 299. Godb. 445. Sug. Vend. 369, 6th. ed. [384, 7th ed.]

A deed executed by an attorney, is the deed of the principal; but the validity of the deed depends on the power of attorney.

In the case of a deed creating a power, the seisin or interest to serve the estates is actually raised by the deed itself, and the estates limited under the power accordingly derive their essence from that seisin; but in the case of a common letter of attorney, no seisin is created, nor does the estate pass by or by virtue of the power, which merely authorises the attorney to convey the estate in the name of the principal. The conveyance is, in fact, the deed of the principal, and it is considered as executed by him. It is therefore necessary, that the deed should be an operative, independent, and substantive conveyance. If it be a feoffment, it must be accompanied with livery of seisin; if it be a bargain and sale, it must be enrolled; and if it be a release, it must be grounded on a bargain and sale for a year under the statute, or a lease at common law, with actual entry. And the land may consequently be conveyed to one to uses, and the statute will execute the uses. The estates created will depend simply on the instrument in which they are contained, although the deed itself depends for its validity as a conveyance, upon the letter of attorney, by virtue of which it was executed; for the power must be produced before the deed can be read in a court of justice. Johnson v. Mason, 1 Esp. Rep. 89. Sug. Pow. 204, 3d ed. See also 4 Bac. Abr. Gwill. ed. 140. Leases. (I.) 10.

[The execution of a power of attorney, executed abroad, can only be verified in a court of law by the affidavit of the subscribing witness; the certificate of a notary public, therefore, and the attestation of the vice consul of the place to the notary's handwriting, which was also sworn to, is insufficient proof of the due execution of the instrument. Ex parte Church, 1 Dow. & Ry. 324. frauds which occur in practice, shews the necessity of strictly examining the original power of attorney.

A fraudulent instance of an attempt to cure a defect in a title by making a power of attorney after the attorney was dead.

An attorney sold under an authority which conferred a power of leasing, not a power of sale. Several years elapsed before the defect was discovered, and many intermediate conveyances from purchaser to purchaser had taken place. At last the defect was discovered. To give a colour to the title, a formal letter of attorney was prepared to the same person, though he had paid the debt of nature. It was dated prior to the conveyance which the attorney had executed, as if the date would give relation to the authority, so as to effectuate the conveyance already made. But the inaccuracy of the transaction was easily detected; first, by the stamp to the letter of attorney; and secondly, by the water-mark on the paper, showing the year of its manufacture; and each of these circumstances afforded the means of impeaching the internal evidence of the deed. It is by attempts of this nature that transactions, in which similar fraud has not been practised, are scrutinized with a severity which is the only safeguard against fraud. Mr. Preston adds, were it not disgusting to detail such transactions, another fraud actually committed, and which at this moment is vexatious to a large body of purchasers residing in a village near the metropolis, might be stated as a defence, were any defence necessary, for the strict scrutiny with which titles are investigated. 1 Pres. A married woman cannot execute a deed by attorney.

(a) A married woman cannot execute a deed by letter of attorney. In short, her deed is not regularly a deed. The instrument on which this attestation of her execution by attorney was made, was properly the deed of her husband, it being a release of a legacy to which he was entitled in her right. For a woman, on her marriage, virtually devolves all authority on her husband. Therefore, after her marriage, although she herself may do any act relating to her estate, which the law allows a married woman to do, yet she cannot constitute an attorney to do it, unless she particularly reserved a power for that purpose before her marriage.

A lease, sealed by husband and wife, and delivered by an attorney, is the lease of the husband only.

If a man declares on a joint lease by baron and feme, and gives in evidence a joint lease, delivered under a power of attorney, this will not maintain the declaration: for the attorney's entry and delivery of the lease by virtue of a warrant of attorney, are wholly void. Pres. MSS. OF WILLS.

ATTORNMENT.

Attornment was necessary to a grant at common law.

An attornment at the common law was an agreement of the tenant to the grant of the seignory, or of a rent; or of the donee in tail, or tenant for life, or years, to a grant of a reversion or of a remainder made to another. Co. Litt. 309. a. Shep. Touchs. 253. 2 Bla. Com. 288. And this yielding of consent was necessary to the perfection of the grant. However, the necessity of attornment was in some measure avoided by the statute of uses; as, by that statute, the possession was immediately executed to the use; Birch v. Wright, 1 Durnf. & East, 384: (as to rents, vide ante, Vol. I. 603.) and by the statute of wills, by which the legal estate is immediately vested in the devisee.

The necessity and efficacy of attornments have been almost totally taken away.

Yet attornment continued after this to be necessary in many cases. But both the necessity and efficacy of attornments have been almost totally taken away by the statutes 4 & 5 Anne, c. 16, s. 9 & 10, and 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 11. Till the passing of these statutes the doctrine of attornment was one of the most copious and abstruse points of the law. Butl. n. Co. Litt. 309. a. (1). ad finem. But by the former of those statutes it was enacted, "that all grants or conveyances by fine or otherwise, of any manors, or rents, or of the reversion or remainder of any messuages or lands, shall be good and effectual to all intents and purposes, without any attornment of the tenants of any such manors, or of the land out of which such rent shall be issuing, or of the particular tenants upon whose particular estates any such reversions or remainders shall be expectant or depending, as if their attornment had been had and made: provided, that no such tenant shall be prejudiced or damaged by payment of any rent to any such grantor, or conusor, or by breach of any condition for non-payment of rent, before notice shall be given to him of such grant by the conusee or grantee." Ante, Vol. I. 602—3. By the latter statute it was enacted, "that the attornments of tenants to strangers claiming title to the estate of their landlords, shall be absolutely null and void to all intents and purposes whatsoever, and that the possession of their respective landlord or landlords, lessor or lessors, shall not be deemed or construed to be in anywise changed, altered, or affected by any such attornment or attornments: provided, that nothing herein contained shall extend to vacate, or affect any attornment made pursuant to, and in consequence of some judgment at law, or decree, or order of a court of equity, or made with the privity and consent of the landlord or landlords, lessor or lessors, or to any mortgagee, after the mortgage is become forfeited." The first statute having made attornment unnecessary, and the other having made it inoperative as against the landlord, when wrongfully made, it is now held not to be necessary either to aver it in a declaration in covenant, or plead it in an avowry or other pleading whatever, in which the grantee makes title to the reversion. Birch v. Wright, 1 Durnf. and East, 386. Moss v. Gallimore, Doug. 283. Wms. n. 1 Saund. 234. a. (4). 241. b. 1 Chitty on Pleading, 11, 3d ed. But still attornment, when wrongfully made, has an extensive operation. Thus, where a tenant holds the premises of the lessor of the plaintiff, it is sometimes necessary to give him notice to quit possession, in order to maintain an ejectment; yet if the tenant has attorned to some other person, or done some other act disclaiming to hold as tenant, no notice is necessary. Doe ex dem. Foster v. Williams, Cowp. 622. Throgmorton v. Whelpdale, B. R. Hil. 9 Geo. III. Bull. N. P. 96. Runnington on Ejectment, 92, 114, edit. 1795. So where a termor attempted to gain the fee by disseisin, and for that purpose assigned the term to a trustee with a view to protect against forfeiture, and afterwards a feoffment was made and then the trustee of the term executed a declaration, that he would stand possessed of the lands during the term, in trust to attend the inheritance according to the uses created by the feoffment; the Court of King's Bench, in Hilary term 1817, on a motion for a new trial, treated the term as forfeited. There was abundance of principle, and even of decision to lead to that conclusion:—in the first place, it is a fraud on the part of the termor, to attempt to gain the freehold. Secondly, the admission by the assignee of a title in the feoffee to the reversion, is an attornment to a stranger; and by the rules of the common law, attornment by a termor to a stranger is an abandonment of the tenancy, and a destruction of the privity between the termor and the reversioner, and a forfeiture of the term. 2 Pres. Conv. note at the end of Preface, 2d ed. Saunders v. Lord Annesly, 2 Scho. and Lef. 73. Ibid, 434. Hovendon v. Lord Annesly, 2 Scho. and Lef. 625. Gilb. Uses, 89. See 2 Pres. Watk. Conv. 216. 2 Sand. Uses, 14, 16, 22, 3d ed. Sug. Vend. 253, 5th ed. 262, 6th ed. Cholmondeley v. Clinton, 2 Meriv. 238. Kelly v. Power, 2 Ball and Bea. 245. [And see Vol. IV. 118.]

But attornment, when wrongfully made, is a forfeiture.

The reason for attornment, so far as it proceeded on notice to the tenant, still exists. For a mortgagee is not entitled to the rents under a lease made prior to the mortgage, until he has given notice of the mortgage to the tenant, and required payment of the rents to himself; after which notice the mortgagee will be entitled to all the unpaid rents in the tenant's hands, and for which the mortgagee may either maintain an action, or distrain, without bringing an ejectment. Moss v. Gallimore, Dougl. 282. The same doctrine extends to a purchaser of the reversion; Lumley v. Hodgson, 16 East, 99; or to a person having the legal reversion, in trust for securing an annuity. Birch v. Wright, 1 Durnf. and East, 385; ante, Vol. I. 566, 615; Vol. II. 273, 309 (b), 425 (k). Although it is not strictly necessary, yet in order to afford evidence of the tenant's admission of the notice, he sometimes signs an acknowledgment of attornment, and sometimes he attorns without any notice. A mortgagee may, without giving notice to quit, recover in ejectment against a tenant who claims under a lease from the mortgagor granted after the mortgage, without the privity of the mortgagee. Keech v. Hall, 1 Dougl. 21. But if in such a case the mortgagee does not wish to disturb the possession of the lessee, sometimes the lessee attorns to the mortgagee at the rent reserved by the lease, in order to create a tenancy with the mortgagee, and to enable him to distrain for the rent. For without attornment it seems that in such a case the mortgagee could not distrain. So where the mortgagor himself is in possession, he sometimes attorns and becomes tenant to the mortgagee at a rent equal to the amount of the interest, and sometimes with an addition sufficient to cover the expense of insuring the buildings. For without attornment, or some contract equal to an attornment, at a specific rent, the mortgagor is not such a tenant to the mortgagee that he can distrain; the contract between them being to pay interest, and not to pay rent. And it is decided, that a mortgagor cannot, without an express contract, be charged with the payment of rent to the mortgagee, nor with a liability to rent in an action for use and occupation. 2 Pres. Conv. 303. But actual attornment is seldom heard of in practice, except to a receiver (whose appointment by the court is usually accompanied by an order for the attornment of the tenants); or in the case of a recovery in ejectment, where the tenants frequently attorn to the lessor of the plaintiff, in order to save the expense of the sheriff's poundage, and officers' fees on executing a writ of possession. and every of them (so far as respects the messuage or messuages, farm, lands, and tenements, mentioned opposite to their respective names in the schedule to these presents, and now in the occupation of himself, or his undertenants, at the yearly rent therein mentioned), hath attorned, and become tenants and tenant; And by these presents do, and each and every of them doth, attorn and become tenants and tenant to the said [three executors], for and in respect of the same several messuages, farms, lands and premises, and every of them (being the messuages, farms, lands, and premises, with the exception of the said manor comprised in the before in part recited indenture): And in testimony of such attornment, they the said several tenants, parties hereto, have paid to the said [three executors], the sum of sixpence each. And each and every of them the said several persons parties hereto, doth hereby, for himself, his heirs, executors, and administrators, and so far only as respects his own acts, tenancy, and rent, covenant, promise, and agree with and to the said [three executors], their executors, administrators, and assigns, that they the said several persons, parties hereto, and their respective executors and administrators, shall and will henceforth severally pay, or cause to be paid, their respective rents due and payable, and to become due and payable, for their respective farms and tenements set forth in the said schedule, to the said [three executors], their executors, administrators, or assigns: And shall and will, on the several expirations of their respective leases, deliver up the possession of the premises by them held respectively to the said [three executors], their executors, administrators, or assigns: And shall not, nor will pay such rents, or deliver possession of the same farms, or any of them, to any other person or persons, unless compelled by the judgment, order, or decree of some court of law or equity, to pay such rents, or deliver up the possession of the same premises to any other person or persons. In witness whereof the said several persons have hereunto set their hands and seals, the day of , in the year of our Lord 18 (a).

The reason for attornment, so far as it proceeded on notice to the tenant, still exists.

Payment in testimony of attornment.

Covenant by tenants severally, to pay rents to executors; and to deliver possession to the executors on the expiration of the several leases;

And not to pay rents or deliver possession to any other persons, unless compelled so to do by a court of law or equity.

Testimonium.

(a) The learned gentleman who drew the above appointment, said, "The particulars of the estate, and the names of the tenants, should be added to the attornment, by way of schedule. There is no objection to the attornment by all the tenants being comprised in one instrument, since it is but one estate, and recovered in the same action."

To Mr. N. T. Mr. C. L., &c. (a)

By including all the tenants in one notice, trouble and expense are saved.

(a) The person who serves a duplicate of the above notice on each of the tenants, should make a memorandum on another duplicate, of the time of service. As they are all included in one notice, it will only be requisite to retain one duplicate in order to prove the service. But if separate notices were made for each of the tenants, then to prove the service, the trouble and expense of making duplicates of each notice would be incurred.
